Whereas it hath been humbly represented to the King, that Edward Blend Corney, of Broad-Street, London, Merchant, on the Twenty-first Day of July last, packed up Six Trunks of Printed Goods, and forwarded them to the Custom-House Quay, to be shipped on board the Cherry, for Gibraltar; that the said Trunks were accordingly put on board the said Ship, apparently in good Order and Condition, but when they were opened out at Gibraltar, their Place of ultimate Destination, instead of containing the Goods first packed therein, the said Trunks were filled with Mats, Straw, and Rubbish: And whereas it hath also been further humbly represented to the King, that Messrs. John Mair, Son, Thomas, and Co. of Friday-Street, Cheap-side, London, Merchants, on the Fourth of August last, packed up Two Trunks of Printed Cottons, and forwarded them to the Custom-House Quay to be shipped on board the Galea for Boston; that the said Trunks were accordingly put on board the said Ship in apparent good Order and Condition, but when they were opened out at Boston, the Port of their Destination, instead of containing the said Printed Cottons therein first packed, the said Two Trunks were filled with Sacks, some Stones, an old Wrapper, and a Broomstick: And whereas it hath been also further humbly represented to the King, that Archibald McKean, of South Street, Finsbury-Square, London, Merchant, on the Twenty-second Day of January last, packed up Five Trunks of Pullicat Handkerchiefs and Cotton Hosiery, and forwarded them to the Custom-House Quay to be shipped on board the Robert for Jamaica; that the said Five Trunks were regularly put on board the said Ship in apparent good Order, but when they were opened out at Jamaica, the whole Contents were taken out, and in their Place were put several coarse Sacks: And whereas it hath also been further humbly represented to the King, that Messrs. Aguilar, Dias, and Son, of Broad Street, London, Merchants, on the First Day of September last, packed up Four Trunks, containing Stripped Muslins, Cambrics, Auslin Handkerchiefs, and fine dry Articles of Haberdashery, and forwarded them to be shipped from the Custom-House Quay, or board the Matthew, for Jamaica; that the said Trunks were duly put on board the said Ship, in apparent good Condition, but when they were opened out at Jamaica, nearly the whole Contents were taken out, and the Trunks were filled up with Rubbish;
