

To His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, REGENT of the United Kingdoms of Great Britain and Ireland.

The humble Address of the Mayor, Aldermen, and Capital Burgesses, of the Borough of Doncaster, in the County of York.

WE, His Majesty's loyal and dutiful subjects, the Mayor, Aldermen, and Capital Burgesses, of the Borough of Doncaster, in common council assembled, beg leave humbly to approach your Royal Highness, with our declaration of that deeply felt joy, which the recent change in public affairs has impressed upon every British heart.
 But lately, the rapacious tyrant of France, insatiate of blood and conquest, and heading a vast confederacy, diffused terror and almost despair, over the continent of Europe. One illustrious Power checked the torrent in its destructive course; a renovated courage inspired surrounding nations;— the yoke of subjection was thrown off, and the vast fabric of despotism crumbled into atoms. In the long and arduous contest, now so happily terminated, the vigour, the talents, the great and expanded views of your Royal Highness's government, have shone conspicuous; neither has the honour of the nation in its engagements, its generous concessions to the wants of its Allies, and its unappalled fortitude in the severest reverses of fortune, been less an object of admiration. We trust, Sir, that the great lesson which this country has afforded, will not be lost on the states of Europe, now united with us in strict alliance. It was a free nation, governed by a Monarch, in whose family the principles of freedom are an hereditary transmission, which, at the first moment of French aggression, assumed that elevated position from which it has never yet descended. It was a free nation, powerful through institutions, which efficiently unite the wisdom and vigour of a whole people, that could alone have sustained a conflict so formidable. It was that eminence of wealth, to which just and equal laws, the sure offspring of freedom, lead, that covered the ocean with our fleets, augmented our domestic establishments to a state of proud security, and with profuse liberality, poured our troops and our treasure, into the oppressed countries of our Allies.

In offering to your Royal Highness our sincere congratulations upon this happy occasion, we beg at the same time, to express our earnest hope, that this country, in common with the other nations of Europe, may long enjoy the blessings of a solid and honourable peace.

Sealed with our common seal, the 18th day of July 1814. Thos. Brooke, Mayor.
