THE following Addresses have been presented to His Royal Highness the Prince Regent; which Addresses His Royal Highness was pleased to receive very graciously:

To His Royal Highness George Prince of Wales, REGENT of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

WE, the Bishop and Clergy of the Diocese of Landaff, beg leave to condole with your Royal Highness on the late afflicting event which has turned our expected joy into sorrow the most profound. We are, indeed, aware, that condolence is a renewal of grief; while, on the other hand, we are unable to find words correspondent with our feelings. But, imperfect as is this our address, we could not have mourned in silence, with due regard to that love and reverence which we owe to your Royal Highness.

Herbert, Landaff.

[Delivered by the Bishop of Landaff, and presented by Viscount Sidmouth.]

To His Royal Highness George Prince of Wales, REGENT of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

WE, the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral Church of Durham, beg leave to assure your Royal Highness that, in common with all our fellow subjects; we have bewailed that awful visitation which has rendered the whole kingdom a house of mourning; and we believe that no example of the deep and universal sorrow which succeeded the decease of the Princess Charlotte, can be found in the records of any nation.

We presume not to compare our grief for that calamitous event with the affliction of your Royal Highness, or of those with whom she was united by nature and affection; but when we reflect upon her high endowments, and contemplate the moral excellence and the genuine devotion which characterised her life, and shed on it a bright and rapid lustre, we cannot, in the present condition of society, calculate the benefits of which her death has bereaved the people.

We bend with submission to the will of God, and trust that although he speedily resumed the blessing which he lent, she did not live nor die in vain; since the general consternation occasioned by her loss testifies how extensively her worth was known, and how greatly it was prized.

Such considerations may tend in some degree to soothe the heart of your Royal Highness; but we are well aware that the Almighty, who ordained the blow, can alone administer relief; and we fervently pray, that He will comfort and protect your Royal Highness, and will grant that the people committed to your charge may progressively abound in good morals, piety, and welfare.

In witness whereof, we caused this our Chapter seal to be affixed hereto, this 17th day of January, in the year of our Lord 1818.

Lich. et Cov. Dean.

[Transmitted by the Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry, and presented by Viscount Sidmouth.]

To his Royal Highness the PRINCE REGENT.

May it please your Royal Highness,

WE, the Bishop, Archdeacons, and Clergy of the Diocese of Durham, humbly beg leave to approach your Royal Highness with sentiments of condolence on the awful event, which while it most acutely wounded the paternal feelings of your Royal Highness, disappointed the sanguine expectations of a loyal people, who indulged the hope, that they, and their posterity, should have the happiness to behold in the descendants of your Royal Highness, a long line of Protestant Princes, who by continuing the paternal government of the House of Brunswick, would perpetuate the glory of that illustrious race, and secure the happiness of their faithful and affectionate subjects.

We acknowledge, with profound humility, that no event can happen without the permission of the Almighty, for wise and good purposes; nor do we presume to assign the reasons of his dealings with mankind; the perfect justice and equity of which must ever remain unquestioned by his creatures. But when we reflect on the youth, the health, and the habits of the amiable and accomplished Princess, who has so suddenly been removed from us, in the
