THE following Address has been presented to His Royal Highness the Prince Regent; which Address His Royal Highness was pleased to receive very graciously:

To His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, REGENT of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

The Address and Congratulation of the Chancellor, Rector, Principal, Professors and Masters of His Majesty's Marischal College and University of Aberdeen.

WE, His Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Chancellor, Rector, Principal, Professors and Masters of the Marischal College and University of Aberdeen, beg leave, with all humility and respect, to present to your Royal Highness our lively and sincere congratulations on the happy restoration of Peace between His Majesty's dominions and the enemy with whom he had successfully waged so long, so expensive, and so desolating a war. While we feel all the value of the blessings of Peace, we look back, with those sentiments which become the British character, on the splendid energies which our countrymen have displayed during the arduous contest; and we contemplate, with the delight of patriotism, that preeminent rank among the nations which this happy termination of it has assigned to Great Britain.—We bless that adorable Providence which, by a gracious and unexpected interposition, arrested the course of boundless ambition and tyranny, and opened the way to that safe and honourable Peace, which we trust we shall long enjoy. We pray that the same gracious and omnipotent Power may speedily restore universal peace, conciliate the two contending nations, which are descended from the same origin, and remove the only ground of regret, amidst our present exhilirating prospects,—our apprehensions of the revival of the Slave Trade, abolished by the British Legislature, as repugnant to justice, humanity and religion, as well as to the views of enlightened policy.

We beg leave to assure your Royal Highness, that we shall continue to instil into the minds of the youth committed to our care, the principles of sound morality and religion, which are the great foundations of the prosperity of States and Empires, and of that pure and rational liberty which our excellent Constitution of Government dictates and inspires.

That the Supreme Governor of the world may look down, with an eye of consolation and mercy, on our gracious Sovereign the King, and that he may direct and prosper the administration of your Royal Highness, is the fervent prayer, may it please your Royal Highness, of His Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Chancellor, Rector, Principal, Professors and Masters of His Majesty's Marischal College and University of Aberdeen.

Marquess of Huntly, Chancellor.

VICE-ADMIRAL Sir Alexander Cochrane has transmitted to John Wilson Croker, Esq. a letter from Rear-Admiral Hotham, inclosing one from Captain Sir Thomas Hardy, of His Majesty's ship Ramillies, dated off Stonington, the 12th August, giving an account of an attack made upon that place by the said ship, with the Pactolus, Dispatch brig, and Terror bomb.

The Dispatch, on the 9th August, anchored within pistol-shot of the battery, but the Pactolus not being able to approach the shore, near enough to support her, the brig was recalled, having had two men killed and twelve wounded.

On the 11th, after the Terror had thrown in some shells and carcasses, the Ramillies and Pactolus anchored as near as the shallowness of the water would allow, and fired several broadsides into the town, from which it suffered great damage. At the commencement of the fire the enemy withdrew the guns from the battery to the outside of the town, where they had assembled three thousand militia.

The town of Stonington had been conspicuous in preparing and harbouring torpedoes, and giving assistance to the enemy's attempts at the destruction of His Majesty's ships off New London.

Sir Alexander Cochrane has also transmitted a report from Sir Thomas Hardy, of the occupation of the islands in Passamaquaddy Bay, the account of which, as transmitted by Lieutenant-General Sir John Sherbrook from Lieutenant-Colonel Pilkington, appeared in the Gazette of the 13th of August.

Admiralty-Office, October 1, 1814.

VICE-ADMIRAL Sir Alexander Cochrane has transmitted to John Wilson Croker, Esq. a series of reports addressed to the Vice-Admiral by Rear-Admiral Cockburn, lately commanding His Majesty's ships and vessels stationed in the Chesapeake, of which the following are abstracts:

June 1.—The Rear-Admiral incloses a letter from Captain Ross, of His Majesty's ship Albion, dated off Tangier Sound, the 29th May, giving an account of his having, with the boats of that ship and the Dragon, proceeded into the River Pungoteik, in Virginia, for the purpose of destroying any batteries or capturing any vessels that he might find there. There were no vessels in the river, but a party of seamen and marines were landed to attack a battery, which they took possession of, after a short firing, notwithstanding the militia which collected on the occasion, and re-embarked, after destroying the work, barracks, and guard-houses, and bringing away a six-pounder gun with its carriage.

