Rye, Jan. 3.

A Private Man of War being upon the French Coasts Dec. 30; and sailing near the shoar, the French discovering him, took the allarm, and caused their drums to beat immediately, and marching down to the water-side, fired several Muskets at them, but without harm done.

Bremen, Jan. 6. Whether we shall agree with Sweden, or no, is yet uncertain: in the mean time, we are in a good posture, having a 1000 Souldiers in Garrison; and an assurance of 5000 more, if we shall have occasion. The Swede has yet but one Regiment in the Countrey of Bremen; when he draws in more, we shall quickly find assistance, if they have any design against us.

Venice, Jan. 1. Yesterday arrived a Vessel coming from Constantinople, in forty dayes: The Marriners and Passengers affirm, That they saw our Armada united, and the Ships that went out last with the Marquess de Villa, joyned to them, and that they steer'd their course toward Candia. Prince Maximilian, Brother to the Elector of Bavaria, having viewed the Rarities here, is going towards Rome.

Vicna, Dec. 19. His Imperial Majesty is nominating Officers to attend his expected Empress: The Prince of Dietrichstein is declared Lord-Steward, who is sent for to provide all things that are required from that employment. The other Officers that have relation to the Empress, have orders also to provide all necessaries. They write from the Fortres Leopoldi (the Fortres now lately built near Gutta, in balance to that of New-husel) that amongst their workmen they had discovered two Turks, whom they secured as Spyes. The French Resident having been fully answered to whatever he could object concerning the Principalities of Ratibor and Oppelen, has at last agreed to release the engagement of the said Principalities to the Crown of Poland, upon the payment of 1100000 florins, whereof he has received 500000 already, and shall receive the rest, as soon as he has Instructions to give a full discharge. The dispute about the Churches in Upper-Hungary, we look upon now as good as ended: for the Deputy from thence being a Protestant, has obtained a Decree from the Emperor, prohibiting the Princess Ragorzi to prosecute the Protestants any more in her Territories, upon pain of confiscation of all her estate; withal telling her, that whatever she pretends of right shall be decided by the next Diet. The Count Balassi Imbre has been prevailed upon by his Friends to answer the Turkish accusations at the Imperial Court, where he justified himself so fully, by several good attestations, that the Turkish Ambassador himself seem'd satisfied with his innocency, it being made clear by all evidence, that he had made no incursions into the Turkish Territories, except upon their own excursions; and that in effect he had done nothing more, then what was adjudged necessary for the defence of his Borders. Something there is yet of complaint depending, and satisfaction is demanded for the Son of the Bassa of Waizen, that justice may be done upon those that kill'd him. The Prince of Munster's Envoy has given a very good account of his Master's quarrel, inasmuch, that the whole Court wonder the Lunenburgh Forces should be employed against him, and hold his Imperial Majesty obliged to take notice of it, as that, which would notoriously violate the Peace of Munster, and indeed shake the very foundation of the Empire, for one Prince of it, to make war against another, without his consent or privacy.

Madrid, Dec. 18. A few days ago Dom Juan D' Austria came to kiss the King and Queens Regents hands, and after a small stay return'd to Sarsuela, the place of his Residence, where he was visited by several of the Grantees of the Court. The Queen Regent has gratified one of the Great Duke of Tuscany's Sons with an Abby, which the Arch-Duke of Inspruck enjoyed in Sicily, of the yearly value of 22000 Crowns, with a pension of 7000 Crowns more for Cardinal Colonna.

Bruxels, Jan. 4. There is not at present any account of considerable action between the Forces of Munster and Holland. The French are in Wesel, Emmerick and Rees; the Dutch drawn into their Old Quarters, having raised the Siege at Dorechem, with loss of some Persons of quality among the French, whose Bodies we here, were met returning through Liege well accompanied. The Elector of Colen continues resolute in opposing the farther passage of any French Troops, and has peremptorily refused it to 400, that were to be received in exchange of so many of the Dauphin's Guards, that were sent among the late supplies.

Antwerp, Jan. 6. The last Letters from Holland say, that the States begin to loose their credit, and the people are very backward in bringing their money, as fearing if the War last long, they hazzard both Principal and Interest. The wifer sort begin to keep their purses shut, and are not so easily drawn in with the common notion of serving the Publique. The Deputies of the Province of Over-Issell, have represented their grievances and the losses they suffer from the Prince of Munster, who will not be contented with their advancing contribution onely, but takes upon him the Provincial Government; which so disenable the Province, that they are unable any longer to pay the Taxes that are layd on them, and desire that their Quota in the Generality may be lessened as formerly, before the reducing of Rhynburgh. Hannibal Shestedt went from hence yesterday afternoon, toward Ostend, and thence intends to take shipping for England.

