TUESDAY, JANUARY 27, 1818.

The Speech of the Lords Commissioners to both Houses of Parliament, on Tuesday the 27th day of January 1818.

My Lords, and Gentlemen,

WE are commanded by His Royal Highness the Prince Regent to inform you, that it is with great concern that he is obliged to announce to you the continuance of His Majesty's lamented indisposition.

The Prince Regent is persuaded that you will deeply participate in the affliction with which His Royal Highness has been visited, by the calamitous and untimely death of His beloved and only child the Princess Charlotte.

Under this awful dispensation of Providence, it has been a soothing consolation to the Prince Regent's heart, to receive from all descriptions of His Majesty's subjects the most cordial assurances, both of their just sense of the loss which they have sustained and of their sympathy with His parental sorrow: And amidst His own sufferings, His Royal Highness has not been unmindful of the effect which this sad event must have on the interests and future prospects of the kingdom.

We are commanded to acquaint you, that the Prince Regent continues to receive from Foreign Powers, the strongest assurances of their friendly disposition towards this country, and of their desire to maintain the general tranquillity.

His Royal Highness has the satisfaction of being able to assure you, that the confidence which He has invariably felt in the stability of the great sources of our national prosperity has not been disappointed.

The improvement which has taken place in the course of the last year in almost every branch of our domestic industry, and the present state of public credit, afford abundant proof that the difficulties under which the country was labouring were chiefly to be ascribed to temporary causes.

So important a change could not fail to withdraw from the disaffected, the principal means of which they had availed themselves for the purpose of fomenting a spirit of discontent, which unhappily
