Copy of a Letter from Captain Farquhar, late Commander of His Majesty's Bomb Vessel the Acheron, to William Marsden, Esq; dated in Malaga Prison, the 12th of February 1805.

SIR,

YOU will be pleased to lay before my Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty the enclosed Copy of an Account transmitted to Lord Nelson, of the Capture and Destruction of His Majesty's Sloop Arrow, Captain Vincent, and Acheron Bomb, under my Command, acquainting their Lordships that, from the uncertain State I am in with respect to the Safety of Captain Vincent, or to what Port he may have been carried, I have thought it my Duty not to let an Opportunity slip of giving his Lordship the earliest Information, as well as the Commanding Officer at Gibraltar, that immediate Assistance and Protection might be afforded to the Convoy.

I have the Honor to be, &c.

ART. FARQUHAR.

Proceedings of His Majesty's Bomb Vessel

My Lord, Acheron, Sunday Feb. 3, 1805.

AT Daylight Two strange Sail were seen from the Mast-Head, bearing about E. S. E. of us; at Eight A. M. they had considerably neared us; we were at this Time in the Rear of the Convoy. About half-past Ten, the Arrow asked, per Telegraph, my Opinion of Ships to the Eastward; I immediately wore Ship and stood towards them; observed the headmost Ship to shorten Sail, by hauling down the Studding Sails; made Signal 642 to the Arrow, then hoisted the private Signal, and continued upon a Wind standing to them; at Quarter past Eleven made the Signal for their being suspicious (they not having answered the private Signal). I was now so near as to be able to observe they were Frigates, and at half-past Eleven to discover that they had their spare Anchors in their Main Chains, which immediately led me to suppose that they were French. At Fifty Minutes past Eleven wore Ship, and made all Sail towards the Arrow, who had by this Time quitted her Tow, and made Signal for Convoy to continue the same Course, although Ships of War acted otherwise. At half-past Twelve P. M. (Monday per Log) hoisted our Colours and fired a Gun, which they paid no Attention to. Signals 360 and 322 were then made to the Arrow, who immediately made Signal to the Convoy for an Enemy, and to make all possible Sail to the appointed Rendezvous, which was repeated. The Frigates had by this Time made all possible Sail in Chase of us, but the Wind being light and variable from the Eastward we rather gained upon them. At half-past Four P. M., having joined the Arrow, I went on board: Captain Vincent appeared satisfied they were Enemy's Ships; they were now about Five Miles from us; it was resolved to make Sail, and keep in the Rear of the Convoy, for their Protection. It was calm until Eleven P. M., when a Breeze sprung up from the W. S. W., wore Ship, and stood towards the Arrow. At Twelve she hailed, and desired we would keep in her Wake in close Order. At Two A. M. saw Two Sail upon the Lee Bow; called the Hands to Quarters. At half past came up with them, and discovered they were Two of the Convoy. At a Quarter past Four A. M. saw Two other Ships standing to us on the opposite Tack. At Forty-five Minutes past Four the Arrow hailed the headmost Ship, then passing under her Lee; being in close Order she soon came abreast of the Acheron. I saw she was a large Frigate prepared to engage. I hailed her, asking what Ship is that? she answered, What Ship are you? and immediately gave us her Broadside of Round and Grape, which did us very considerable Damage in Rigging and Sails, besides carrying away the Slings of the Main Yard, and Main-top-gallant Yard in the Slings, but did not kill or wound any one; we returned her Fire, then hove about and gave her the Guns from the other Side, and kept up the Fire while our Shot would reach her. The Arrow bore up and raked her. At or about half-past Five the second Frigate passed the Arrow (then laying to upon the Starboard Tack) without firing; a little afterwards she appeared as if intending to wear, and having her Stern towards the Acheron, we gave her Two Rounds from the Larboard Guns. She then hauled her Wind and stood towards the other

Frigate. The People were now employed in splicing the Rigging and getting another Toppalant Yard and Sail ready to send aloft. At Daylight observed the Enemy had French Colours flying, and one of the Frigates bearing a Commodore's Pendant. They then wore and stood to us; answered our Signal and repeated the Annul to one of the Ships of the Convoy; bore up to close the Arrow; at Seven she hailed us, and desired we would keep in her Wake, in close Order; made sail in the Starboard Tack, closing with the Enemy; at Twenty-five Minutes past Seven the headmost Frigate being abreast of the Arrow, and within Half Musket-shot, fired her Broadside at her, which was immediately returned; at Thirty Minutes past Seven she was abreast of us, and gave us a Broadside; we then commenced Action with her, which we continued until the Second Frigate, which was the Commodore's, came up to and fired into us (having engaged the Arrow in passing); we now turned our Fire upon this Ship until we came close up with the Arrow, who had put her Helm a-weather and was now raking her; we hauled our Wind to clear the Arrow, who appeared to be wearing; I hailed, and asked if he meant to again come to the Wind on the Starboard Tack, but could not understand what he said; as soon as clear of the Arrow, we again directed our Fire against the Commodore's Ship, which we continued until Eight, when, with the greatest Grief, I saw the Arrow obliged to strike, being no longer able to contend with the great Superiority of Force opposed to her. She had, I conceive, received much Damage in the Act of wearing; the Wind being light, she lay a considerable Time with her Head to the Enemy. The Achéron being now very much disabled in Masts, Sails, and Rigging, and Part of her Sternpost carried away, I considered farther Resistance on my Part could answer no good, and, unwilling to sacrifice the Lives of Men who had given me the highest Proof of their Courage, I determined to make what Sail I could, with little Hopes of saving the Ship, but with a View of prolonging the Time of my being captured, to give the Convoy the better Chance of escaping.

The Superiority in sailing of the Enemy's Ship rendered the Chase but short; at Three Quarters past Eight having in Chase received one Broadside and Part of another, and the Enemy now very near us, with the greatest Mortification and Sorrow I was obliged to surrender to the French Frigate L'Hortense, of Forty-four Guns, commanded by Monsieur De la Marre La Mellerie, who, finding her much disabled, as soon as the Officers and Ship's Company were removed, set her on Fire.
