WAR DEPARTMENT.

Downing-Street, September 4, 1813.

A DISPATCH, of which the following is an extract, has been this day received at Lord Bathurst's Office, addressed to his Lordship by Field-Marshal the Marquess of Wellington, dated Lezaca, August 25, 1813.

NO movement of importance has been made by the enemy, or by the allies, since I transmitted my last report.

I have received reports from Lieutenant-General Lord William Bentinck to the 19th instant, copies and extracts of which I have the honour to enclose; from which it appears, that Marshal Suchet collected the troops under his command at Villa Franca on the 10th, consisting of from twenty-five to thirty thousand men, and Lord William Bentinck those he had within his reach in a position on the river Gaya, having suspended all the operations of the siege of Tarragona. His Lordship, however, was not satisfied with his position, which he could not occupy in sufficient strength, as he had not been joined by all the troops which he expected, and which was liable to be turned on both flanks. He therefore retired upon Cambrills without loss, in proportion as Marshal Suchet advanced, leaving Tarragona open, which place the French have blown up and evacuated; and Marshal Suchet has again retired towards Barcelona.

I beg to draw your Lordship's attention particularly to the enclosed report of Colonel Lord Frederick Bentinck, of the conduct of a detachment of the Brunswick hussars, in an affair with the enemy on the 15th.

I entirely approve of Lieutenant-General Lord William Bentinck's having retired, as he had not been able to collect his whole force, and did not consider himself sufficiently strong to fight a general action with the enemy.

Extract of a Report from Lord William Bentinck to the Marquess of Wellington, dated Cambrills, August 16, 1813.

ON the 3d the Duque del Parque's corps came up to Tarragona; as did the division of General Sarsfield on the 11th. General Elio could not spare the three regiments of the division of Migares, which I had requested him to send me.

On the 10th I heard, that Marshal Suchet had returned to Villa Franca from Barcelona, and had brought with him five thousand men. The reports of the succeeding days, left no doubt of its being his intention to move forward; and on the 14th, I learned from the Baron d'Eroles and Colonel Manzo, that besides collecting all he could from the garrisons, he had been joined by Decaen with six thousand men.

In consequence of this intelligence, I suspended all operations for the siege of Tarragona, except the making of fascines, and landed neither artillery nor stores.

There was no position on the Gaya, as I had in my former letter supposed. There are only two carriageable roads across it, but they are at a distance of ten miles from each other. The river having no water in it, and being only impassable from the steepness of its banks, is passable for infantry every where. A corps placed in the centre could not reach either flank in time to prevent the passage of the enemy. General Whittingham, whom I had sent with his corps to the Cols of San Christina and Llebra, reported them not to be defensible with so small a force as we could allot to this object.

I had intended to have pushed on to the Llobregat. Suchet's army was at one time divided between Barcelona and Villa Franca, and its environs. A rapid movement might possibly have enabled me to fall separately upon his advanced corps, and to obtain possession of the ridge of mountains on this side the Llobregat before he could have time to bring up his troops from Barcelona. I could not execute this movement before being joined by Sarsfield, and previously Suchet had concentrated his force in Villa Franca and its neighbourhood. Suchet's force has been variously reported, from twenty to twenty-five thousand men.

The immediate vicinity of Tarragona offered a very good position in itself, but it may be completely turned by an enemy who, crossing the Cols, should approach Tarragona by Valls and Reus.

On the 14th Suchet moved a large corps upon Alta Fulla, but the road being close to the beach, the gun-boats prevented him from passing, if such were his intention.

On the 15th he drove back the posts on the Cols of San Christina and Llebra, and afterwards forced the corps at Brafia, by which they were supported, to retire. His whole army marched by this route.

Upon Suchet's continuing to advance towards Tarragona, I resolved upon retiring in the night; and the army arrived here this morning without any loss, and without receiving any molestation from the enemy. If there had been any fair chance of success, I would have given them battle.

MY LORD, Hospitalet, August 19, 1813.

I HAVE the honour to inclose the copy of a report which Lord Frederick Bentinck has made to me, respecting an affair which took place on the 15th, when the enemy were advancing towards Tarragona, and which terminated in a manner highly creditable to the Brunswick hussars, a part of which regiment alone was engaged with a very superior number of the enemy's cavalry.

I have the honour to be, &c.

(Signed) W. BENTINCK, Lieut. Gen.
Field-Marshal the Marquess of Wellington, K. G.

Camp, near Cambrils,

August 16, 1813.

MY LORD,

IN obedience to your directions, I marched yesterday afternoon, with the brigade of cavalry under my command, beyond Nulles and Villabella, and reconnoitred the enemy's column, which was advancing upon Valls. As soon as we began to retire, the enemy followed us both with cavalry and infantry, and a squadron of the 4th hussars pressed closely upon our rear-guard, formed by Captain Wulffen's troop of the Brunswick hussars, and attempted to charge and overpower it. The enemy was opposed each time with determined spirit and resolution; and Captain Erichson, with his troop, being sent to the support of Captain Wulffen, the enemy were driven back, with the loss of one officer killed, another officer wounded, and between twenty and thirty men left sabred on the field. Sixteen prisoners and eleven horses fell into our hands. I had sincere pleasure in observing the spirit displayed by the officers and men of the Brunswick hussars.

Lieutenant-Colonel Schrader, at all times zealous, was particularly useful on this occasion in restraining the impetuosity of his men.

Circumstanced as we were, with a strong column of the enemy far advanced upon our right flank, and two battalions of infantry (as I was informed by the prisoners) upon our left and rear, and in an enclosed country, I did not deem it prudent to pursue the advantage we had gained.

I regret to say that Cornet Radant, of the Brunswick hussars, was wounded and taken, and I subjoin a return of the remainder of the wounded and missing.

I have the honour to be, &c.

FREDERICK BENTINCK, Colonel.

Extract of a Dispatch from Lieut. Gen. Lord William Bentinck to the Marquess of Wellington, dated Hospitalet, August 19, 1813.

I HAVE the honour to inform your Lordship, that the enemy blew up Tarragona last night, and have retired.

Admiralty-Office, September 4, 1813.

ADMIRAL Lord Keith has transmitted to Mr. Croker dispatches from Captain Sir George Collier, dated from Passages the 27th and 28th ult., announcing that a successful attack was made upon the island of Santa Clara, at the mouth of the harbour of Saint Sebastian, at three o'clock on the morning of the 27th, by the boats of the squadron, under the command of Lieutenant the Honourable James Arbuthnot, of His Majesty's ship Surveillante.

The boats were manned by the seamen and marines, and by a party of soldiers, under the command of Captain Cameron, of the 9th regiment.

The only landing-place was under a flight of steps, commanded by a small entrenchment thrown up on the west point, and completely exposed to the fire from grape of the whole range of works on the west side of the rock and walls of St. Sebastian's. These local circumstances enabled a very small garrison, of an officer and twenty-four men, to make a serious resistance, by which two of our men were killed, and one officer of the army, and another of the marines, and fifteen seamen and marines, were wounded.

The conduct of the officers and men was highly meritorious; each was anxious to be foremost. Lieutenant Bell, of the royal marines, had the good fortune first to succeed in getting on shore, and was immediately followed by Captain Cameron, of the 9th, and Captain Henderson, of the engineers.

Sir George Collier further states, that the batteries against Saint Sebastian's had opened again on the morning of the 26th, and continued a terrible fire on the place to the date of Sir George's last communication. A new sailor's battery had been erected on the island of Santa Clara, by which the works of the place would be enfiladed.

The casualties in the breaching batteries were few, and of the seamen employed in them, there had been but one wounded.
