PRESENT,

His Royal Highness the PRINCE REGENT in Council.

It is this day ordered by His Royal Highness the Prince Regent in Council, in the name and on the behalf of His Majesty, that the prohibition, under the Order in Council of the twenty-first of January last, against the exportation of sheet copper, be, and the said prohibition is, hereby taken off. And the Right Honourable the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury, the Commissioners for executing the Office of Lord High Admiral of Great Britain, and the Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, are to give the necessary directions herein as to them may respectively appertain.

Jas. Buller.

Lord Chamberlain's Office, June 28, 1814.

NOTICE is hereby given, that Her Majesty will hold a Drawing Room at the Queen's Palace, on Thursday the 14th of July next, at two o'clock.

THE following Addresses have been presented to His Royal Highness the Prince Regent; which Addresses His Royal Highness was pleased to receive very graciously:

To His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, REGENT of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

May it please your Royal Highness,

WE, His Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Deputy Lieutenants, Freeholders, Justices of the Peace, and Commissioners of Supply of the County of Aberdeen, beg your Royal Highness's gracious acceptance of our most humble and earnest congratulations on the brilliant success which has crowned His Majesty's arms, and those of His Allies, in the liberation of so large a portion of the civilized world, from the oppression of a most arrogant and unprincipled system of tyrannical domination.

It is our pride to be subjects of an empire so powerful, as to have first set an example to the other nations of Europe, which has been productive of such glorious results.

We rejoice in the prospect, which these happy events afford, of the speedy restoration of secure, honourable, and permanent peace; and we beg leave to express our unalterable sentiments of veneration and loyalty to His Majesty's most sacred person, and of dutiful respect and attachment to your Royal Highness.

Signed in our name, and by our appointment, at Aberdeen, the 3d day of June 1814 years.

A. Hay, Preses.

[Transmitted by A. Hay, Esq. and presented by Viscount Sidmouth.]

To His Royal Highness the PRINCE REGENT of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

Most Gracious Prince,

DEEPLY impressed with sentiments of gratitude and affection towards your Royal Highness's Person and Government, we the Mayor, Recorder, and Aldermen of Kingston-upon-Hull, eagerly embrace the earliest opportunity to offer to your Royal Highness our warm and dutiful congratulations on the termination of the calamities of war, which have so long desolated and afflicted all the nations of Europe; and on the restoration of peace on such a basis as promises to ensure permanent tranquillity.

Happy in the experience of your Royal Highness's anxiety for the interests and welfare of the people committed to your care, we look forward with a well-grounded confidence to the various and important national advantages, which may be expected to flow from so auspicious an event; the re-establishment and duration of the commerce, happiness, and prosperity of the British dominions, and the lasting security of the liberty and independence of the nations of Europe.

We cannot on this occasion refrain from expressing our sincere acknowledgements for the solicitude your Royal Highness has evinced to induce the King of France to unite his efforts with those of the British Government, at the approaching Congress, to cause all the Powers of Christendom to proclaim the universal and total abolition of the slave trade, and we rejoice that your Royal Highness's endeavours have not been exerted in vain, to obtain at present, as we hope, some alleviation of the misery of that trade in the colonies of France, and the promise of His Most Christian Majesty that it shall entirely cease in the dominions of France, within five years, and we most earnestly hope and trust, that when assembled at the General Congress, all the Powers of Christendom, influenced by the example of this country, aided by the powerful interference of the Allied Sovereigns, who have acted so conspicuous, and so glorious a part in the salvation of Europe, will concur in the immediate and total abolition of that horrid traffic, which has so long been a stain and reproach to the Christian world.

Given under our common seal, the 14th day of June, in the year of our Lord 1814, John Carrick, Mayor.

[Transmitted by His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, set out from Carlton House, and arrived at the Government House, Portsmouth, about four o'clock the same evening.]

Her Most Excellent Highness the Princess of Wales, ALICE, in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

The humble Address of the Freeholders, Justices of Peace, Commissioners of Supply, and Inhabitants of the County of Kincardine.

