Copy of a Letter from Vice-Admiral Sir Edward Pellew, Bart. Commander in Chief of His Majesty's Ships and Vessels in the Mediterranean, to John Wilson Croker, Esq. dated on board the Caledonia, at Port Mahon, the 29th March 1812.

SIR,

HAVING by my last report of the state of the enemy's ships, apprised their Lordships that the Rivoli of seventy-four guns, recently launched at Venice, was in readiness to put to sea; I have now great satisfaction in announcing her capture by His Majesty's ship Victorious, after a severe contest of five hours, on the 21st ultimo, and I have the honour to enclose a letter from Captain Talbot, detailing the particulars of this very gallant affair.

The great disparity of force sufficiently bespeaks the merits of the captors; the Rivoli having eight hundred and sixty-two men at the commencement of the action, while the crew of the victorious was reduced to five hundred and six, of whom sixty were in the sick list.

The loss has been very severe on both sides, upwards of four hundred having been killed and wounded on the part of the enemy, and forty-two men killed, and ninety-nine wounded, on the part of the Victorious.

Their Lordships will observe that the Weazle had a share in this brilliant action, engaging a French brig of war until she blew up alongside; the conduct of Captain Andrew and his men has been extremely creditable.

I congratulate their Lordships on this achievement, and from the zeal and vigilance which I have the satisfaction to perceive throughout the fleet under my command, I trust it may be the prelude to other important successes.

I have the honour to be, &c.

(Signed) EDWARD PELLEW.

His Majesty's Ship Victorious, Port Saint

SIR, George, Lissa, March 3, 1812.

ON the 16th ultimo I arrived off the Port of Venice; the weather was very foggy at that time and continued so till the 21st, which prevented me reconnoitring the port.

At half-past two o'clock P.M. on that day, a brig was seen E.N.E.; at three o'clock a large ship with two more brigs and two settees in the same direction; all sail was made in chase; at four o'clock I made the Weazle's signal to prepare for action; at this time I was convinced that the ship seen was one of the enemy's line of battle ships, proceeding from Venice to the Port of Pola, in Istria.

The enemy were sailing in a line of battle; with the two gun-boats and one brig a-head, the other two brigs in a line a-stern.

At half-past two o'clock A.M. I perceived that one of the enemy's brigs dropped a-stern; and that the line of battle ship had shortened sail to allow her to close again.

I hailed the Weazle, and ordered Captain Andrew to endeavour to pass the Victorious, and if possible to bring the brigs a-stern of the Commodore to action, in hopes it would induce him to shorten sail, which had the desired effect.

At a quarter past four o'clock, His Majesty's brig Weazle commenced the action with the two brigs. At half-past four we commenced action at the distance of half pistol-shot, with the line of battle ship, neither ship having fired a single shot until that time.

At five we perceived a brig to blow up; at daylight I perceived the Weazle in chase of the brigs, the gun-boats not in sight. I recalled her as she did not appear to close with the chase. We were at this time in seven fathoms water off the Point of Grão, and I was fearful we might want assistance from her, in case either of the ships had got on shore on the bank.

Captain Andrew on being recalled, placed his brig very judiciously on the bow of the line of battle ship, within pistol-shot, and in that situation he gave her three broadsides.

The enemy for nearly the last two hours had been rendered perfectly unmanageable, and had kept up a very slow fire, and that chiefly from two guns on the quarter-deck, her mizen-mast fell over her side about a quarter before nine o'clock. At nine they hailed us and said they had struck; I sent on board Mr. Peake, the First Lieutenant, to take possession of her.

I found the squadron we had engaged consisted of two gun-boats, the Mameluke brig of ten guns, and Jena and Mercure of eighteen guns each, with the Rivoli, of seventy-four guns, bearing the broad pendant of Commodore Barré, the Commander in Chief of the enemy's forces in the Adriatic.

From the length of the action, and the smoothness of the water, the loss of men and the damages on both sides, I am sorry to say, have been very great indeed, neither ship having been above half musket-shot distance from each other during the whole of the action, which only ceased at intervals, when the ships were hid from each other by the fog and smoke, and were not even able to see the flashes of each other's guns.

I feel great satisfaction in saying that the conduct of Commodore Barré, during the whole of the action, convinced me I had to deal with a most gallant and brave man, and, in the manœuvring his ship, a most experienced and skilful officer. He did not surrender his ship till nearly two hours after she was rendered unmanageable, and had four hundred killed or wounded; his captain and most of his officers either killed or wounded.

By the returns you will perceive, Sir, that our loss too has been very severe.

I have to regret, as well as the service, the loss of two very fine young men, Lieutenants Thomas H. Griffiths and Robert S. Ashbridge, of the Royal Marines, who were mortally wounded early in the action, with many other brave and good men, both seamen and marines.