June 22.—The Rear-Admiral transmits four letters from Captain Barrie, of His Majesty's ship Dragon, dated between the 1st and 19th June, reporting his proceedings while dispatched by Rear-Admiral Cockburn, against the flotilla fitted out at Baltimore, under the orders of Commodore Barney.

On the 1st June, Captain Barrie, with the St. Lawrence schooner, and the boats of the Albion and Dragon, fell in with the flotilla standing down the Chesapeake, and retreated before it towards the Dragon, then at anchor off Smith's Point. This ship having got under weigh, Captain Barrie wore with the schooner and boats, but the flotilla made off and escaped into the Patuxent River. The Dragon being obliged to come again to an anchor, and the boats not being strong enough to attack the flotilla, Captain Barrie endeavoured to induce the enemy to separate his force by detaching two boats to cut off a schooner under Cove Point: but the Americans suffered this vessel to be burnt in the face of the flotilla, without attempting to save her.

On the 6th, the flotilla retreated higher up the Patuxent, and Captain Barrie being joined on the following day by the Loire and Jaseur brig, he proceeded up the river with them, the St. Lawrence schooner, and the boats of the Albion and Dragon. The enemy retreated into St. Leonard's Creek, into which they could only be pursued by the boats, which were too inferior in force to allow of any attack being made with them alone: Captain Barrie endeavoured, however, to provoke the enemy by rockets and carronades from the boats, to come down within reach of the ship's guns. The flotilla was at one time so much galled by these attacks, that it quitted its position and chased the boats, but after a slight skirmish with the smaller vessels, it returned precipitately to its original position.

With a view to force the flotilla to quit this station, detachments of seamen and marines were landed on both sides of the river, and the enemy's militia, (though assembled to the numbers of three to five hundred,) retreating before them into the woods; the marines destroyed two tobacco stores, and several houses, which formed military posts.

On the 15th the Narcissus joined, and Captain Barrie determined to proceed up the river with twelve boats, having in them one hundred and eighty marines, and thirty of the black colonial corps; they proceeded to Benedict, whence a party of regulars fled at their approach, leaving behind several muskets, and part of their camp equipage, with a six-pounder, which was spiked; a store of tobacco was also found there. Captain Barrie advanced from thence towards Marlborough, and although only eighteen miles from Washington, took possession of the place, the militia and inhabitants flying into the wood. A schooner was loaded with tobacco, and the boats plentifully supplied with stock; after which, having burnt tobacco stores, containing two thousand five hundred hogsheads, the detachment re-embarked. The enemy collected three hundred and sixty regulars, and some militia, on some cliffs, which the boats had to pass; but some marines being landed, traversed the skirts of the heights, and re-embarked without molestation; and the enemy did not shew himself till the boats were out of gun-shot.

Captain Barrie commends, in high terms, the conduct of all the officers and men, seamen, and marines, under his orders, as well as that of the colonial corps, composed of armed blacks: and Rear-Admiral Cockburn takes the opportunity of expressing his high sense of the personal exertions and able conduct displayed by Captain Barrie.

25th June.—The Rear-Admiral transmits a report from Lieutenant Urmston, First of the Albion, of a successful attack made by the boats of the squadron, under the Lieutenant's direction, on a post established by the enemy at Chissenessick, on the main land abreast of Watt's Island. The detachment landed, notwithstanding a fire of grape and musketry, drove the enemy from the post, and destroyed the guard-houses, &c. bringing away a six-pounder, the only gun of the enemy at that place. Great gallantry was displayed by all employed on this occasion.