WE, His Majesty's most loyal and dutiful subjects, the Freeholders, Justices of Peace, Commissioners of Supply, and Inhabitants of the County of Kincardine, beg leave humbly to approach your Royal Highness with our most heartfelt congratulations on the glorious issue of the long and arduous struggle in which the British empire has been engaged, and on the cheering prospect of the blessings of peace.

It cannot fail to excite our exultation and gratitude, that consequences so glorious to Britain, to Europe, and to the world, have been achieved, through the blessing of Providence, by the perseverance and constancy of His Majesty's Government, and the magnanimity of the Allied Powers; and we fervently hope, that the wisdom of your Royal Highness's Administration may continue to secure to the British empire the fruits of its great and arduous exertions, by which the principles of our envied constitution have been preserved amidst the dangers and revolutions of other States.

Signed, at the request and by appointment of a public meeting, held at St. James's Hall, the 30th day of May, 1814, by General William Gordon, of Eyrie, our Representative.

William Gordon, Preses.
[Transmitted by His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, set out from Carlton House, and arrived at the Government House, Portsmouth, about four o'clock the same evening.]

St. James's, June 27, 1814.

Their Majesties the Emperor of Russia and the King of Prussia having expressed a desire to see the fleet and arsenal at Portsmouth, His Royal Highness the Prince Regent was pleased to direct, that the Board of Admiralty should repair to Portsmouth, and that the flag of the Lord High Admiral, as well as that of His Royal Highness the Admiral of the Fleet, should be hoisted on this occasion.

On Sunday the 19th instant, His Royal Highness the Duke of Clarence hoisted the Union on board His Majesty's ship Jason, and was saluted with seventeen guns.

On Monday the 20th, the flag of the Lord High Admiral was hoisted on board His Majesty's ship Ville de Paris, of one hundred and ten guns, at Spithead, and saluted with nineteen guns by the whole fleet, and the flag of the Admiral of the Fleet was shifted to the Impregnable, of ninety-eight guns. On Tuesday the 21st, the flag of the Admiralty was shifted to His Majesty's ship Bombay, of seventy-four guns, in Portsmouth Harbour, and the flag of Vice-Admiral Sir H. Neale, Bart. was hoisted in the Ville de Paris.

On Wednesday the 22d, about nine o'clock, His Royal Highness the Prince Regent, accompanied by His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, set out from Carlton House, and arrived at the Government House, Portsmouth, about four o'clock the same evening.

On the arrival of His Royal Highness at Portsmouth-Hill, he was received with a royal salute of twenty-one guns from a brigade of light artillery stationed at that point; and at the same moment a royal salute was also fired from all the ships and vessels of war lying at Spithead.

When His Royal Highness arrived at the Landport Gate, he was received by Lieutenant-General Houstoun, Lieutenant-Governor of the garrison, who presented His Royal Highness with the keys of the town, which His Royal Highness was pleased immediately to return to the Lieutenant-Governor.

On His Royal Highness's entering the place, he was saluted with a triple discharge of all the artillery on the ramparts and the lines, and all the ships and vessels fired a royal salute; and these salutes were again repeated when His Royal Highness alighted from his carriage at the Government House.

At some distance from the town, His Royal Highness had been met by a party of the ropemakers of His Majesty's Dock-Yard, wearing scarves and bearing white staves, who ran before the royal carriage, agreeably to an ancient custom.

The road, streets, ramparts, and the parade were crowded with spectators, who received His Royal Highness with the greatest demonstrations of loyalty and affection.

His Royal Highness was received at the Government House by the Secretary of State for the Home Department, the Board of Admiralty, the Commissioners of the Navy, His Royal Highness the Admiral of the Fleet, Lieutenant-General Houstoun, &c. &c.

The Prince Regent immediately held a levee, at which the Admiral of the Fleet presented to His Royal Highness Admiral Sir R. Dickenson, commanding at the Port; Vice-Admirals Martin, and Sir Harry Neale, Bart.; Rear-Admirals Sir F. Laforey, Bart., Foote, and Martin; and all the Captains and Commanders in commission at the port.