The conduct of the officers has been throughout highly meritorious, both during the action, and also in securing the masts of the ship, in the very bad weather we met before we gained the port of Lissa.

Having received a contusion from a splinter early in the action, for some days afterwards I have been deprived nearly of my eyesight; all which time the exertions by Mr. Peake, my senior lieutenant, prevented my inability from being of any detriment to His Majesty's service.

The Rivoli, in crossing the Gulph of Fiume, lost her fore and main-masts; but by the exertions of Lieutenants Whyte and Coffin, who had charge of her, she was brought safe into the Port of Lissa under jury masts.

I feel particularly indebted to Captain Andrew, of the Weazle, for his exertions during the action, and also for the assistance he gave to the Rivoli afterwards.

I have sent inclosed a copy of his letter, reporting to me his conduct, and that of his officers and crew, during the night of the action. He particularly mentions his senior lieutenant, whom he strongly recommends to the notice of the Commander in Chief.

The numbers of wounded, and the severity of the wounds, has caused Mr. Baird the Surgeon, and Mr. O'Meara, the only Assistant on board, very great fatigue. The conduct of Mr. William H. Gibbons and Mr. John J. Keeling, Master's-Mates, deserves notice. The conduct of Captain Stevens, of the Royal Marines, I cannot avoid mentioning, and that of Mr. Crawford the Master, was perfectly to my satisfaction.

During the whole of this severe action not a single explosion took place on board, or a man hurt, either through carelessness or accident; both the officers and men, for their steady and cool conduct, deserve every credit.

I have sent herewith the returns, as far as I have been able to procure, of the killed and wounded on board the Rivoli.

I landed a great number of the wounded prisoners in Istria, having sent a flag of truce to the town of Pirang, to request the Commandant of that port would send off boats to receive them, which, accordingly, he did. I have sent the remainder of them from this port by a schooner to Spalatro in Dalmatia.

When we commenced the action the Victorious had only five hundred and six persons actually on board, sixty of which were in the sick list, but most of the sick were able to assist in the action. The Rivoli had on board eight hundred and sixty-two persons at the commencement of the action.

I have the honour to be, &c.

(Signed) JOHN TALBOT,

Captain of His Majesty's ship Victorious, and Senior Officer in the Upper Part of the Adriatic.

To Charles Rowley, Esq; Captain of His Majesty's Ship Eagle, and Senior Officer in the Adriatic.

His Majesty's Sloop Weazle, 22d day of February 1812, Cape Salvore, S. E. by E.

SIR,

IN pursuance of your directions this morning at half-past two, ordering me to go a-head and bring the enemy's brigs to action, I have the honour to inform you, that at a quarter past four A. M. I came up with two French brigs, one within half pistol-shot, which we immediately engaged, and, after an action of forty minutes, she blew up without doing us any damage. I am sorry we saved only three men from her, and those much bruized and wounded. She proves to have been the French brig Le Mercure, of eighteen twenty-four-pounders carronades, commanded by a Lieutenant de Vaisseau. During the greater part of this time the other brig engaged us on our bow, but seeing the fate of her companion, and from the darkness of the morning, and our rigging being much cut, she made her escape. At daylight we observed this brig and another, the first about three miles a-head. At six o'clock made all sail in chase; answered the signal of recall; bore up. At eight o'clock came across the Rivoli's bows, within musket shot, and gave her a broadside, wore and tacked as necessary to continue raking her; at nine she fired a gun to leeward, when we ceased firing.

The whole of the aforementioned service, I am extremely happy to say, was performed without the loss of a man on my part, from the steady, determined, and cool behaviour of every officer and man on board. And I most earnestly request you will be pleased to recommend to the Commander in Chief Mr. George Elliott, my First Lieutenant, and every other officer and man on board His Majesty's sloop which I have the honour to command.

I have the honour to be, &c.

(Signed) JOHN W. ANDREW, Commander, To John Talbot, Esq; Captain of His Majesty's Ship Victorious.

Admiralty-Office, May 9, 1812.

Copy of a Letter from Redr-Admiral Foley, Commander in Chief in the Downs, to John Wilson Croker, Esq; dated the 6th Instant.

SIR,

REFERRING to my letter of the 4th instant, giving an account of the loss of His Majesty's sloops Apelles and Skylark, I feel great satisfaction in transmitting to you, for the information of the Lordships, an account of the recapture of the former by Captain Cunningham of the Bermuda, who succeeded in cutting out that sloop whilst in possession of the enemy, from under a battery to the eastward of Etaples, and under the fire, as well of that battery, as the field-pieces on shore.

I beg leave only to add, that Captain Cunningham has always shewn himself a brave, zealous, and active officer, and I trust that his conduct on this occasion will testify the same to their Lordships.