July 6.—The Rear-Admiral incloses two reports addressed to him by Captains Brown and Nourse, of the Loire and Severn; the former dated the 27th of June, states that the enemy having established a battery on the banks of the Patuxent, which opened on the Loira and Narcissus, he had judged it proper to move the two ships lower down the river, when the flotilla under Commodore Barney moved out of St. Leonard's Creek, and ran higher up the Patuxent, with the exception of one row-boat, which returned to the creek, apparently damaged by the fire of the frigates; the letter from Captain Nourse, dated the 4th July, reports his joining the ships in the Patuxent; and having moved them up beyond St. Leonard's Creek, he sent Captain Brown with the marines of the ships up the Creek, by whom two of the enemy's gun-boats that were found drawn up and scuttled, were with several other vessels burnt, and a large tobacco store destroyed.

July 19.—The Rear-Admiral states that, having been joined by a battalion of marines, he proceeded up the Potowmack with a view to attack Leonard's Town, the capital of St. Mary's county, where the 36th regiment was stationed.

The marines were landed under Major Lewis, whilst the boats pulled up in front of the town, but on discovering the British, the enemy's armed force quitted the place, and suffered them to take quiet possession of it. A quantity of stores belonging to the 36th regiment, and a number of arms of different descriptions were found there and destroyed: a quantity of tobacco, flour, provisions, and other articles were brought away, in the boats and in a schooner lying off the town. Not a musket being fired, nor an armed enemy seen, the town was accordingly spared.

July 21.—The Rear-Admiral reports, that the enemy having collected some Virginia malitia, at a place called Nominy-Ferry, in Virginia, a considerable way up Nominy-River, he proceeded thither with the boats and marines (the latter commanded by Captain Robyns during the illness of Major Lewis). The enemy's position was on a very commanding eminence, projecting into the water; but some marines been landed on its flank, and seen getting up the craggy side of the mountain, while the main body landed at the ferry, the enemy fell back, and though pursued several miles till the approach of night, escaped with the loss of a few prisoners. They had withdrawn their field artillery, and hid it in the woods, fearing that if they kept it to use against the British, they would not be able to retreat with it quick enough to save it from capture.

After taking on board all the tobacco, and other stores found in the place, with a quantity of cattle, and destroying all the storehouses and buildings, the Rear-Admiral re-embarked; and dropping down to another point of the Nominy River, he observed some movements on shore, upon which he again landed with marines. The enemy fired a volley at them, but on the advance of the marines, fled into the woods. Every thing in the neighbourhood was therefore also destroyed or brought off, and after visiting the country in several other directions, covering the escape of the negroes who were anxious to join him, he quitted the river and returned to the ships with one hundred and thirty five refugee negroes, two captured schooners, a large quantity of tobacco, dry goods, and cattle, and a few prisoners.

July 24.—The Rear-Admiral gives an account of his having gone up St. Clement's Creek, in St. Mary's county, with the boats and marines, to examine the country. The militia shewed themselves occasionally, but always retreated when pursued; and the boats returned to the ships without any casuality, having captured four schooners and destroyed one.

The inhabitants having remained peaceably in their houses, the Rear-Admiral did not suffer any injury to be done to them, excepting at one farm, from which two musket-shot were fired at the Admiral's gig, and where the property was therefore destroyed.

July 31.—The Rear-Admiral reports, that having on the 26th proceeded to the head of the Machodick river, in Virginia, where he burnt six schooners, whilst the marines marched, without opposition, over the country on the banks of that river; and there not remaining any other place on the Virginia or St. Mary's side of his last anchorage that he had not visited, he on the 28th caused the ships to move above Blackstone's Island, and on the 29th proceeded with the boats and marines up the Wicomoco River: he landed at Hanburgh and Chaptico, from which latter place he shipped a considerable quantity of tobacco, and visited several houses in different parts of the country, the owners of which living quietly with their families, and seeming to consider themselves and the neighbourhood at his disposal, he caused no farther inconvenience to them, than obliging them to furnish supplies of cattle and stock for the use of his forces.

