

devoted attachment to your Royal Highness's Person, family, and Government. Indeed, we feel ourselves roused to redoubled energy in defence of that invaluable Constitution of which your Royal Highness forms so important a branch, when we see it assailed by open as well as insidious enemies, and know that it forms the pride of our own country, and the envy of others; combining private security with the highest possible public liberty, and embodying all the elements of national glory, prosperity, and happiness.

We fervently pray that the favour of Heaven may long preserve your Royal Highness in safety, and enable you to transmit to succeeding generations this glorious Constitution unimpaired: and we trust that all His Majesty's subjects will evince a grateful sense of the blessings it dispenses, by a spirit of steady and invincible allegiance, in which alone can be found their protection against the snares of their enemies.

To His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, REGENT of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

The humble Address of the Master, Wardens, Assistants, and Elder Brethren of the Corporation of Trinity-House of Deptford Strond.

May it please your Royal Highness,

WE, His Majesty's most loyal and dutiful subjects, the Ancient Body Corporate of the Seamen of England, beg permission humbly to approach your Royal Highness, to express our sincere concern and unfeigned abhorrence, at the wicked and outrageous attempt committed against your Royal Highness's sacred Person, and the public peace, during your Royal Highness's late progress to and from the House of Parliament.

Truly sensible of the blessings we, in common with all our fellow subjects, have so long enjoyed, under the mild and paternal Government of your Royal and revered Father, and so happily continued to us under the auspicious administration of your Royal Highness, we sincerely join in deprecating such an atrocious insult, and ardently unite in earnest prayers to Almighty God, that your Royal Highness may long be preserved to enjoy, in health and happiness, the loyal and fervent attachment of a free and grateful nation: and that when called, in due course of nature, to succeed to the throne of your illustrious ancestors, your Royal Highness, endowed with the same estimable qualities which so justly endeared them to all their subjects, may reign, with uninterrupted felicity, in the hearts of a faithful, affectionate, and united people.

Given under our common seal, this 6th day of February 1817. Liverpool, Master.

To His Royal Highness the PRINCE REGENT.

WE, His Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Magistrates and Town-Council of the Burgh of Dunbar, in Council assembled, beg leave to address your Royal Highness, and to express our abhorrence of the several daring outrages which have been lately committed on your sacred person; and sensible of the blessings which we enjoy under our present happy Constitution, we feel the utmost indignation from the disorderly and licentious conduct of those who dared to offer such gross insults and violence.

We sincerely congratulate your Royal Highness that those men who have hitherto manifested themselves inimical to the peace of our country have been so strictly watched, and that all their wicked attempts have been happily frustrated; and we hope, that instead of producing the mischief they wish, it will only tend to unite more firmly the hearts of all good men in repelling both foreign and domestic enemies.

On the present occasion we again deem it our duty to come forward and publicly to declare our firm and unshaken attachment to His Majesty's person and our happy Constitution.

That your Royal Highness's sacred person may be protected from all daring and flagitious outrages or insults is the ardent wish and prayer of His Majesty's loyal and dutiful subjects the Magistrates and Council of the Burgh of Dunbar.
