TUESDAY, APRIL 30, 1816.

Carlton-House, April 29, 1816.

THIS day the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor, the Aldermen, Recorder, Sheriffs, City Officers, and Common Council of the City of London, waited upon the Prince Regent, at Carlton-House, with the two following Addresses; which were read by Sir John Silvester, Bart. the Recorder:

To His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, REGENT of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

The dutiful and loyal Address and Petition of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled.

May it please your Royal Highness,

WE, His Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled, humbly approach your Royal Highness with renewed expressions of attachment to your Royal Person and Family; and at the same time to express the deep sorrow and affliction we feel at the intelligence received of the persecution and sufferings of the Protestants in the South of France.

Among the glorious and virtuous causes for which our ancestors have struggled and bled, in no instance have their exertions been more successful, nor their success more dear to us, than in the overthrow of that fabric of superstition, bigotry, and tyranny, by which the human mind had been so long enthralled; and in the establishment of that sacred principle, which confirms to every man the right to worship his Creator according to the dictates of his own conscience.

Having chosen and acted upon this principle for ourselves, and feeling that it is an inherent right, equally appertaining to every individual of every nation, we have viewed with no less grief than abhorrence, that the spirit of intolerance had again broken out; and that our Protestant brethren in the South of France have suffered the most cruel and atrocious persecution, whereby their places of worship have been closed, their property pillaged and destroyed, and numerous lives have been sacrificed.

That although we deprecate any interference in the internal concerns of other nations, we cannot regard a friendly interposition for the prevention of atrocities so disgraceful to humanity, as a violation of that principle, much less so under the relative and peculiar circumstances of both countries.

For recollecting that it has been, in an eminent degree by British valour, British treasure, and British blood, that the late changes in the Government of France have been effected; and that the avowed object of our immense sacrifices was no less to rescue the people of France from tyranny and oppression, than to afford peace to surrounding States; and bearing in mind that by the Constitutional Charter the King of France guaranteed full and perfect religious liberty, and that your Royal Highness has in the Treaty concluded with His Majesty's Allies at Paris, in November last, expressed your conviction, "that the repose of Europe is essentially interwoven with the confirmation of things founded on the maintenance of the Royal Authority and of the Constitutional Charter;" we cannot but feel, that under these circumstances and such solemn engagements, the character and honour of this country loudly demand, that we should, in the most decisive and energetic terms, protest against these dreadful enormities, which have so long been committed.

It is therefore with feelings of the deepest regret, that we perceive the bright prospect of peace, freedom, and happiness, so suddenly overcast. Scarcely had His Majesty Louis the Eighteenth resumed the reins of Government; that factions and dissipated persons, under pretence of superior loyalty and more pure religion, commenced a furious attack upon their fellow subjects; and those persons, whose only offence was their difference in religious opinion, and who had ever been employed in diffusing light and knowledge among them, were the first victims of their cruelty and superstition.

Under circumstances so distressing, feeling with gratitude the high degree of religious liberty we enjoy, purchased and sealed with the blood of our forefathers, confirmed and established at the glorious revolution of 1689, we should be unworthy of such advantages were we not, in the most solemn and earnest manner, to entreat your Royal Highness to exert your utmost influence to suppress that unhappy spirit of persecution which has lately manifested itself, alike contrary to the Constitutional Charter of France and those enlightened principles of toleration entertained by your Royal Highness.

We, therefore, humbly pray your Royal Highness will be pleased to adopt such measures as may best tend to suppress these enormous evils.

Signed, by order of Court,
Henry Woodthorpe.

To which Address and Petition His Royal Highness was pleased to return the following most gracious Answer:

"The just sense entertained by His Majesty's subjects of the value and importance of religious toleration, is necessarily calculated to excite in their minds strong feelings of uneasiness and regret at any appearance of the want of it in other nations of the world.