They were all most graciously received, and had the honour to kiss His Royal Highness's hand.

Immediately after the levee, His Royal Highness proceeded with his attendants to the balcony in front of the Government House, where he was received by the people with the greatest joy, and His Royal Highness was pleased to express his satisfaction at the duty and loyalty which the people displayed on this occasion, and indeed on every subsequent opportunity which they had of seeing His Royal Highness.

At seven o'clock, His Royal Highness sat down to a dinner of forty covers, to which the Secretary of State, the Members of the Admiralty Board, the Controller of the Navy, all Flag-Officers in commission, the Lieutenant-Governor of Portsmouth, and the General Officers on the Staff, and several other persons of distinction had the honour of being invited.

About half past seven, His Majesty the King of Prussia, accompanied by their Royal Highnesses the Prince Royal, Prince William, Prince William His Majesty's brother, and Prince Frederic of Prussia, and attended by Lord Charles Bentinck and several persons of His Majesty's Court, were met outside the town by a guard of honour, which conducted His Majesty to the Lieutenant-Governor's house, which had been prepared for His Majesty's residence.

A guard of honour also awaited the arrival of His Majesty the Emperor, who arrived about nine o'clock in the evening, accompanied by Her Imperial Highness the Grand Duchess Catherine, and attended by the Earl of Yarmouth, Count Lieven, His Imperial Majesty's Ambassador, and by several other Noblemen of the Imperial Court.

His Imperial Majesty and Her Imperial Highness proceeded to the Commissioner's house in the Dock-yard, which had been prepared for their residence.

Thursday, June 22.

This morning, at ten o'clock, His Royal Highness the Prince Regent, accompanied by His Royal Highness the Duke of York, who had arrived late the preceding evening, and His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, proceeded in his carriage to the residence of His Majesty the King of Prussia, and thence His Royal Highness and His Majesty, with the Princes of Great Britain and Prussia, proceeded to the Commissioner's house in the Dock-yard, where they were received by His Majesty the Emperor of Russia, and conducted to His apartments. The Secretary of State for the Home Department, the Board of Admiralty, and the Commissioners of the Navy being in attendance at the Commissioner's House to receive His Royal Highness.

After a short delay, His Royal Highness, their Imperial and Royal Majesties, with their Imperial and Royal Highnesses the Grand Duchess and the Princes of Great Britain and Prussia, and attended by the Board of Admiralty, the Navy Board, and the suites of the Emperor and King, proceeded through the Dock-yard, amidst the acclamations of the officers and spectators to the King's Stairs, where His Royal Highness the Prince Regent, their Majesties the Emperor and King, Her Imperial Highness the Grand Duchess, Her attendants, their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, attended by the Viscount Melville, First Lord Commissioner of the Admiralty, embarked in the barge prepared for their reception, in which the royal standard of Great Britain was immediately hoisted, and proceeded down the harbour to Spithead.

Ahead of the royal barge, on the right hand, a barge carried the imperial standard of Russia, and another, in the same situation, on the left, carried the royal standard of Prussia; both these barges were filled with the suites of the respective Sovereigns.

The Board of Admiralty, with the Ambassadors of Austria and Russia, and several other persons of distinction, in their barge, bearing the flag of their Office, immediately preceded His Royal Highness's barge.

The barges of the Admirals and Captains, carrying their respective flags and pennants, followed in two lines according to their seniority, the barge of the Admiral of the Fleet, in which His Royal Highness the Duke of Clarence, with their Royal Highnesses the Dukes of York and Cambridge, and His Serene Highness, the Duke of Saxe-Weimar, were embarked, leading the starboard line, and that of the Admiral of the Port, in which were the Admiral and several persons of the royal suite, leading the larboard line.

As the Prince Regent passed the battery, he was saluted with twenty-one guns from the battery on the platform, and when the royal standard was seen from the fleet at Spithead, His Royal Highness was saluted in the same manner from the several ships there, which was repeated by the guns on the platform, and as the royal barge passed the ships (commencing with the westernmost of the line), the yards were all manned, and their companies gave three hearty cheers, the guards being turned out, beating a march, and the Officers saluting.