Milan, Dec. 18. The Marquess Durazza continues his negotiation for Genoa: it is said both sides will be well satisfied concerning the reception of the C. Rosales, and the other differences about Final, where the Genoeses press much to settle a Magazin, or publique store of Salt, to be there vended to all ships that trade on that Coast, for their account.

Middleburgh, Jan. 8. Yesterday the Heer Van Goch (the States Ambassador into England) arrived at Flushing, having taken ship the day before at Dover.

Groningen, Jan. 10. Several Waggons are hourly coming in hither, and the Inhabitants round about us fly from the Bishops Forces, who having past over the Drentes, have had Emmen and the Towns thereabout at their discretion; it is said that in the Church-yard of Emmen they surprised Captain Harman Manninga with his whole Company. Their body is very considerable, at least 5000 Horse faced Coverdens, and it is suspected their Design is against the Valterfconce Wedde holds out still, and those that lye before it, write, That it is impossible it can be taken by force, without Cannons, which the season will not yet bear. The Colonels Merrin, Askin, and Alva are come nither with their Companies, and our Cannons are already planted in case the Enemy should attaque us. The Garrison of Coverden is to be strengthened with 6 Companies, and indeed all the places about us are to receive proportionable Supplies; for whilst the Bishops Army ranges thus about the Countreys, we cannot provide too much for our security. The Marquess de Pradel is still at Weseli, where every day he causes some or other of his Soldiers to be executed; who though shuffled with the greatest caution into several Garrisons, cannot be kept from Violence and Robbery.

Amsterdam, Jan. 11. The States have set forth two Plaacaerts; the one prohibiting any Trade with Greenland, and Declaring all Bonds and Contracts, by which any Seamen stand obliged to perform that Voyage, void; the other, prohibiting all Sea-men to go into the Service of any King, Prince, State, or Republick whatever, and commanding all that are already in Foreign Service to return home, upon pain of banishing them, their Wives and Children, and forfeiture of their Goods. And yet all this will not do to keep our Sea-men at home, who, whether out of necessity, by reason of the decay of Trade, or some apprehension of the hardship and hazards they must run through in the States Service, do daily transport themselves to Ostend. It is now too late to look after them, when so many have found the benefit of serving there; and the truth is, their private advantages draw them so fast away, That the States were never in such want of men, as they are like to be this Spring, to furnish out their Navy. The Captain of the Charity, who was taken prisoner in the last Summers Engagement, was buried the seventh instant, in the Vault of the French Church at Rotterdam, his Sword being laid on his Coffin, and several Friends attending him to the Grave. He had not been above five days discharged from his imprisonment upon exchange; when, what with the alteration of Diet and Lodging, in both which the Dutch had treated him with the greatest severity, he fell sick and died.

Hague, Jan. 12. Most of the cheif Officers are come hither, except the Marquis de Pradel, who hath work enough at Weyssel to keep the French in order. Prince Maurice is much dissatisfied at the entertainment he findes from the States General; and they on their side, seem as little satisfied with his and Monsieur Pradel's conduct. The Deputies which governed the last Campagne, giving in several accusations against him, which, he hath declared, he will answer in Writing; so that upon this mutual disgust, we are to seek where to have a Head, should we finde it fit to take the field again this Winter; which is now in deliberation, and is very much pressed, as well by the French Kings Letter of the 25 of December, to Monsieur de Estrades, as by the Envoy of the Duke of Lunenburg Gell. In the mean time, the Bishop braves us and our Succors; and whilest we are withdrawn into Garison, he spoils and ravages the whole Countrey, having by the help of the Ice, among many other spoils, taken and plundered Frisseveen, a place in which were great numbers of Cattle, and much Goods and Household-stuff lodged for security, by the Countrey people of all ranks, and defended by 400 men, who were all taken prisoners at discretion. Great industry is used in the preparations for next Spring, and in the mean time to get out a Winter Fleet to countenance Trade and preserve our Reputation. The number will be about fifteen or seventeen, whereof five or seven are from Holland, and the rest from Zealand, who have the name to keep up a Fleet in Winter as well as in Summer, though indeed the true reason of it be, that they have not money to pay them off. Rotterdam, North-Holland, and Friesland, have not been able to contribute one shipto this equipage: And indeed, they give us but little hopes of being in a condition to do much better in the Spring. This Squadron hath already Rendezvoused in Zealand, but how they shall be farther disposed of, is not said. The States of West-Friesland have made a fresh complaint of the ill Government and spoils committed by the Lunenburg forces in Frese: The reason may be, the new differences that are risen betwixt Count Waldeck and his Masters, who hire him to their service; and those who pretend to know the intrigue, say, That unless they make up a Treaty with the Elector of Brandenburg (which is now as good as quite broke off) there is no good to be expected from the Lunenburg forces. It is fresh now again, that Monsieur de Estrades is to be re-called home, and Monsieur Courvin to come in his place; and that old Boreel shall come from France, and Van Benningen, the now Favorite, succeed in that employ.

