

The London Gazette.

Published by Authority.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 5, 1818.

Heralds'-College, December 5, 1818.

THE interment of Her late Most Excellent Majesty Queen Charlotte, of blessed memory, took place in the Royal Chapel of St. George, within the Castle of Windsor, on Wednesday evening the 2d instant.—An account of the solemnities observed upon this melancholy occasion will appear in the Gazette of Tuesday next.

Carlton-House, December 4, 1818.

THIS day the Right Honourable Lord Grenville, Chancellor of the University of Oxford, with the Reverend Dr. Hodson, the Vice-Chancellor, waited on His Royal Highness the Prince Regent, and being introduced by the Lord of His Majesty's Bedchamber in Waiting, presented to His Royal Highness the humble Address of the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of that University, on the occasion of the death of Her late Majesty; which Address His Royal Highness was pleased to receive very graciously; and the Chancellor and Vice-Chancellor had the honour to kiss His Royal Highness's hand:

To His Royal Highness the PRINCE REGENT,
&c. &c. &c.

WE, His Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Oxford, intreat your Royal Highness's permission to lay before your Royal Highness the expression of our unfeigned condolence on the event which has deprived the country of its most illustrious example of female virtue in all the relations of public and domestic life, and has involved your Royal Highness and your Royal House in inexpressible affliction.

But we derive consolation, as we humbly and dutifully hope your Royal Highness may, from reflecting that Her Majesty's life had been extended beyond the ordinary duration of human existence; that it was passed in the habitual practice of virtue and religion, and that it terminated in a manner which confirmed the impressions which such a life had made.

The influence of the edifying example which has thus been exhibited to the world, of the composure which religion can impart to the closing scene of life, and of the consolations which may be administered by filial piety, will, we confidently hope, long survive the melancholy occasion over which we mourn; and tend to the maintenance and diffusion of those moral and religious principles which constitute the only true foundation of national prosperity and happiness.

Given at the House of our Convocation, this 2d day of December, in the year of our Lord 1818.

Carlton-House, December 4, 1818.

THIS day the Honourable and Reverend Dr. Neville, Vice-Chancellor of the University of Cambridge, waited on His Royal Highness the Prince Regent, and being introduced by the Lord of His Majesty's Bedchamber in Waiting, presented to His Royal Highness the humble Address of the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of that University, on the occasion of the death of Her late Majesty; which Address His Royal Highness was pleased to receive very graciously; and the Vice-Chancellor had the honour to kiss His Royal Highness's hand:

To His Royal Highness the PRINCE REGENT.

May it please your Royal Highness,

TO permit His Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars, of the ancient University of Cambridge, sincerely to condole with your Royal Highness upon the loss of our late most gracious Queen your royal mother.

Placed in the most exalted station in these kingdoms, Her Majesty for more than half a century afforded by the practice of every Christian virtue, the brightest example to all ranks of His Majesty's subjects; and by that strict adherence to decorum which stamped every action of her life,