I have the honour to be, &c.

(Signed) THOS. FOLEY, Rear-Admiral.

His Majesty's Sloop Bermuda, at Sea, May 4, 1812.

SIR,

I HAVE great satisfaction in detailing the circumstances attending the recapture of His Majesty's sloop Apelles.

By a telegraphic communication from the Castilian on the afternoon of the 3d at Dungeness, I learned that His Majesty's sloops Skylark and Apelles were on shore to the westward of Boulogne, and as the fate of the Apelles was in particular extremely uncertain, I weighed, with the Rinaldo in company, steering towards the French coast, in the hope of rendering her some assistance. At break of day we observed the Rinaldo in chace of the Apelles, which had been got afloat about five miles to the eastward of Etaples, and under jury sails, the enemy navigating her along shore. About nine, A. M. we both came up, and drove her on shore with a few broadsides, under a battery about three miles to the eastward of Etaples. As the tide was falling, I discontinued the attack, in consequence of the advantage the enemy would have in planting his field pieces and small arm men close to her at low water mark.

The Castilian and Phipps joined before the tide served to recommence our operations, and with this addition to our force, at about half-past two, P. M. I renewed the attack, leading in close under the battery, with the wind N. E. by N. the other sloops following, and as they came up giving their broadsides, by which the enemy's troops, embarked in the Apelles, were soon driven out. The boats of the squadron, as had been previously arranged, were then immediately sent in under the command of my First Lieutenant, Saunders, who most gallantly boarded her, and though for a considerable time exposed to a galling fire of shot and shells from the battery, and a collection of field-pieces, she was got afloat, and brought out in safety about four o'clock, during which time the sloops used their utmost endeavours to cover the boats, and prevent as much as possible further annoyance from the enemy.

I feel greatly indebted to Captains Braimer, Wells, and Sir W. Parker, their officers and men, particularly those employed in the boats. I am happy to add an acknowledgment of the merits of my own officers and crew, particularly of my First Lieutenant, Thomas Saunders, and the volunteers acting under him in the boats, who gallantly undertook the service, when the advantageous situation of the enemy led me to expect a much more sanguinary result.

The loss of the enemy it has been impossible for me to determine, but I am happy to state that the service has been performed without even a wound on our part, though at the commencement of the attack the Apelles was full of troops, and the defence from the shore obstinately maintained. I trust this circumstance will not only bespeak our extremely good fortune, but prove more strongly than I can express, that the plan of attack was well laid and judiciously executed by the officers and men under my orders.

The boats gave the soldiers so little time to escape, that four were left on board, calling themselves part of the King of Rome's body guard, and bearing the insignia of their corps. We found the Apelles much cut up from our fire, and she afterwards sustained great damage from the enemy: she has seven guns, and most of her stores and provisions remaining on board. The Skylark was completely destroyed, lying some distance to the eastward, still smoking. I have great satisfaction in stating that the crews of both vessels escaped in their boats, with the exception of Captain Hoffman of the Apelles, and nineteen of his people.

I have the honour to be, &c.

His Royal Highness, for the better apprehending and bringing to justice the persons concerned in the said felony, is hereby pleased, in the name and on the behalf of His Majesty, to promise His Majesty's most gracious pardon to any one of them (except the person who actually fired off the said fire-arms) who shall discover his or their accomplice or accomplices therein, so that he, she, or they may be apprehended and convicted thereof.

And, as a further encouragement, a reward of ONE HUNDRED GUINEAS is hereby offered by the Committee at Huddersfield, to any person making such discovery as aforesaid (except as is before excepted), to be paid on the conviction of any one or more of the offenders, by Mr. John Pearce, Treasurer.

His Royal Highness for the better apprehending and bringing to justice the persons concerned in the said felony, is hereby pleased, in the name and on the behalf of His Majesty, to promise His Majesty's most gracious pardon to any one of them (except the person who actually fired off the said gun or fire-arms) who shall discover his or their accomplice or accomplices therein, so that he, she, or they may be apprehended and convicted thereof.

His Royal Highness, for the better apprehending and bringing to justice the persons concerned in the said murder, is hereby pleased, in the name and on the behalf of His Majesty, to promise His Majesty's most gracious pardon to any one of them (except the person or persons who actually fired at the said Mr. Horsfall) who shall discover his or their accomplice or accomplices therein, so that he, she, or they may be apprehended and convicted thereof.

His Royal Highness, for the better apprehending and bringing to justice the persons concerned in the said atrocious act, is hereby pleased, in the name and on the behalf of His Majesty, to promise His Majesty's most gracious pardon to any one of them (except the person who actually fired off the said pistol) who shall discover his or their accomplice or accomplices therein, so that he or they may be apprehended and convicted thereof.
