Admiralty-Office, September 21, 1813.

LIEUTENANT Wallis, formerly Senior Lieutenant of His Majesty's sloop Vincejo, lately arrived from France, has transmitted to John Wilson Croker, Esq. a letter, of which the following is a copy, from the late Captain Wright, who commanded the said sloop, giving an account of her capture.

SIR,

May 14, 1804.

IBEG you will be pleased to lay before my Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, the following account of my proceedings subsequent to the date of my last report to the Admiral, in conformity to my orders to cruise in His Majesty's ship Vincejo between the Loire and L'Orient.

On successive days from the 28th April to the 4th instant, I chased several large convoys of the enemy, escorted by corvettes and divisions of their flotilla, into the Villaine, the Morbihan, Crac, and L'Orient, with little other effect, owing to light and variable winds, than interrupting their progress to their ultimate destination. On the evening of the 4th I discovered a large ship corvette at the entrance of L'Orient, apparently ready for sea, and learning soon after from a neutral, that her force was eighteen long eighteen-pounders and one hundred and sixty men, and her destination eastward, with a convoy of thirty sail, I proceeded in that direction to take a convenient station for intercepting her.

On approaching Belle Isle, on the 5th, I chased a convoy that had come through the Taignouse Passage, until they anchored under Palais, and continued watching them until the next forenoon, when I anchored within Howat, to shift a spring topmast, and make other necessary preparations for meeting the expected enemy.

At daylight, on the morning of the 7th, I recognised the same corvette I had seen at L'Orient (she came through the Taignouse Passage in the night) getting under way in the bay of Quiberon; she made all sail and steered large, with the wind from the northward, as if inclined to chase. I slipped from the anchorage and stood across the bay towards Saint Gildas, with an intention of getting so near as to offer her a fair opportunity, and leading her in a short chase towards Belle Isle, out of immediate reach of assistance from a superior force in the Morbihan, and Crac, which I had been in presence of for some weeks, there to give her battle: but she tacked in about an hour, and worked into the Morbihan. I remained within a few miles of her, and in the course of the day drove a sloop on shore between Saint Gildas and Saint Jacques. During the ensuing night I preserved a proper station to observe the corvette's motions; at daylight on the 8th the ship was becalmed close to the mouth of the river, and carried by the ebb tide, in less than an hour, so near to the Taignouse rock, that I was forced to anchor to avoidly to be squoyed, and warp into the fair channel.

As no opportunity of procuring a pilot had occurred, previous to my departure from England, nor of making myself acquainted with the periodical strength and direction of the tides in the channel since my arrival upon the station, I sent an officer to bring on board the Master of a fishing-boat, anchored within a mile or two of the shore, in hopes of obtaining some information from him: but his fears and his ignorance, or unwillingness, disappointed me.

By the time the ship was warped into the channel, and all hands placed at the sweeps, I found she was pursued by a large division of the enemy's flotilla, which had been perceived rowing out of the Morbihan, soon after she anchored.

By half past eight o'clock, the enemy had advanced within extreme range, and opened their fire: they continued rapidly gaining upon the ship, until about half past nine, when they were so near that I was compelled to sweep her broadside to, and engage under the greatest disadvantages the Vincejo could possibly be exposed to: a perfect calm, a strong flood tide then made against her, the people fatigued by hard labour at the oar, and divided during the action, between the larboard guns and the starboard sweeps.

This unequal contest was maintained with great animation and with frequent cheers, by my weak but gallant ship's company, for nearly two hours, within grape and hailing distance; the ship's hull, her masts, yards, and rigging, had at length received great damage; three guns were disabled; the fire was slackened, notwithstanding every effort to revive it, to one gun in about five minutes, by the booms falling upon the main deck, and the flower of my men being killed or wounded.

In this painful situation, without a chance of escape, or hope of succour, closely pressed in a dead calm, by seventeen gun-vessels, advancing to board with numerous troops; with a crew reduced to fifty efficient officers and seamen, including seventeen boys, I might still perhaps have opposed a momentary, though vain, resistance to such superior force, but I felt it a duty I owed my country, to surrender in time, to preserve the lives of my brave men for some better occasion.

Of the conduct of my officers and ship's company in general, their Lordships will form an adequate opinion, from the superiority of the enemy, compared with the length of the action; the retrospect of which, affords me consolation in misfortune, as it presents little to blame and much to commend and admire: but it is a pleasing duty of mine to particularise the active intrepidity and intelligent bravery of Lieutenants Wallis and Hall, and the distinguished gallantry and uncommon energy of Mr. Lewis, Acting Boatswain, whose death I lament as a severe loss to the service.

To these officers, and the small draft of seamen I received from the Utrecht, is greatly to be attributed the obstinacy of a conflict, in which I trust it will appear, that the honour of the country, and the reputation of the navy, have been supported to the utmost of our power.

Mr. Hiller, the Master, and the warrant and petty officers in general, acquitted themselves of their duty in the action, to my perfect satisfaction. I annex an account of the enemy's force, a list of my ship's company, at the commencement of the action; and a return of the killed and wounded, distinguishing by an asterisk against their names, those whose conduct justly recommends the survivors and the families of the deceased, as worthy objects of national munificence and remuneration.

Pointed out by my public services, as a peculiar object of the resentment of an ungenerous and ungrateful enemy; I must beg leave to recommend to your humanity the trouble of laying the claims of those unfortunate men before the national committee.

I have the honour to be, &c.

J. W. WRIGHT, Captain of His Majesty's late Brig Vincerjo.

VICE-ADMIRAL Sir Edward Pellew has transmitted to John Wilson Croker, Esq. a letter from Captain Dilkes, of His Majesty's ship Castor, addressed to Captain Adam, of the Invincible, stating, that on the 22d of June the boats of the former ship, under the directions of Lieutenants Loveless and Stanhope, boarded and brought out from under the protection of Fort Mongat, in Catalonia, La Fortune, a French privateer, of two guns, two swivels, and forty-eight men. Captain Dilkes highly commends the conduct of the officers and men employed on this service, in which, from the heavy fire of the enemy upon the boats, Mr. William Colford, boatswain of the Castor, and three men were killed, and nine wounded.
