SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1820.

THE following Address from the Inhabitants of Cowes was presented to His Majesty on board the Royal George Yacht, by a Deputation of seven of the principal Inhabitants :

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty GEORGE the Fourth.

WE, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Inhabitants of Cowes, beg leave to approach your Majesty with sentiments of profound respect and veneration, and to express our heartfelt joy and satisfaction upon the occasion of your Majesty's arrival in the Isle of Wight.

Independent of every loyal feeling toward your Majesty, we have an additional motive for the wish we now presume to entertain of conveying to your Majesty the assurance of our pride and gratification, arising from the circumstance of your Majesty having been pleased to become a Proprietor in Cowes, since your Majesty's last visit.

It is with the deepest feelings of dutiful attachment to your illustrious House, that we avail ourselves of the present opportunity to assue your Majesty of our unfeigned regard and affection for your august Person, and at the same time to offer our sincere prayers for your Majesty's long and prosperous reign.

Chas. Day, Chairman.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious answer :

" Gentlemen,

" I receive with great satisfaction the loyal and affectionate Address of the Inhabitants of Cowes, expressive of their constitutional and personal attachment to me.

" I have great pleasure in visiting this maritime part of my dominions, and in witnessing its prosperity and happiness ; and I fully appreciate the affectionate feelings of its attached and loyal inhabitants."