"In such feelings, when called for and justified by the occasion, I shall ever participate; and whilst I lament the circumstances which led to your Address, I derive great satisfaction from the persuasion, that they are in no degree to be attributed to an indisposition on the part of the Government of France, to afford to the freedom of religious worship the benefit of its promised protection and support."

To His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales,
REGENT of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

The humble, loyal, and dutiful Address of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled.

May it please your Royal Highness,

WE, His Majesty's dutiful and faithful subjects, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled, humbly approach your Royal Highness with renewed expressions of loyalty to our beloved Sovereign, and of zealous attachment to your Royal Highness's Person and to the illustrious House of Brunswick.

We beg leave to offer to your Royal Highness our heartfelt congratulations, that the unparalleled exertions of our Country and of our Allies have, under the signal favour of Divine Providence, enabled your Royal Highness, by the Treaties recently concluded at Paris with His Most Christian Majesty the King of France, to put an end to the miseries and calamities inseparable from a state of hostility, and so speedily to restore to the people of these realms the inestimable blessings of an happy and peaceful peace.

We have felt, in common with the rest of His Majesty's subjects, the impetuous necessity which called for the exertions of the whole British people against a Power which threatened the independence and tranquillity of every neighbouring State; and we have viewed with feelings of the warmest admiration, that character of intrepidity, heroism, and moderation which has uniformly distinguished the British arms; and which in the late ever-memorable campaign, has reached to the recollection of Europe the proudest achievements of our ancestors.

We trust that the experience of the late dreadful calamities will not be lost, and that during a long period of tranquillity it will be universally felt, that the true greatness of Princes, and the real happiness of Nations, are only to be secured by a steady adherence to justice and moderation, and to those sacred principles of a rational and well regulated liberty, to which Great Britain, under the illustrious House of Brunswick, has been indebted for the prosperity and the glory of her empire.

We congratulate your Royal Highness on the conclusion of a Treaty which holds out to humanity, by a solemn pledge of the Great Powers of Europe, the prospect of a speedy and entire abolition of the African slave trade; affords security for the repayment of a part of the expenditure occasioned by the late renewal of hostilities; and for the discharge of the just claims of British subjects on the Government of France; and provides, by a series of precautions, justified by necessity and dictated by experience, for the future safety and repose of Europe.

Whilst we feel grateful to Divine Providence for these distinguished benefits, and for the exalted rank which the moral, political, and military character of our country has attained, we are not insensible to the difficulties and embarrassments which are, as we trust, the temporary though painful result of a return to a state of things, interrupted by so long a period of exertion and of warfare.

For the removal of these difficulties we rely with confidence upon the wisdom and firmness of your Royal Highness and of Parliament, and upon the energy and resources of the British empire; and we trust that such steps will be taken as, by a speedy and necessary reduction of every branch of the public expenditure, as far as (after the late glorious successes) the safety of the nation will admit, and by a steady perseverance in the reduction during peace of the national debt, may afford to your Royal Highness the means of strengthening the public credit, and the grateful opportunity of alleviating the burthens of a generous and loyal people.

That your Royal Highness may long live in the hearts and affections of a free, prosperous, and united nation, is the ardent prayer of His Majesty's faithful subjects the Citizens of London.

Signed, by order of Court,

Henry Woodthorpe.

To which Address His Royal Highness was pleased to return the following most gracious Answer:

"I thank you for this loyal and dutiful Address, and accept with great satisfaction your congratulations upon the conclusion of peace on terms honourable and advantageous to this Country and to Europe. It may justly be regarded as the adequate result of a Treaty which, under Divine Providence, is chiefly to be ascribed to the unparalleled exertions of British valour, and the well-earned reward of that characteristic fortitude and public spirit which was so conspicuously displayed by all classes of His Majesty's subjects, on the recurrence of hostilities.

They were all received very graciously, and had the honour of kissing the hand of His Royal Highness.

After which His Royal Highness was pleased to confer the honour of Knighthood on Thomas Bell, Esq. one of the Sheriffs.
