

under the protection of a Constitution and Government like those of this United Kingdom, where the Monarch is enthroned in the hearts of His people, and where the laws, wisely calculated to promote, are executed with a regard to the welfare of all ranks of the community.

We cannot depart from your Royal Highness's presence, without expressing our admiration of the declaration of your Royal Highness to the Legislature, that no disposition to require from France sacrifices, inconsistent with her honour, or just pretensions as a nation, will ever, on the part of your Royal Highness, or on that of His Majesty's Allies, be an obstacle to peace. And we beg leave, most dutifully to assure your Royal Highness, that the Citizens of London will not be exceeded by any of His Majesty's subjects in their readiness to make such sacrifices as shall be necessary, to enable your Royal Highness to crown with final and complete success, in the attainment of a safe and honourable peace, those efforts, which have already been productive of such great and glorious results.

Signed, by order of Court,

HENRY WOODTHORPE.

To which Address His Royal Highness was graciously pleased to return the following Answer :

I receive with great satisfaction this loyal and dutiful Address.

The unexampled successes, with which it has pleased Divine Providence to bless the arms of His Majesty, and of his Allies, afford the fairest prospect of the restoration of that independence and security to the continent of Europe, of which it has been so long deprived, by the domineering ambition of the Ruler of France.

Great and unfeigned exertions are, however, still indispensably necessary; and I am fully persuaded, that the continued and further sacrifices which they may require, will be made by the Citizens of London, and by all descriptions of His Majesty's subjects, with the same fortitude and perseverance which have eminently distinguished this country throughout the whole of the present contest, and of which we may now, with increased confidence, expect the reward, in an honourable and lasting peace.

They were all received very graciously, and had the honour of kissing the hand of His Royal Highness.
