of Westminster, Right Honourable Sir William Scott, Right Honourable Sir John Nicholl, Mr. C. Williams Wynne, and several other Noblemen and Gentlemen who were educated at the University, waited upon His Royal Highness the Prince Regent to present to His Royal Highness the following Address; which Address was read by Lord Grenville, the Chancellor of the University:

To His Royal Highness the PRINCE REGENT.

WE, His Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Oxford, beg leave humbly to offer to your Royal Highness the expression of our heartfelt joy at the marriage of Her Royal Highness the Princess Charlotte of Wales with a Protestant Prince, descended from an illustrious race, and distinguished by personal virtues worthy of that august Princess, who is the object of our dearest and proudest hopes.

When we reflect on the various blessings our country has derived from the mild and equitable rule of the House of Brunswick, we cannot but rejoice in an event, which, by tending to perpetuate the succession in that House, promises a continuance of the same blessings. We not only rejoice in it, as an event grateful to the paternal feelings of your Royal Highness, but we see in it also a pledge of our own happiness, an additional security to those civil rights and religious establishments, which we firmly believe to be, under Divine Providence, the foundation of all our greatness.

That the sceptre may never depart from your royal line, is our sincere and fervent prayer; and we are confident, that in this prayer we speak the wishes of all His Majesty's subjects. With them we unite in zealous and dutiful attachment to your Royal Highness, to whom we are more especially bound by repeated acts of munificence and kindness: and we hope, by the careful discharge of the trust committed to us, to prove that we are not undeserving of your Royal Highness's favour and protection.

Our constant purpose is to combine the pursuit of knowledge with the formation of that character; upon which the true glory of a kingdom must ever
