Genova, July 2.

WE have advize from Thou'on, that the Master of a French Ship which arrived there in 14 days from Cadiz, reported, That the day before her departure, there arrived an Advice Boat, which brought an account that the Flota would beat Cadiz, about the middle of August, which is very welcome news. From Calabria they write, That the French Squadron bound for Tripoli, was put in there.

Vienna, July 6. On Thursday last, Count Oxenstjerne, the Swedish Ambassador parted hence for Neustadt, from whence we have an account, that they were expecting an answer from Count Teckelej, to the Letter the Dyet had wrote to him; that in the mean time the Dyet had appointed Commissioners to examine the matters of Religion; and that the Emperor to gratifie those of the States, which are of the Reformed Religion, had permitted the Publick Exercise of it in one of the Suburbs of Oedenburg, and that besides, they might have Sermons in their own Houses.

Hague, July 18. From Piermont we have an account of a difficulty arisen between the Elector of Brandenburg and the Duke of Zell, concerning the first visit, the Elector pretending it belonged to him as being an Elector, and the Duke claiming it as the last comer. It is said that the Lading of the 12 East-India Ships that are expected home this year, cost the Company 440 thousand Pounds: seven of them are arrived upon the Coasts. The Prince of Orange is going for England.

Paris, July 16. Here are at present Deputies from the Elector of Cologne, and from the City of Liege, to sollicite our Kings assistance, in case things should come to extremities, as in all appearance they will, the Elector being very much incensed against those of Liege, and they not being at all disposed to make the submission he expects from them. This week an Express arrived in six days from Rome, and, as we are told, brought an account of the Pope's illness, which was the more taken notice of, for that at the same time another express arrived, being sent by the Archbishop of Tbolouze. From Avignon we have an account, That the Vice-Legat having refused to deliver, without an Order from the Pope, a French man (who having been a Farmer of some of the Kings Revenues and being in great Arrears, fled thither) several French Troops Posted themselves round that City, to hinder his escape, which had put the Inhabitants thereof into much fear and trouble. Besides the late Edict, by which the Protestants are forbid to send their Children to be bred in forreign Countries, and by which liberty is given to the Children of Protestants to change their Religion and become Papists at the age of seven years, we are told of other Edicts, that will be suddenly published, as severe as the former. The Duplication is much better, not having had her Ague on the two last days it was expected.

Edenburg, July 9. The 4th Instant, His Majesties Commission constituting his Royal Highness his High Commissioner in this Kingdom, was delivered in Council to his Royal Highness by the Lord Chancellor upon his Knee. His Royal Highness received it likewise upon his Knee, and then took his Place in the King's Chair, and made a short Speech to the Council, wherein he told their Lordships: That His Majesty had Honoured him with many Commissions, but that he had received none with more Joy and Satisfaction than he did this; for that it gave him an Opportunity to shew the desire he had to serve this Kingdom, where he had found so much Duty and Loyalty to the King, and Affection and Respect to himself.