On His Royal Highness and their Majesties going on board the Impregnable, the sides were manned by Lieutenants, and His Royal Highness was received at the head of the ladder by the Captain of the Fleet; and as soon as His Royal Highness passed the guard of marines on the quarter-deck, where he was received by His Royal Highness the Admiral of the Fleet, the Union flag was struck and shifted to the Chatham, of seventy-four guns, and the royal standard was hoisted at the maintop mast-head, the flag of the Admiralty at the foretop mast-head, and the Union flag at the mizen. The Admiralty flag was also shifted from the Bombay in the harbour to the Ville de Paris, and the flag of Vice-Admiral Sir H. Neale, Bart. to the Norge, of seventy-four guns.

The standard was immediately saluted by the whole fleet, except the Impregnable, as before, and the salute was answered by an equal number of guns from the battery on the platform.

His Royal Highness, accompanied by their Majesties, the Grand Duchess, and the Princes, visited steep part of the ship, with which they expressed themselves in the highest degree gratified.

His Royal Highness and their Majesties, and the other distinguished persons, had partaken of a collation in the great cabin of the Impregnable, they were pleased to gratify the immense crowd which had assembled round the ship, by appearing severally at the entrance port; and His Royal Highness and their Majesties were received with the most enthusiastic expressions of joy; and when His Royal Highness retired, the people spontaneously sang "God save the King."

His Royal Highness was so much pleased with his visit, that he expressed his intention of returning to Spithead the next day, and he desired the fleet might be kept ready for getting under weigh as soon as the tide should serve.

On His Royal Highness and their Majesties leaving the Impregnable, a royal salute was again fired by the whole fleet, and the barges proceeded in the order in which they came, except that the Emperor of Russia and his suite embarked in the barge which bore his flag, and was followed by one of the lines of barges, while the barge which bore the royal standard of Great Britain led the other, the barge of the Board of Admiralty preceding both.

When the barges approached the shore at South Sea Quay, they were saluted by a feu de joie, which was fired by the troops drawn up on South Sea Beach, and on the ramparts of the town, and by the acclamations of the people, who covered the beach and ramparts, and a royal salute was fired from the battery on the platform, and the feu de joie and the acclamations of the crowd were repeated and continued while the royal barge was passing.

The Prince Regent, the King of Prussia, and the Empress of Austria, and the suites of His Royal Highness and His Majesty, landed at the Sally Port, while His Majesty the Emperor of Russia proceeded to the King's Stairs at the Dock-Yard.

His Royal Highness, accompanied by His Majesty, walked from Sally Port to the Government-House, amidst the acclamations of the crowds that filled the street, and testified by every possible means their joy at seeing amongst them His Royal Highness and His illustrious guests.

In the evening His Royal Highness had a dinner of above one hundred and twenty covers, where their Majesties, the Grand Duchess, the Princes, and their respective suites, dined; and to which several distinguished foreigners, the Board of Admiralty, the Ministers, and naval and military Officers of the rank of Post Captain and Colonel respectively, had the honour to be invited.

In the course of the evening, the Prince Regent and their Majesties were pleased to gratify the wishes of the people by appearing on the balcony, and were again received with every demonstration of joy.

Friday, June 24.

This morning at ten o'clock, His Royal Highness and His Majesty the King of Prussia, and their respective royal families and suites, again met His Majesty the Emperor at the Commissioner's house in the Dock-Yard, and proceeded on foot to visit the Yard.

His Royal Highness conducted their Majesties through the several store houses, rigging lofts, rope houses, the anchor forge, the wood mills, and metal mills, and in all those places His Royal Highness and their Majesties were pleased to express their approbation of the good order, zeal, and ingenuity displayed by the respective officers and artificers.

His Royal Highness and the King of Prussia afterwards proceeded to the King's stairs to embark in the barges; while His Majesty the Emperor of Russia, accompanied by the Grand Duchess, and attended by Lord Viscount Melville, the Earl of Yarmouth, and the Imperial suite, continued to inspect the Dock-Yard, and afterwards crossed over to visit Haslar-Hospital.

