Copenhagen, June 9.

On the 6th Instant, between Three and Four o'Clock in the Afternoon, a dreadful Fire broke out in the Dock-Yard of this City, which soon communicated across the Canal to the Houses in the Town, and shortly after to one of the principal Churches. The Fire, driven with Violence from these different Places, continued to rage with great Fury for Forty-eight Hours, but was at length stopped, in consequence of the Houses immediately in the Line of it's Direction having been pulled down. It is computed that One-fourth Part of the City has been consumed by this Calamity, rendered the more dreadful from the Circumstance of the Quarter which has been burned having been the most populous. Every possible Attention has been shewn, on the Part of the Government, for the Relief of the Sufferers; and the Number of Lives lost is supposed not to be considerable. The Royal Family was in the Country; the Prince Royal, however, immediately came to Town, and passed the whole Night in the Streets, giving Orders, and encouraging the Firemen and others who were employed, and even affording his personal Assistance, at the imminent Hazard of his Life.