August 4.—The Rear-Admiral states, that on the 2d, the squadron dropped down the Potowmack, near to the entrance of the Yocomoco River, which he entered the following day with the boats and marines, and landed with the latter. The enemy had here collected in great force, and made more resistance than usual, but the ardour and determination of the Rear-Admiral's gallant little band, carried all before them; and after forcing the enemy to give way, they followed him ten miles up the country, captured a field piece, and burnt several houses which had been converted into depôts for militia, arms, &c. Learning afterwards that General Hungerford had rallied his men at Kinsale, the Rear-Admiral proceeded thither; and though the enemy's position was extremely strong, he had only time to give the British an ineffectual volley before they gained the height, when he again retired with precipitation, and did not reappear. The stores found at Kinsale were then shipped without molestation: and having burnt the storehouses and other places, with two old schooners, and destroyed two batteries, the Rear-Admiral re-embarked, bringing away five prize schooners, a large quantity of tobacco, flour, &c. a field piece and a few prisoners. The American General Taylor was wounded and unhorsed, and escaped only through the thickness of the wood and bushes, into which he ran. The British had three men killed, and as many wounded.

The conduct of the officers and men on this occasion calls for the Rear-Admiral's particular commendation; with five hundred men they penetrated ten miles into the enemy's country, and skirmished back, surrounded by woods, in the face of the whole collected militia of Virginia, under Generals Hungerford and Taylor; and after this long march carried the heights of Kinsale in the most gallant manner.

August 8.—The Rear-Admiral states, that Coan River, a few miles below Yocomoca, being the only inlet on the Virginia side of the Potowmack that he had not visited, he proceeded on the 7th to attack it with the boats and marines; after a tolerably quick fire on the boats, the enemy went off precipitately with the guns: the battery was destroyed, and the river ascended, in which three schooners were captured, and some tobacco brought off.

August 13.—The Rear-Admiral gives an account of his having, on the 12th, proceeded up St. Mary's Creek, and landed in various parts of the country about that extensive inlet, but without seeing a single armed person, though militia had formerly been stationed at St. Mary's Factory for its defence; the inhabitants of the state appearing to consider it wiser to submit than to attempt opposition, August 15.—The Rear-Admiral reports his having again on that day landed within St. Mary's Creek, but found on the different parts of the country, the same quiet and submissive conduct on the part of the inhabitants, as in the places visited on the 12th.

Throughout the whole of these operations, Rear-Admiral Cockburn repeats the highest encomiums on all the officers and men of the ships and marines under his orders. Although from the nature of the country and the excessive heat of the climate, these services must have been most harassing, they were carried on with the greatest cheerfulness and perseverance. The Captains of His Majesty's ships, on all occasions voluntered to accompany the Rear-Admiral. To Lieutenant-Colonel Malcolm, and Major Lewis, of the royal marines, he expresses his obligations, as well as to the other officers of that corps.

The conduct of the men was also deserving of the greatest praise: and though the re-embarkations frequently took place in the night, yet, during the whole of the operations, neither a sailor nor a marine was reported missing.

In transmitting the reports of these services, which come down to the period of the arrival of Sir Alexander Cochrane in the Chesapeake, the Vice-Admiral expresses the very high sense he entertains of the arrangement, zeal, and activity which have on all occasions been shewn by Rear-Admiral Cockburn during the time he has commanded in the Chesapeake, under the Vice-Admiral's orders.

With these particulars, a specimen of the notes must also be left at this Office, by persons applying for such licences.

That a penalty of £100 for every offence, is imposed on the issuing of promissory notes, of the description aforesaid, without a licence, or at any other place, or under any other firm or title, than is specified in the licence; and a penalty of £50 for every offence, is imposed on the issuing of promissory notes, of any description, or bills of exchange, not duly stamped, and on the re-issuing of promissory notes, not allowed to be re-issued, as well as on the re-issuing of notes allowed to be re-issued, after the period fixed for that purpose, viz. three years from the date thereof.

The Commissioners of Stamps having had occasion to prosecute several Country Bankers, this notice is given that all persons concerned may in future conform to the law, and avoid the penalties for which they will otherwise be prosecuted; and that persons, applying for licences, may come prepared with all the requisite particulars to be inserted therein, without which the licences cannot be filled up, so as to protect the parties against penalties.
