May it please your Royal Highness,

WE, the Lord Mayor, Sheriffs, Commons, and Citizens of the City of Dublin, beg leave to approach your Royal Highness with sentiments of the most profound respect and gratitude for continuing at the head of the government of this country our highly esteemed and beloved Viceroy Charles Duke of Richmond, whose many public and private virtues have deservedly insured to him the affections of a free and loyal people. The advantages we derive from his mild, yet firm and constitutional administration; his zeal to promote the trade and manufactures of Ireland, and his conciliating manners to all ranks, would make his departure from this kingdom a subject of regret to all those who truly value the happiness and welfare of Ireland.

In thus acceding to the wishes of every good and loyal subject of this kingdom, your Highness has maintained the great and gratifying declaration, (which you were graciously pleased to deliver when you assumed your present exalted station) that you would maintain the Constitution, and govern according to those principles which called your illustrious family to the Throne.

In testimony whereof the common seal of said City is hereto affixed, the 17th day of January 1812.

[Transmitted by His Grace the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.]

Dunning Street, February 3, 1812.

SINCE the publication of the Gazette Extraordinary of the 21st of January, General Agnew has arrived with dispatches, addressed by Lord Minto and Sir Samuel Auchmuty to the Earl of Liverpool, containing the report of the military operations on the reduction of Java, the details of which have been already published.

The copy of the capitulation inclosed in Mr Farquhar's dispatch having been found to be incorrect in some of the particulars, the following copy, transmitted by Sir Samuel Auchmuty, is herewith inserted.

ARTICLES of CAPITULATION agreed on between the Commander De Koek, Brigadier and Chief of the Staff of the Army of His Majesty the Emperor and King, vested with Powers to that effect from His Excellency Governor-General Jansens, and Colonel Agnew, Adjutant-General of the Forces of His Britannic Majesty on Java, on the Part of His Excellency Lieutenant-General Sir Samuel Auchmuty, Commander in Chief of His Britannic Majesty's Forces on that Island.

(Translation.)

Article I. General Jansens will give up to General Auchmuty the Isle of Java and its dependencies.

Answer.—The events of war having placed all the provinces of Java west of Samarang in possession of the British forces, General Jansens can only be allowed to stipulate for those which remain to the eastward of Samarang, and are not yet in the possession of His Britannic Majesty's forces.

Art. II. The European Officers, non-commissioned officers, and soldiers, who are with General Jansens, and in that part of Java which is not yet in the power of the army of His Britannic Majesty, shall not be considered as prisoners of war. The officers shall keep their swords, horses, and baggage.

Answer.—All the troops of the French army of every description on Java and its dependencies must be considered as prisoners of war. The officers who surrender under this capitulation shall retain their swords, their horses, and private baggage.

Art. III. They, as well as the troops already in the power of the army of His Britannic Majesty, shall be sent to France at the expence of the English Government. The latter to be on their parole.

Answer.—No stipulation can be admitted for that part of the French army which has already been captured, but the officers and soldiers shall receive that treatment which the British Government always gives to prisoners of war.

Art. IV. The wounded and sick, after their recovery, shall enjoy the privilege demanded in the preceding article.

Answer.—Answered by the preceding articles.

Art V. The commissaries purveyors, the commissaries of war, officers of health, commissaries of Saltpetre, and those in all other employments, non-combattants, shall not be considered as prisoners of war; they shall be sent to France at the expence of the British Government.

Answer.—The persons described in the fifth article, if military, and considered as such by the usage of the French service, must be prisoners of war. If they are civilians, they shall receive the same consideration that is extended to civilians in general, who may be in the employ of Government. No stipulations for their transport to Europe can be admitted.

Art. VI. The officers, non-commissioned officers, and soldiers, natives of Java, the troops of the Emperor of Solo, those of the Regent of Jojocarta, and lastly, those of Panjerang Prang Widone shall be released and sent home.

Answer.—Such of the native troops, in the service of France, as lay down their arms, shall have permission to return to their homes. The troops of the Emperor of Solo, and the Sultan of Mataram, shall also be released. The Prince Prang Widone, must surrender the cannon and fire-arms of the corps he commands, and will then be permitted to return to his usual residence.

