

Orleans, Sept. 23. The Queen of Spain, who parted from Fontainbleau the 20th instant, accompanied with the Duke and Duteneſs of Orleans, arrived here the 21 in the afternoon, and was received by the Magiſtrates in their Robes and by the Citizens in Arms, which conſiſted of 100 Companies, and formed four Battalions. All the Clergy Secular and Regular were likewise in their habits, and nothing omitted which might teſtifie the reſpects of this City. Yeſterday her Majeſty repoſed herſelf here, and received the Compliments of all the Perſons of Quality, of this neighbourhood. And this morning ſhe continued her journey, accompanied by her Father the Duke of Orleans; and the Dutcheſs of Orleans who took her leave of her Majeſty here, returning to Paris.

Paris, Sept. 27. This day the Queen of Spain takes her leave of the Duke of Orleans her Father, at Amboiſe, and ſo continues her journey for Spain. It is now again the general diſcourſe that the Captains of the Kings Ships have orders to make all Ships, they meet, to ſtrike, but the ſame having been formerly reported, and we having not yet heard that any ſuch orders have been put in execution, makes us doubt the truth of what is now ſaid. We hear nothing new from Germany ſince the taking the Caſtles of Biſch and Homburg, the only places which remained in the hands of the Duke of Lorraine. It is ſaid that the Mareſchal d'Humiers, who commands the Kings Forces in thoſe parts has orders to aſſiſt the Biſhop of Strasburg in the recovery of thoſe rights which, it's pretended, the City of Strasburg has uſurped upon him, but the truth of it time muſt diſcover.

Paris, Sept. 30. Two days ſince Count Morſtein, Ambaſſador Extraordinary from the Crown of Poland, had a private Audience of the King, in which he preſſed to know the Kings mind, as to the aſſiſtance that Crown is to expect from him in the War it is going to engage in againſt the Turks. On Thursday the Dutcheſs of Olnaburg, who has been here ſome weeks, parted from hence on her return for Germany. The Princeſs of Hanover is coming hither. Here are arrived Deputies from the City of Strasburg, and they have had Audience of the King; their buſineſs is to divert his Majeſty from taking any reſolution in favor of the Biſhop of Strasburg, to their prejudice; but what ſucceſs they will have time muſt ſhew. The 11 inſtant the Marquis de la Porte, ſailed from Thoulon with five Men-of War, being appointed to attend the Sieur de Guillaques, the Kings Ambaſſador to the Grand Signior.
