WAR DEPARTMENT.

Downing-Street, January 27, 1812.

A DISPATCH, of which the following is an extract, was this morning received at Lord Liverpool's Office, addressed to his Lordship by General Viscount Wellington, dated Gallegos, January 9, 1812.

INVESTED Ciudad Rodrigo yesterday. Since the enemy have had possession of the place they have constructed a palisaded redoubt on the hill of St. Francisco, and have fortified three convents in the suburb, the defences of which are connected with the work on the hill of St. Francisco, and with the old line by which the suburb was surrounded. By these means the enemy have increased the difficulty of approaching the place; and it was necessary to obtain possession of the work on the hill of St. Francis before we could make any progress in our attack. Accordingly Major-General Craufurd directed a detachment of the light division, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Colbourne, of the 52d Regiment, to attack the work shortly after it was dark. The attack was very ably conducted by Lieutenant-Colonel Colbourne, and the work was taken by storm in a short time: two captains and forty-seven men were made prisoners, and the remainder of the garrison were put to the sword. We took three pieces of cannon. I cannot sufficiently applaud the conduct of Lieutenant-Colonel Colbourne, and of the detachment under his command, upon this occasion. I am happy to add that our loss in this affair has not been severe, six men having been killed; Captain Mein and Lieutenant Woodgate, of the 52d, Lieutenant Hawksley, of the 95th, and fourteen men having been wounded.

The success of this operation enabled us immediately to break ground within six hundred yards of the place, notwithstanding that the enemy still held the fortified convents; and the enemy's work has been turned into a part of our first parallel, and a good communication made with it.

Lieutenant-General Hill arrived at Merida on the 30th December. He had hoped to surprise General Dombrowski (who I had been led to imagine was killed in General Hill's last affair with the enemy) in that town; but his advanced guard was discovered on the 29th by a patrol from a small detachment of the enemy, which happened to be at La Nava, which effected its retreat to Merida, notwithstanding the efforts of a detachment of Lieutenant-General Hill's cavalry to prevent it. General Dombrowski retired from Merida in the night, leaving a magazine of bread, and one hundred and sixty thousand pounds of wheat in the town, and several unfinished works, which the enemy had been constructing.

On the 1st, General Hill moved forward with the intention of attacking General Drouet, who commands the 5th corps, at Almendralejo. This General, however, retired upon Zafra, leaving a magazine in the town, containing four hundred and fifty thousand pounds of wheat, and some barley. On the 3d, Lieutenant-General Hill sent a detachment, consisting of the 28th regiment and two squadrons of the 2d Hussars, some squadrons of the 10th Portuguese Cavalry to Fuente del Maestre, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Abercromby. Our cavalry defeated a body of the enemy's cavalry which was there; having taken two officers and thirty men prisoners.

Lieutenant General Hill having found that General Drouet had retreated upon Llerena, and that it would be impossible for him to follow to a greater distance, returned to Merida on the 5th, in order to place the troops under his command in better cantonments, during the bad weather.

I have the honour to enclose letters from Lieutenant General Hill, of the 30th of December, 2d and 6th of January, giving an account of his operations, returns of killed and wounded, &c.

MY LORD, Merida, Dec. 30, 1811.

IN pursuance of your Lordship's instructions, I put the troops under my orders in march from their several cantonments, and entered this Province on the 27th instant by Albuquerque, Villa de Rey, and St. Vicente; and by the intelligence which I received from various quarters, I was led to entertain the most sanguine hopes that I should have been able to surprize the enemy's troops stationed in this town. I was, however, disappointed in my expectations, by finding in La Nava, on our approach to that village yesterday, with the column from Albuquerque, a party of the enemy consisting of about three hundred Voltigeurs and a few Hussars, being part of a detachment which had arrived there the night preceding, apparently on a plundering excursion, the remainder whereof has proceeded to Cordivallas, another village about two leagues distant.

A patrol from La Nava fell in with the head of our column, and gave the alarm to the detachment, which immediately commenced its retreat towards Merida, followed by the cavalry of my advanced guard, consisting of between three and four hundred of the 13th light dragoons and 2d hussars.

As I considered the intercepting of the entire of this party to be of the greatest importance to our ulterior operations, I directed the cavalry above-mentioned to make every effort to effect it, or at least to check its march until the arrival of some infantry.

The intrepid and admirable manner, however, in which the enemy retired, his infantry formed in square, and favoured as he was by the nature of the country, of which he knew how to take the fullest advantage, prevented the cavalry alone from effecting any thing against him, and after following him for upwards of a league, and making an ineffectual attempt to break him, I judged it advisable to give over the pursuit, and he effected his retreat, with the loss of about twenty killed, and as many wounded, from four nine-pounders, which, by the great exertions of Major Hawker, and his officers and men, got within range, and followed him for some distance, but were unable to close upon him, owing to the deepness of the country.

One wing of the 71st light infantry, under Lieutenant Colonel the Honourable H. Cadogan, also exerted themselves in a most laudable manner to overtake the enemy, but were at too great a distance to admit of their accomplishing it in any reasonable time.

