

ing her short career, she endeavoured to "adorn in all things," she hath now "received a Crown of Glory that fadeth not away."

That the Father of Mercies, even the God of all comfort, may pour into the heart of your Royal Highness every consolation which such reflections afford: that He will impress on the minds of all His Majesty's subjects, a deep sense of the blessings which they enjoy under the vigorous yet mild administration of your Royal Highness; and that, "turning the hearts of the disobedient to the wisdom of the just," He may unite them all in so strong an attachment to your Royal Person, as shall afford to your Royal Highness the consolation which must arise from your looking on every Briton as the dutiful child of Him who has long been the nursing Father of all His people, is the earnest prayer of His Majesty's and your Royal Highness's most dutiful subjects and servants,

To His Royal Highness the PRINCE REGENT.

WE, the Principal, and Professors of the University of Glasgow, in Senate assembled, prompted by the most lively feelings of duty and affection, humbly approach your august Person, to express our unfeigned sympathy and condolence, on the occasion of the mournful dispensation, with which it has pleased the Almighty to afflict your Royal Highness, his Serene Highness the Prince of Saxe Cobourg, the Royal Family, and every class of His Majesty's subjects.

While the distinguished virtues and accomplishments of the departed Princess, which shed a lustre over her exalted rank, and her happy union with an amiable and highly esteemed Prince, had universally excited in the minds of your people, high expectations of the blessings, which a lineal succession from your Royal Person, might have conferred on these realms, the lamentable event which we now deplore, in a moment disappointed these pleasing hopes, and filled all ranks of men, with grief and sorrow inexpressible.

While we bow with reverence to the Will of Heaven, permit us, most Gracious Prince, in our own name, and in that of the youth under our care, to offer up our fervent prayers, that your Royal Highness, and every branch of the Royal Family, may receive Divine Support, under this heavy trial, and may be comforted by the sympathetic feelings of a dutiful and loyal people, as the pledge of their inviolable attachment to your Royal Person, and to the Illustrious House of Brunswick.

Signed, and sealed in our name, and by our appointment, at Glasgow College, the 11th day of December 1817, by

Montrose:
William Taylor, Principal

[Transmitted by the Duke of Montrose, K. G. and presented by Viscount Sidmouth.]

To His Royal Highness the PRINCE REGENT.

WE, the Nobility, Gentry, Clergy, and Freeholders of the County of Gloucester, humbly beg to approach your Royal Highness with the most sincere expressions of sorrow, at an event which has deprived your Royal Highness of a beloved and affectionate daughter, and your people of a Princess whom they adored, and from whom they fondly anticipated the happiest continuance of the blessings they have received under the sway of the House of Brunswick.

From our own feelings, we can too well judge of the bitterness of your Royal Highness's grief, at this most distressing calamity; yet we trust, your Royal Highness will pardon our intrusion, if we thus implore your Royal Highness to accept that consolation which affection can best afford, in the sympathy of a dutiful and loyal people.

Signed, by order of the Meeting,

Henry C. Lippincott, High Sheriff:

[Transmitted by H. C. Lippincott, Esq. High Sheriff for the County, and presented by Viscount Sidmouth.]

To His Royal Highness the PRINCE REGENT.

WE, His Majesty's dutiful, loyal and affectionate subjects, the Inhabitants of the Town of Wakefield and its Vicinity, beg leave humbly to approach your Royal Highness with the language of sincere sorrow and condolence on the present afflictive occasion.

Severe indeed is the calamity which it has pleased Providence to bring upon your Royal House, and upon the whole Kingdom, by the unexpected and deeply lamented death of your amiable and accomplished daughter.

We feel that language is inadequate to pourtray the deep gloom and affliction which this calamitous dispensation has diffused around, and we venture not to attempt the too arduous task:

But with hearts penetrated with grief, we humbly offer to your Royal Highness the tribute of our unfeigned sorrow for the irreparable loss which your Royal House has sustained. Anxiously do we implore the Supreme Disposer of all events, who has dealt the blow, to impart also, strength to support it; and with his wonted kindness towards this highly favoured land, to turn even this calamity to good. May He ever protect and support, with his Almighty Hand, your Royal Highness and your Illustrious House, to defend and secure, to the latest posterity, the constitutional rights and liberties of the British Isles.

On behalf of the Meeting; at which this Address was unanimously adopted;

I have the honour to subscribe myself, your Royal Highness's most dutiful, most faithful, and very humble servant;

Jeremiah Todd Naylor,
Chairman of the Meeting, and Constable of the Town of Wakefield.

WE, the Mayor, Bailiffs, Burgesses, and other Inhabitants of the Town of Northampton, hum-
