Warsaw, June 131

THe Moscovite Ambassadors are lookt upon here with a very ill Eye; and great reproaches have been made them for having at the same time that they were Treating here a Defensive and Offensive League. concluded a Peace with the Ottomans, without Including this Crown therein, which the Ambassadors have endeavoured to excuse, by saying, that the Czar their Master observing with how much slowness and difficulty Matters with relation to that League were managed here, could not deny his Subjects the advantages of a Peace which the Turks offered him upon Terms so Just and Honourable: but this does not satisfie: And in the mean time our King is endeavouring to put the publique Affairs in the best posture he can. It is said that this Peace between the Turks and the Moscovites, as well as the breaking up of our Dyet, has been effected by the endeavour of those that would have the Ottomans turn their Arms towards Hungary.

Moscow, June 17. Since the conclusion of the Peace with the Turks, the Czar, has resolved to make a great Reform of his Troops, and particularly of the strangers that are now in his Service. It is said the Czar will send Ambassadors to Poland to Treat a perpetual Peace with that Crown.

Dantzick, June 21. From Warsaw they write, that the Moscovite Ambassadors were parted privately from thence, without taking their leave of any body; the Poles being extremely exasperated against them, finding that the Treaty of an Alliance with them, was set on foot by the Moscovites for no other end, than to induce the Turks to make a Peace with them upon the better terms; And there is reason to believe that the Turks would not have been so compliant to the Moscovites, were it not out of a desire to revenge the forwardness this Crown has shewn to engage in a War against them.

Halberstadt, June 20. The 12th Instant the Elector of Brandenburg arrived at Hall, where great preparations had been made for his Reception; a Triumphal Arch was Erected near the first Gate, under which his Electoral Highness passed, attended, besides his own Train, with the Nobility of the Countrey, who were wry rich in their Cloaths and Equipages: the Elector had seventeen Coaches of his own, with six Horses each, and a great many led Horses, and as the Court was in great splendor, so the Magistrates and Inhabitants of Hall were not wanting by all ways to testify with how much joy they received their new Prince: The 14th the Nobility did their Homage, as the Town did the day following. The 17th the Court left Hall, and arrived here yesterday, from whence it removes to tomorrow, and intends to be the 25th at Piermont and Westphalia. We have advice that four Frigats which have been fitted out by his Electoral Highness's Order at the Pillau, are ready to Sail from thence, being bound for the East-Indies to Trade; and that the Frigats which have been in the West-Indies to make Reprisals upon the Spaniards, are returned to the Pillau.

Francfort, July 4. From Rathbonne they write, that there is still some difference between the Electoral Colledge and that of the Princes, concerning the proportioning the Troops that are to be raised by the States of the Empire, but that it was hoped that Matters would be agreed in few days. The French Officers have thrice affix'd Citations on the Stadthouse at Creusnach in the Palatinate, thereby summoning the Inhabitants to do Homage to the French King, which have as often been torn down by the Officers of his Electoral Highness, who has Commanded his Subjects not to submit to the said Summons.

Hamburg, July 4. It is reported that Count Berká, the Emperors Minister at Copenhagen is Treating about an Alliance, between his Imperial Majesty and the King of Denmark; and it is likewise said, that that King has resolved to send the Heer Guldenlieu, as his Ambassador to Spain, to make a Treaty with that Crown; but what Truth there is in it time must shew. It is believed that some Matters of Moment will be managed at the Meeting of Piermont, where the Dukes of Zell and Wolfembustel intend to meet the Elector of Brandenburg.

Hamburg, July 4. It is certain that the Peace between the Turks and the Moscovites has been confirmed and ratified by the Czar, and now it is the general belief, that the Ottomans will turn their Arms against Poland or Hungary.

Hague, July 8. To Morrow the States of Holland meet, and the Prince of Orange who is gone to Breda to visit the new Fortifications that are making there, is expected back here in a day or two. From Liege we have Letters of the fourth Instant, which say, that the Heer Jodocus, the Emperors Envoye was arrived there, and that it was hoped he would be successful in his Commission; which was to endeavour to reconcile that City to their Prince the Elector of Cologne.

