SATURDAY, JANUARY 16, 1819.

THE following Addresses, having been transmitted to Viscount Sidmouth, one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, by the several persons whose names are respectively subjoined to each Address, have been presented by His Lordship to His Royal Highness the Prince Regent, who was pleased to receive the same very graciously:

To His Royal Highness George Prince of Wales, REGENT of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

WE, the Bishop, the Dean and Chapter, and Parochial Clergy of the Diocese of Saint Asaph, beg leave with the strongest feelings of dutiful affection, to offer to your Royal Highness our sincere condolence upon an event which calls forth the deepest sorrow from all who have witnessed the mild and dignified virtues which graced the Court, of which Her late Majesty was both the pattern and ornament;—for more than half a century, the unaffected purity of her conduct was an instructive lesson to her own sex;—into her presence no violation of decorum, no levity of manners could obtain admission.—May the influence of such an example remain as long as the remembrance of such eminent virtues shall be impressed upon the minds of those who best know how to appreciate them.

The patient submission and pious resignation of the Royal Sufferer during a long protracted illness, fully prove (if any proof were wanting), the efficacious support of a daily religious practice during a long life, and the next best solace under such trials, and a strong alleviation of them was supplied by the filial attentions of your Royal Highness, and the other illustrious relatives of Her Majesty.

That the hand of Providence may be still stretched out over the head of our venerable and beloved Monarch, and that your Royal Highness may long continue its peculiar care for the honour and benefit of this kingdom, shall be the constant prayers of your Royal Highness's most faithful and dutiful subjects.

John St. Asaph.

[Transmitted by the Bishop of St. Asaph, and presented by Viscount Sidmouth.]

To His Royal Highness the PRINCE REGENT.

The humble Address of the Bishop, Dean and Chapter, Archdeacon, and Clergy of the Diocese of Worcester.

SIR,

WE, His Majesty's most dutiful and attached subjects, beg leave to express our sincere regret on the loss sustained by your Royal Highness, and all the parts of your Royal House, in the lamented death of Her Majesty the Queen.

Virtue, Sir, which is always attractive, is most so when displayed from the eminence of a Throne: and bright was the example both of virtue and piety which Her Majesty held forth for the imitation and benefit of the world around her. In her private character was seen the constant exercise of all the duties which tend to make domestic life happy, and from the graceful dignity of her public demeanour the manners of a court received their proper colour.

F. Worcester.

[Transmitted by the Bishop, and presented by Viscount Sidmouth.]

To His Royal Highness the PRINCE REGENT.

WE, the Bishop and Clergy of the Diocese of Exeter, the dutiful and loyal subjects of our most gracious Sovereign, beg leave with all humility and respect to offer to your Royal Highness our sincere and unfeigned condolence on the deeply lamented death of Her late Majesty the Queen.

In contemplating however the great loss the nation has thereby sustained it is impossible not to reflect with gratitude towards the wise Disposer of all events, that Her Majesty for more than half a century should have undeviatingly practised those eminent and Christian virtues which adorn any situation in life, but which add peculiar lustre to that state where example is most effective, and imitation most readily adopted; and we trust that your Royal Highness will pardon the observation, when we venture to assure you, that your Royal Highness's unwearying and filial attention to Her Majesty, during her protracted illness, has been viewed by the whole nation with the warmest sentiments of admiration and affection, and by none