His Imperial Majesty, after expressing the greatest satisfaction at the general system of the Hospital, and the good order and comfort which appeared to prevail therein, returned with his suite to the Commissioner's House in the Dock-Yard.

The Prince Regent and the King of Prussia having embarked, the procession moved slowly in the same order as the day preceding to Spithead, and the Royal party went on board the Royal Sovereign yacht, where the royal standard and the flag of the Admiralty and the union were hoisted, as they had before been in the Impregnable.

His Royal Highness was then pleased to direct a signal to be made for the fleet getting under weigh, which was immediately executed, and the whole squadron stood out to sea with a favourable breeze.

When the fleet had proceeded as far as St. Helen's, the Prince Regent, the King, and the Princes, attended as before, went on board the Impregnable, where they were received with the same demonstrations; the standard, the flag of the Admiralty, and the union being hoisted as before.

The fleet, now under full sail, performed several evolutions, and manœuvred with the greatest celerity and precision, till about four o'clock, when being about five leagues from the anchorage, the fleet tacked and continued to wear up to Spithead till about seven, when it had regained its former position, and His Royal Highness and the King, and their respective royal families and suites, again entered their barges, and proceeded as the day before, and under similar feus de joie, and the like acclamations of the people, to Sally Port, where they landed, and immediately proceeded to the Government-House, where they were received by the Earl Bathurst, Secretary of State for the War Department, and His Grace Marshal the Duke of Wellington, who had just arrived from town.

At eight o'clock His Royal Highness sat down to a dinner of one hundred and twenty covers, at which the Emperor and King, the Grand Duchess, and the Princes were entertained; and the Secretaries of State, the Board of Admiralty, and the other distinguished persons of the royal and Imperial suites, and the Officers of the Navy and Army, of the ranks of Captain and Colonel respectively, had again the honour of being invited.

In the course of the evening the Prince Regent and their Majesties again appeared on the balcony, and were received as before, with every expression of the popular joy; and at night His Royal Highness was pleased to invite the noblemen, gentlemen, and naval and military officers at Portsmouth and its vicinity, with their ladies, to a ball and supper, which their Majesties the Emperor and King, and their Royal Highnesses the Princes, honoured with their presence.

Saturday, June 25
This morning, about nine o'clock, His Royal Highness held a levee at the Government House, at which the Mayor and Corporation of the Borough of Portsmouth were introduced, to present the following address:

To His Royal Highness the PRINCE REGENT.

Most Illustrious Prince,

With His Majesty's most faithful and loyal subjects, the Mayor, Aldermen and Burgesses of the ancient Borough of Portsmouth, offer our duty and congratulations to your Royal Highness, on your approaching this place with your presence. We more particularly congratulate your Royal Highness, on this event being rendered so auspicious, by the presence of those august Personages who accompany you, and who, by their conduct and valor, by their heroism and intrepidity, have so eminently contributed to deliver Europe, and to give us the inestimable blessing of peace. This event, under the permission of Divine Providence, has been accomplished by the wisdom of your Royal Highness's councils, the exertions and co-operation of His Majesty's fleets and armies, and thus saved us from the wretched state of anarchy and confusion which has visited other nations.

Those excellent laws which raised this nation to the highest state of prosperity, which enabled us to make a war unequalled for its sanguinary effects on former times; these laws we trust will now be appreciated by other nations, and under the influence of them, peace and happiness cover the earth. With hearts full of zeal, we beg to assure your Royal Highness, we will on all occasions approve ourselves dutiful, loyal and affectionate subjects, and most truly support our valuable constitution. We cannot take leave of your Royal Highness, without expressing our hope, that the Almighty will look down on your good and virtuous Father, and smooth the evening of a life, which has been so devoted to the honour and welfare of His subjects.

To which His Royal Highness was pleased to give the following gracious answer:

"I thank you for this loyal and dutiful Address."

