

Our Loss is very small; that of the Enemy must have been more considerable. An Artillery Man was wounded by the Side of the Duke d'Angoulême. No Officers are known as yet to have been wounded, except Mr. de Vassé, Adjutant to the Duke d'Angoulême, and the Engineer de Castré.

Head-Quarters, Haag, 2d December 1800.

MY LORD,

THE March of General Kienmayer towards the Iser, and the Direction which the whole Army had first taken towards Landshut, having drawn a considerable Part of General Moreau's Force towards Aerding, the Heights between Ampfing and Haag had been occupied by one single Division under General Ney.

In the Course of last Night, however, General Moreau had reinforced his Position with Two more Divisions, and had taken the Command of the Whole himself.

Yesterday at Day-break the Heights were attacked. After an obstinate Resistance on the Part of the Enemy, they were carried in Succession as far as the Hill on the Side of Ramfau, where the Troops were obliged to halt, from excessive Fatigue, about Six in the Evening.

In the Night General Moreau abandoned this Place, and retired to his old Position at Hohenlinden and Aerding.

The whole Ground from Ampfing to Ramfau was particularly favorable to the Enemy, and consisted in Heights covered with Thick Woods, and intersected by deep marshy Vallies, where the Austrian Cavalry could not possibly act.

The Austrians took Eight Hundred Prisoners and Two Pieces of Cannon—the Cannon were taken with Four others, by the Hussars of Vecsey, who distinguished themselves very much during the whole of the Affair, throwing themselves into the Woods, in Places where it was thought impossible for Cavalry to have penetrated. The other Four Pieces of Cannon were retaken by a Charge of the Enemy's Grenadiers, there not having been Time to send a sufficient Force to support the Hussars.

The Loss of the Austrians is computed to be near Fifteen Hundred Men in killed, wounded, and Prisoners. General Moreau is said by the Prisoners to have received a Musket Ball through his Cloak.

The Archduke was on Horseback Twelve Hours, and slept in a Hovel on the Heights.

I have the Honor to be, &c.

W. WICKHAM

Right Honorable Lord Grenville.