Brussels, Jan. 8. By Letters from the Prince of Munster Camp of the third, we have the particulars of a late advantage obtained by those of Munster against a party of the French Succors; who, it seems, designing an Ambuscade of 7 or 800 of their best Horse, lodged in a valley, in wait for those of Deutecum, where Colonel Post is Commander, and sent out 20 of the forwardest young Voluntiers, being all persons of quality, who advanced under the Walls of the Town to draw out the enemy; but the Governor suspecting the design, very warily entertained this Forlorn-hope with little skirmishings, till he had commanded out a party, who passing at a distance undiscovers by a hollow way, got between the French and home; and then falling in upon them, killed eight upon the place, and took the remaining twelve, who are judged to be persons of condition, being all excellently well accoutred, and the worst of their Horses, valued at between 300 and 400 Duckats. What their names and qualities were, was not then known.

Paris, Jan. 9. The face of affairs in this Kingdom looks very frowningly, and it is feared matters cannot long stand in the posture they are now in, without some farther mischief. To day no more of what past when the King was last at Parliament, the effect of which, upon the peoples temper, every body may read. You would wonder to hear what a strange noise the Kings pardoning of the Partizans makes among them. In that act they look upon themselves as a people condemned to the violence and extortion of the Kings Officers, when after the discovery of such horrid abuses, the actors are only punished with a Fine, and come off gainers by the bargain: A precedent that will invite men to the like crimes, when the greatest punishment is but to be made the Kings Sponges; to have that which they suck from the people, to be queezed out into the Kings Coffers. Those of the Robe, which are considerable in this Kingdom, both for number and interest, are much aggrieved at the price set upon Offices; and in this point the King findes others obstinate as well as those of Paris. The Parliament of Rhemes hath refused to attend to it, and expect what will be the issue at Paris with those that gave the example, where the Assemblies continue still, and sent the Premier President two days ago to the Louvre to know His Majesties intention; who, it seems, answered, They might if they would continue to meet, but that they should not dare to deliberate.

The Taxes are now Levied by Soldiers, and yet that does not aw the people into a payment. No less then Ten Companies des Gardes sent to Orleans, to raise the money there, where we cannot tell yet how they sped; but we hear the Citizens shut their doors against them; and now you need not wonder at Orders to raise 200 Cornets: They will hardly be enough to fetch in Contribution.

Legorn, Dec. 26. The Great Duke, notwithstanding the Proclamation prohibiting Commerce with England, hath since shewn this favor, That all Fish from England shall immediately be sent ashore; but the Ships and Mariners must make Quarantine.

Bristol, Jan. 5. Here arrived this week ten Vessels from Ireland, Roche, Bourdeaux, and Pharo, laden with Wines, Fruits, and Oyls, and commodities natural to those places. A Sette came also from Malaga, a Vessel rarely seen in these parts; she is about fifty Tuns, and her Masts like a pair of Taylors Sheers opened; she had much ado to endure the Seas, and had not some English men been aboard her, she had been lost. The Master reports, that the Dutch upon a rumor, that Sir Jeremiah Smith was coming, drew up their ships close to the shore, and are looking about for places of security.

Hull, Jan. 5. There have been of late three or four Dutch Men of War seen about Flambrough Head, and Bridlington Bay, from 30 to 40 Guns apeece; they forced one great Collier ashore, and not being able to fetch him off, fired the Vessel: One or two they took that came from the Southward, and were seen in chase of two others, but it is hoped they may have escaped.

Dover, Jan. 7. Sir Thomas Tiddiman is at present here, intending the next week to his command. Yesterday a Privateer brought in a small Vessel laden with Salt, pretending to be bound for Flanders.

Oxon, Jan. 9. His Majesty hath issued forth a Proclamation for recalling all private Commissions or Letters of Marque whatsoever granted to any Vessel of England or Ireland, to be delivered up and vacated, before February 14 next coming.

The Account of the Weekly Bill at London runs thus, Total 265. Plague 89. Increas'd 12.
