

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty,

The humble Address of the Nobility, Gentry, Clergy, and Freeholders of the County of Oxford.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WITH grateful Hearts, we, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal Subjects of the County of Oxford, approach your Throne to testify the Satisfaction that we feel from your Royal Proclamation. The paternal Care and Regard for your People, which you have shewn, by warning them of the Danger to which they are exposed, and by calling upon them to exert themselves to avert it, deserves and has our warmest Thanks. It is with Concern that we find Emissaries endeavouring to raise Uneasiness and Discontent in the Nation, by propagating wild, visionary and pernicious Doctrines, subversive of all Order and Government, and tending to produce Anarchy, Confusion and Ruin to this Country. It gives us still further Concern to find that Correspondences have been entered into with sundry Persons in Foreign Parts, endeavouring to raise groundless Jealousies and Discontents in the Minds of your faithful and loving Subjects, thereby undermining the British Constitution, established at the Glorious Revolution, which hath stood the Admiration and Envy of all the World, and under which the People of Great Britain enjoy true Liberty and perfect Security to their Persons and Property. And we beg Leave to assure your Majesty, that we will use our utmost Endeavours to discover and counteract those who, by their insidious Practices, would sap the Foundation and effect the Destruction of that glorious Constitution, which we shall hope to preserve inviolate, and to deliver down to Posterity unimpaired, considering it as a Duty we owe to ourselves, our Families, our King and Country.

Signed, at the Request of the Nobility, Gentry, Clergy, and Freeholders of the County of Oxford, at a Public Meeting of the said County, at Oxford, the 28th Day of June, 1792,
Thomas Willats, Sheriff, Oxon.

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

WE, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Nobility, Gentry, Clergy, Freeholders and other Inhabitants of the County of Berks, most humbly beg Leave to express to your Majesty our Veneration for and Attachment to our present happy Constitution, and at the same Time to declare our utter Abhorrence of all those Persons, who, by their Writings, or by their Dispersion of such Writings, endeavour to disseminate Principles, incompatible with all Civil Government, and disturb the Public Mind by holding up the vain and delusive Hopes of improving a Constitution founded by the Wisdom of our Ancestors, which Experience has taught us to reverence as the most perfect of all Political Institutions. We have just Reason to believe that these Endeavours have had little or no Success, but the Calamities which, from Time to Time, have arisen from similar Machinations, evince the Necessity of timely Attention.

We therefore most humbly return our warmest Thanks to your Majesty for issuing your late reasonable Proclamation, and to the utmost of our Power we will vigilantly execute, in our respective Stations, the Measures it recommends, being firmly persuaded that the most effectual Way in which we can serve our Country is by preserving, not by altering our present excellent Constitution.

By the unanimous Order of a numerous Meeting of the County, held at the Town Hall in Reading, the 30th Day of June, 1792.

John Blagrave, Sheriff.

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

WE, the Nobility, Gentry, Clergy, Freeholders and other Inhabitants of the County of Kent, humbly beg Leave to approach your Majesty with our most grateful Thanks for that general Care and Attention to the Happiness and Interest of your People, which your Majesty has so unremittingly evinced. Truly sensible of the many Blessings we enjoy under your Majesty's mild and happy Government, and of the Anarchy and Confusion inevitably resulting from inflammatory and seditious Publications, tending to create Distrust and Dissatisfaction in the Minds of your faithful Subjects, we particularly express our Gratitude for your Majesty's late gracious Proclamation, so well calculated to avert those Evils: And we beg Leave also to assure your Majesty, that our most zealous Efforts shall be exerted in promoting every Measure calculated to support and maintain that Constitution, by which our Civil and Religious Liberties are so effectually secured. We have only to add our Prayers for the Continuance of your Majesty's Life and Health, as a Blessing to a free, loyal and affectionate People.

Signed this 2d Day of July, 1792, by the unanimous Order of the Meeting.

Henry Streetfield, Sheriff.

Unto the KING's Most Excellent Majesty,

The humble Address of the Nobility, Freeholders, Justices of Peace, Commissioners of Supply, and other Heritors of the County of Aberdeen.

WE, your Majesty's most dutiful Subjects, the Nobility, Freeholders, Justices of Peace, Commissioners of Supply and Heritors of the County of Aberdeen, presume, at this Time, to approach the Throne with our sincere Professions of Loyalty and Attachment to your Majesty's Person and Family, and of Gratitude for the recent Instance of your attentive Solicitude for the Welfare of your People, in the Proclamation issued against seditious Writings, and for preserving the good Order and Tranquillity of the Kingdom.

Sensible of the many and inestimable Advantages we have derived and now enjoy from the excellent System of Government among us, we cannot but regard, with Detestation, every Attempt which may be made to diminish, in the Minds of any of your Majesty's Subjects, that Reverence for the Constitution, and those Principles of Submission to the Laws, which we consider as essential to the Continuance of our National Prosperity, and our private Happiness; we can, therefore, with Truth assure your Majesty, that we feel it no less our Inclination than our Duty