The arrival of the above-mentioned party at Merida, made the enemy acquainted with our approach, of which I have reason to think he was before entirely ignorant, and he in consequence evacuated the town during the night, leaving unfinished some works which he was constructing for its defence, and we entered it in the course of the day.

I regret to state that we had two men killed, and some wounded in the affair of yesterday, of which I enclose a return.

I have, &c. (Signed) R. HILL.

Lord Viscount Wellington, &c. &c. &c.

Since writing the above, it has been reported to me, that one hundred and eighty fanegas of wheat have been found in the Depôt of this town, belonging to the French, besides a quantity of bread.

Extract of a Letter from General Hill to Lord Viscount Wellington, dated Almendralejo, Jan. 2, 1812.

SINCE my letter to your Lordship from Merida of the 30th ult. I have the honour to report, that from all the information I had received, I had reason to suppose, that Drouet was concentrating his troops at this place, I consequently moved on yesterday for the purpose of attacking him. On my approach to the town, I found that the greater part of the enemy's troops had moved off the preceding day, in the direction of Villa Franca, and that his rear guard was on its march, covered by his cavalry, which skirmished with the Hussars of my advanced guard, and retired after receiving a few rounds from the horse artillery. In this town we found a few stores, of which the enclosed is a return. I thought it possible the enemy might have afforded me an opportunity of doing something here.

(Signed) CHARLES STEWART,
Major-General, and Adjutant-General.

MY LORD,

Merida, Jan. 6, 1812.

MY letter of the 2d and 3d instant would acquaint your Lordship of my having, on the 1st instant, marched with the corps under my command to Almendralejo, in the hope that Count d'Erlon, who had collected the greater part of his troops at that place, might have given me an opportunity of coming in contact with him, as well as of my disappointment in that respect, he having previously fallen back in the direction of Lerena, leaving only a small rear-guard in Almendralejo, which retired also on our approach. I have the honour to acquaint your Lordship, that it was my intention to have followed the enemy, and, failing in my desire to bring him to action, to have given him every possible annoyance in his retreat; but the dreadful state of the weather, the condition of the roads (which are daily becoming worse), and the consequent difficulty of getting up my supplies, render any further operations on my part impossible for the present, without incurring risks, and making sacrifices, greater than could have been justified by the occasion, or by your Lordship's instructions. I therefore determined, after halting two days at Almendralejo, and occupying Villa Franca and Fuente del Maestre, to put the troops into cantonments in this town and neighbourhood, there to await a more favourable opportunity of acting; trusting that the alarm occasioned to the enemy by the movement already made, will have in part effected one of the objects with which I was instructed by your Lordship to take the field. A part of the troops accordingly returned here yesterday, and the remainder are now on their march; the enemy being, by the last accounts which I have received, also in full march towards the south, his rear-guard having left Zafra and Los Santos yesterday. I have the satisfaction to enclose, for your Lordship's information, a letter from the Honourable Lieutenant-Colonel Abercromby, detailing the particulars of a successful attack, made by some of the 2d hussars and Portuguese cavalry, acting under his orders at Fuente del Maestre, on a body of the enemy's dragoons, which reflects the greatest credit on Lieutenant-Colonel Abercromby who directed, and the officers and non-commissioned officers and men who executed it.

I have, &amp;c.

(Signed)

R. HILL.

SIR,

Merida, January 5, 1812.

IN obedience to your orders, I marched on the
No. 65616.

3d instant from Almendralejo at noon, with the column you did me the honour to place under my command, and reached Fuente del Maestre at a little after four o'clock in the evening of that day. On my arrival, I learned that some of the enemy's cavalry were still in the neighbourhood; and having passed through the town, I halted the column, and proceeded to reconnoitre in front. About one hundred of the enemy's horse were discovered on the Los Santos road, who, apparently ignorant of our force, formed squadron, and advanced towards us. The Portuguese cavalry exchanged a few shots with them until the hussars were brought up; the enemy then halted, and shewed a disposition to charge; in this, however, he was quickly frustrated. The two squadrons of the hussars were formed on the right, and one squadron of the 10th Portuguese cavalry on the left. Instantly the enemy were charged on one flank by the squadron of Portuguese, under Lieutenant Colonel Campbell, and by Captain Cleves's squadron on the other. The right hussar squadron remained in reserve. A few minutes decided the contest. The enemy being completely routed, left in our hands two officers and thirty men, besides several killed. The squadron which remained in reserve was then sent in pursuit, as far as prudence would allow.

No language of mine can do sufficient justice to the gallantry of Lieutenant-Colonel Campbell, as well as that of Lieutenant Hutchinson, the other officers and men composing the squadron of Portuguese cavalry. Suffice it to say, that on this occasion the hussars under Major Busche upheld the high military character they are so universally known to possess.

This little affair has been achieved with very trifling loss on our side.

Inclosed I have the honour to transmit to you a list of the killed and wounded.