Art. VII. The Ambassadors shall remain in the British Government the means of returning home.

Answer.—The Ambassadors, being subjects of Great Britain, shall be received as such. No foreign power can be allowed to stipulate for them.

Art. VIII. The European troops of His Majesty the Emperor and King, shall receive, during their detention here, the pay and rations allowed them by the regulations of the colony.

Answer.—The troops only, who are not already prisoners, can be included in this stipulation; and they shall be treated with the usual indulgence granted to prisoners of war.

Art. IX. Three months pay shall be granted to the officers at their embarkation, to provide for the expence of the voyage.

Answer.—The officers who may embark for Europe, will receive the usual advances made to officers who are prisoners of war.

Art. X. The non-commissioned officers and soldiers who shall be sent to Europe, and who shall not be clothed in a manner to bear the hardships of such a voyage, shall be properly clothed at the expence of the British Government.

Answer.—The British Government will not be wanting in those attentions which humanity requires, to the troops who may be embarked for Europe.

Art. XI. If the troops of His Majesty the Emperor and King, in their passage to Europe, touch at any British ports, and are obliged to remain there, they shall then receive the pay and rations allowed by the rules of the colony, or at any rate those given to British troops in these ports.

Answer.—Answered in part by the preceding articles. The established usage regarding prisoners of war will be observed towards all the officers and soldiers of the French army, who may be embarked as such.

Art. XII. Persons in civil employments in the colony shall receive the salary due to them to the date of the present capitulation; and those who wish to return to France shall be provided with a passage on board British ships.

Answer.—The delay which has occurred in proposing terms of capitulation has rendered it necessary to establish at Batavia a provisional civil government, for the arrangement of all civil affairs; and the Commander in Chief considers it therefore necessary to refer this article to the decision of the Civil Authority, in full confidence that it will be considered in the most liberal manner.

Art. XIII. If there are any civilians or individuals who may wish to return to Europe, they shall be allowed two years for the settlement of their affairs, and they may also make remittances of their property.

Answer.—Granted; they being bound to conduct themselves during their residence on Java or its dependencies, according to the established rules of the British Government.

Art. XIV. The military and civil officers who shall return to France may carry with them their wives and children. For this purpose accommodation shall be granted them on board of British ships.

Answer.—As no vessels will sail direct from Java to Europe, and as the officers of the French service are to be prisoners of war, this stipulation cannot be exactly granted; but when civil and military officers proceed to Europe, every facility will be given to them for the passage of their families (being Europeans) with them.

Art. XV. The British Government will recognise and continue to give circulation to the different kinds of paper money which have been created and circulated by the Government of the colony.

Answer.—This is an object exclusively appertaining to the consideration of the civil government; the Commander in Chief will neither grant or refuse it.

Art. XVI. All private property shall be respected, as well as that of charitable and other establishments.

Answer.—All private property will be respected, and the charitable establishments sanctioned by the Government shall have whatever property is bona fide not the property of Government, preserved to them. The administrators, and others charged with such property, being bound to render correct accounts to those who may be charged by the Commander in Chief of the British army to receive and examine them.

Art. XVII. The British Government shall engage to reimburse, 1st. all the sums which have been paid into the government chest by the civil and military functionaries, and by individuals, in consequence of a forced loan, inasmuch as repayment has not hitherto been made.

Answer.—The British Government will not take upon itself the payment of those loans which the French Government has made, considering those as equally obligatory on that Government in every part of the world.

2d. All sums which the agents of persons returned to Europe or elsewhere have been obliged to pay into the Government chest.

Answer.—The nature of this demand being in some sort different from the claim made in the preceding articles, the Commander in Chief will recommend it to the favourable consideration of the British Government of Java.

3d. All sums which public officers or individuals may have voluntarily lent to Government in aid of its expenses.

Answer.—Refused.

4th. All the Government debts, whether for supplies or other purposes, which have been duly contracted.

Answer.—Refused. The French Government, wherever it exists, is responsible to the creditors of the State.

Art. XVIII. The Emperor of Solo, and the Prince Regent D'Jojocarta, shall remain in possession of the lands which they hold from government.

Answer.—The surrender of the French possessions in Java will not admit of any stipulations of this nature. The British Government will regulate its conduct to the vassals of the state by theirs.

