

Conviction of it's Excellency, founded on a long Experience of it's happy Effects. We see that under it the British Nation has risen to a Degree of Prosperity and Splendour, which no Country, without the benignant Influence of a good Government, could ever have attained. Having learned to estimate it's Value, we cannot but be anxious for it's Preservation. We shall therefore co-operate, as far as in us lies, with your Majesty's gracious Views, by guarding aguin't and counteracting every Attempt to disturb that social Order, without which Liberty cannot subsist.

May your Majesty long continue to enjoy the Satisfaction, which results to a good King, from the increasing Prosperity of an united, free and loyal People.

Signed by our Prefes in our Name, and by our Appointment, at Dornock, this 14th Day of August, 1792 Years.

John Gordon, P.
