THE following is a copy of the translation, received at this Office, of a notification lately issued by the Royal Danish Board of Customs and of Commerce, relative to a new Light erected on Stevns Head, in the Island of Zealand:

"In conformity with a most gracious Royal Command, and for the security of navigation to and from the Baltic, a new Light has been constructed on Stevns Head, commonly called Stevns Klint, on the Island of Zealand.

" This Light consists of revolving lamps, with six reflectors, which turn round in three minutes, so that six strong reflections will be seen in that space of time, the Light disappearing during the intervals; yet, on approaching it sufficiently near, a gleam of the lamps will be visible even during those intervals.

" This Light will thereby be distinguishable from the open Coal Light upon Falsterbo, on the opposite coast of Sweden, which burns during the winter months.

" The new Light on Stevns Klint is 140 feet above the surface of the water, and is placed in a building which stands 4100 feet north, 22° east (true bearing) from Hoierups Church, on the south edge of Stevns Klint.

" This building will be kept white constantly, and therefore affords a very distinguishable sea mark by day also.

" The Light will commence burning on the 1st day of August this year, and will continue from that time lit one hour after sun-set until sun-rise from Easter to Michaelmas, and half an hour after sun-set until sun-rise from Michaelmas to Easter."