Art. XIX. The Prince Prang Widono shall equally retain the lands which have been granted to him upon the territory of the Emperor of Solo for his maintenance.

Answer.—The future conduct of the Prince Prang Widono will guide the British Government of Java in their arrangements regarding him.

Art. XX. All public property of every kind, treasure, arms, ammunitions, stores, provisions, as well as the objects for commerce, the property of the state, wherever situated within the limits of the island of Java, or the settlements on the other islands depending on the Government of Java, shall be given up without reserve to the agents who shall be appointed to receive them without delay, and the public functionaries in charge of them respectively shall deliver them over agreeably to the inventories, and be responsible to produce the property in their charge, and the papers of their respective departments, to the agents of the British Government.

Answer.—All the property of government, the treasure, arms, ammunition, merchandise, provisions, &c. shall be delivered up as is proposed in this article.

Art. XXI. The public officers charged with different civil and political arrangements shall continue, if required, to exercise their respective functions under the British Government (to preserve order in the colony), and to prevent that scene of massacre and pillage by the natives, which in some measure has already occurred from the absence of regular authorities in the interior of the island, until they are replaced by officers appointed by the British Government, to whom they shall regularly transfer the official papers of their several departments.

Answer.—The civil functionaries shall, for the good of the colony, be directed to continue their functions until the British Government shall have provided for that service.

Art. XXII. The archives of the government, plans of forts, and other public works, with all other papers of a public nature, shall be faithfully delivered up to persons appointed by the British Government to receive them.

Answer.—The archives of government, charts, and plans, shall be delivered up in the state in which they now are.

Art. XXIII. Immediate orders shall be transmitted to Sourabaya, and the officer commanding Fort Louis, and other dependent stations, to announce this capitulation, and stop, without delay, an unnecessary effusion of blood.

Answer.—Orders shall be immediately dispatched, conformably to the contents of this article.

The above articles shall be submitted for the approval of His Excellency General Jansens, and his answer definitively given before six o'clock to-morrow morning, to His Excellency Lieutenant-General Sir Samuel Auchmuty, at Oonarang.

Answer.—The above articles shall be submitted to His Excellency General Jansens, and his definitive answer shall be given before six o'clock to-morrow morning to Lieutenant-General Sir Samuel Auchmuty at Oonarang.

The following articles having been referred to my authority, I annexed my answer, which will form a part of the capitulation.

Art. XII.—It will be necessary to ascertain which of the persons who are the subject of this article, continued in the actual discharge of the functions of their respective offices down to the period specified. Other considerations may also justly weigh in particular cases. The government will be entirely disposed, and will not fail to do, what may appear just and equitable in a fair investigation of each claim.

Art. XV. and 2d clause of Art. XVII.—It is proper to explain the reasons which make it my duty to decline the discussion of Article XV. and of the 2d clause of Article XVII. as I should have done of all the other clauses of the latter article, if they had also been reserved for my consideration.

The action of the 26th August was considered, by the English authorities, as decisive of the fate of the colony, which by that event was altogether deprived of the protection of its former government. The British dominion was in consequence formally established in the island and its dependencies, by my proclamation of the 29th of August.

Since that period the interests, the claims, and pretensions of the subjects of Java, can be treated only with the British Government, and cannot be made the subject of stipulation or of intervention by any other power.

No. 16572.

B

General Jansens had adopted as the rule of his conduct, the principle of entering into no capitulation while any resources remained, however inadequate to success.

It is not my province to pronounce on the justice of this principle, which in some points of view, must no doubt, be accounted honourable to a soldier; but it necessarily deprives them of any title to favourable terms, (except such as may indicate the esteem due to his person and the few who may remain round him) when he is at length constrained to surrender, by the total absence of all means to protract the contest: on this account also, I cannot consent to make the claims and interests of this people, the subject of negotiation and discussion with the head of the late Government. Some of the objects referred to in the articles now under consideration had been provided for by the public orders of the British Government, before his Excellency, General Jansens, proposed to treat with the Commander in Chief; other points were already the subjects of representation from the parties interested, and were in that regular form under the deliberation of Government.

For these reasons I am under the necessity of withholding from this capitulation any specific judgment on the matters referred to me in these articles.