Brussels, July 8. The Advice we have from Dunkirk, that an Embargo has been laid upon all Spanish Ships in that Port, does somewhat alarm us here, not well knowing the reason of it. The Prince of Parma (who is still at Antwerp) has given out Commissions for the raising two German Regiments. to consist of 1500 Men each, and the Colonels have received their Moneys, and are gone to make their Leavies. Colonel Gage has likewise received his Moneys for recruiting the Scotch Regiment to 600 Men; and its likewise believed the same care will be speedily taken concerning the English and Irish Regiments.

Brussels

Brussels, July 11. Our Letters of the 5th Instant from Luxemburg tell us, that the French Troops were advanced as far as Ivois with a Train of Artillery; from whence they were to march the 12th Instant, to take Possession of the County of Chimay by force, if the same were not delivered to them by this day. That the French Officers continued to summon several other places to do Homage to the French King; and that Monsieur Spondran coming the 8th Instant to Luxemburg, and speaking with the Prince de Chimay; an Expres was immediately dispatched to his Highness at Antwerp, of whose errand we know nothing as yet. They write from Namur that the French have put themselves in possession of all the Countrey between the Sambre and the Meuse, and have set up the French Kings Arms in all publique places, and particularly in Maloigne, hard by Namur. It's uncertain when our Court will return hither, there being a report that his Highness will first go to Guelderland. We understand that the reason of the Embargo at Dunkirk is, that a Ship of that place having been seized by those of Ostend, a considerable time since, and the French King having written several times hither, to have the Process decided, but without effect, he has thought fit at the instance of the Owners, to use this way of Reprizal.

Paris, July 12. The King has nominated the Abbot of Bur-emont to the Bishoprick of Pamiers, which has been some time vacant. The necessary Summons have been issued for the Convoking the general Assembly of the Clergy, the King has appointed to meet in September, which its believed will produce some notable things. The King has put out a Declaration, forbidding his Protestant Subjects to send their Children to be bred beyond Sea.

That your Majesty would constantly maintain the Crown in its just Rights and due course of Succession; That you would Govern your People by the known Laws of the Land; and as your Majesty had resolved not to exercise any Arbitrary Power over us your self, so you would not suffer it in our fellow Subjects, and that which is more dear unto us than any Secular Interest, your Majesty has been freely pleased to assure us that you would protect the Orthodox Church of England (which never yet taught Subject to Rebel.) We therefore who have Subscribed this Address, do with Hearts filled with Loyalty, as well as Gratitude assure your Sacred Majesty, that we will at all times, to the utmost hazard of our Estates and Lives, assist your Majesty, your lawful Heirs and Successors, in Defence of the Crown, and Church, and the established Laws of the Land, against all Popish and Fanatical Designs whatsoever, and this Honest and Loyal Resolution, we do faithfully promise to adhere to and maintain: and that we will always continue, Your Majesties most Dutiful and Obedient Subjects. Dom. 1681.*

Most Gracious Sovereign,

And we do with much comfort and satisfaction acquiesce in Your Majesties Princely Government; and in all sincerity assure Your Majesty, that when You shall be pleased hereafter to call a Parliament, we will as much as in us lies, Elect such Representatives, as may be ready to perform that Service to Your Majesty, which in the true affections of our Hearts we do profess, and likewise we do, and shall pour out our daily and devout Prayers to the King of Kings for Your Majesties long Life, happy and auspicious Reign, and prosperous Estate of your Majesty, and Royal Successors after you for ever.

Windsor, July 2. The Address from the Town of Penryn in Cornewal, published in our last, was presented to His Majesty by the Right Honourable the Lord Arundel of Trerize; which His Majesty received very Graciously, and Commanded his Lordship to return the Town his Thanks.