"It is with particular satisfaction that I receive your congratulations at this place; distinguished as it is by the presence of illustrious Allies of His Majesty, whose wisdom and magnanimity have been so eminently instrumental in terminating the calamities of Europe. I reflect with pride and exultation, on the conduct of all descriptions of His Majesty's subjects, throughout a contest the most arduous, in the prosecution of which they manifested a degree of fortitude and constancy, of which history affords no example.

"The sentiments which you have expressed towards my Royal Father, are highly grateful to my feelings. It is to a firm adherence to the principles, which He invariably maintained and cherished, that, under the favour of a gracious Providence, the glorious result of all our exertions is chiefly to be ascribed."

His Royal Highness was pleased, on this occasion, to confer the honour of knighthood on Henry White, Esq. the Mayor of Portsmouth, as also on Vice-Admiral Martin, Henry Peake, Esq. one of the Surveyors of the Navy, and Captain Freeman Barton, of the 2d (or Queen's Own) regiment of foot.

His Royal Highness was also pleased to intimate his intention of conferring the title of a Baronet of the United Kingdom on the Honourable George Grey, Commissioner of the Dock-Yard.

His Royal Highness, and their Imperial and Royal Majesties, and the Princes, and their suites, then left Portsmouth, and after reviewing the troops, who were stationed on Portsdown Hill, proceeded to Networth, the seat of the Earl of Egremont, on their way to Dover, where the Emperor and King had arranged to embark for the Continent.

Before His Royal Highness left Portsmouth, he commanded the expression of his perfect satisfaction at the appearance, manœuvres, and discipline of the fleet, to be conveyed to the Admirals, Captains, Officers, seamen, and royal marines; and His Royal Highness was pleased to direct that the two Senior Commanders of ships at Spithead should be promoted to the rank of Post Captains of His Majesty's Fleet, the First Lieutenant of the Impregnable, and the Lieutenant of the Royal Sovereign yacht, in which ships the royal standard had been hoisted, and the First Lieutenants of the Flag-Officers' ships, viz. the Prince, Ville de Paris, Rodney, Queen, and St. Domingo, to be promoted to the rank of Commanders; and two Midshipmen from each of those ships and yacht to be made Lieutenants; he also directed the sum of three thousand pounds to be distributed among the artificers, workmen and labourers of the Dock-Yard, including the Ordinary and Victualling Department; and to the crews of the Impregnable and Royal Sovereign yacht, one hundred pounds to the poor of the parishes of Portsmouth and Portsea; fifty pounds to the poor of the parish of Gosport; and fifty pounds to the debtors in Portsmouth gaol.

The weather was, in every respect, favourable during His Royal Highness's stay; and nothing could exceed the magnificence and splendour of the scene which Portsmouth and Spithead exhibited during the whole visit. Great numbers of the Nobility and Gentry from all parts of the country had repaired to Portsmouth; and when His Royal Highness went afloat, the crowds of sailing vessels and boats which covered Spithead, ornamented with flags, and filled with company, afforded the most brilliant and gratifying spectacle that can be imagined.

The towns of Portsmouth and Gosport, and the neighbourhood, were brilliantly illuminated every nights; and the inhabitants, vied with each other in displaying transparencies and devices, expressive of affection for His Royal Highness's person, and Government; and their gratitude for the signal victories and blessings which had been achieved under His auspices. Indeed wherever His Royal Highness appeared, he was received with the liveliest expression of joy on the part of the people; and on his going to Portsmouth, the towns and villages were crowded with spectators, who had collected from all parts of the country; flags and banners were flying out from the windows, and triumphal arches, adorned with laurel and wreaths of flowers, were erected in several places through which His Royal Highness passed.

The satisfaction with which His Royal Highness received these magnificent demonstrations of the affection of the people was heightened by the happy coincidence of these two standings; the immense concourse of persons collected every where on shore, and the innumerable boats and vessels which crowded Spithead, and extended till floor to sea, to accident what ever was known to have occurred.

On the evening of the 27th day the Prince Regent returned to Bonn, highly satisfied with an excursion which appeared to give equal pleasure to His Royal Highness, and to all those who had the happiness to approach His Royal Person.
