Lord Chamberlain's-Office, June 4, 1814.

NOTICE is hereby given, that Her Majesty will hold a Drawing-Room at the Queen's-Palace, on Thursday the 16th instant, at two o'clock.

The doors will be opened for the reception of the company at one o'clock.

Carlton-House, June 9, 1814.

THIS Day the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor, the Aldermen, Recorder, Sheriffs, Common Council, and Officers of the City of London, waited upon His Royal Highness the Prince Regent with the following Address, which was read by John Silvester, Esq. the Recorder :

To His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales,
REGENT of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

The humble, dutiful, and loyal Address of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled.

May it please your Royal Highness,

WE, His Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled, approach your Royal Highness with the most heartfelt congratulations upon the signature of the Definitive Treaty of Peace between His Majesty and the Most Christian King.

We cannot, Royal Sir, upon this occasion but look back with the highest admiration at the firmness, the wisdom, and the energy which have been exercised by our beloved country during this long and arduous struggle—had not Britain persevered, the liberties of Europe might have been lost: had not her valiant sons been foremost in victory, both by sea and land, it is too probable that the glorious emulation exhibited by her great Allies would have been still dormant: had not her triumphant armies, under the immortal Wellington, co-operated with the brave inhabitants in rescuing the Peninsula from the grasp of an unprincipled invader, Germany and Holland might yet have groaned under the iron despotism of the oppressor, and the efforts of the magnanimous Alexander have been ineffectual to relieve them. These astonishing energies, we believe to have been called forth by that admirable Constitution of Government which Britons possess as the best inheritance derived from their fathers, and which, with proud satisfaction we observe, is considered as affording the true basis of civil liberty by surrounding nations.

We must ever admire the ardour and decision manifested by your Royal Highness in affording every possible assistance to a cause so sacred, which, under Divine Providence, has not only been crowned with the most complete success, but has restored the blessings of peace to so large a portion of the human race.

We cannot doubt, from the spirit of concord with which the negotiations commenced, combined with the moderation and sound judgement so conspicuous in the conduct of the Allies, but that the terms of peace, reciprocally beneficial to both countries, will afford a long continuance of that amity which now happily subsists between His Majesty and the Most Christian King.

Signed, by order of Court,

Henry Woodthorpe,

To which Address His Royal Highness was pleased to return the following most gracious Answer:—

“ I thank you for this dutiful and loyal Address.

“ I receive with peculiar satisfaction your congratulations on the happy termination of the long and arduous struggle in which we have been engaged; and I feel a pride in acknowledging with you, how much the attainment of that great object is to be ascribed, under the blessing of Divine Providence, to the resolution, firmness, and perseverance of the magnanimous people of these realms.

“ It is a most gratifying reflection, that the happy Constitution of our country has remained
