SATURDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1820.

THE following Addresses, having been transmitted to Viscount Sidmouth, one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, by the several persons whose names are respectively subjoined to each Address, were presented by His Lordship to His Majesty, who was pleased to receive the same very graciously:

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

The loyal Address of the Nobility, Gentry, Clergy, and other Inhabitants of the County of Westmorland.

May it please your Majesty,

WE, the Nobility, Gentry, Clergy, and other Inhabitants of the County of Westmorland, beg leave to approach your Majesty with the earnest declaration of our attachment to the Throne and veneration for the Constitution.

At a time when the basest arts are resorted to by wicked and designing men, to inflame and prejudice the unwary against the highest authorities and best institutions of the State, we feel it our duty publicly to declare our solemn determination to support the Government, as by law established, with our firmest energies. The evil designs of the disaffected part of the community having been so openly displayed, we deem it necessary for your Majesty's loyal subjects to come forward with a manly and open avowal of our unaltered constitutional principles. Most sincerely do we deplore the base perversion of the freedom of the press to licentious purposes; yet, relying on the wisdom of Parliament and on the loyalty of the people, we confidently anticipate the speedy return of better times, when delusion shall be removed, and cheerful satisfaction shall succeed to that partial discontent which has been so materially assisted by the agency of a seditious press.

That your Majesty may long reign in the hearts of a free and loyal people, protected in the firm administration of the just and equitable laws of our glorious Constitution, is our fervent prayer, in common with the rest of your Majesty's dutiful and affectionate subjects; and we beg leave to assure your Majesty, that we shall ever be ready to display the characteristic loyalty and patriotism of the inhabitants of Westmorland, having for our watch-word the divine command, "fear God, honour the King."

[Transmitted by Viscount Lowther.]

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

May it please your Majesty,

WE, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Bailiffs and Citizens of the City of Lichfield, in Common Hall assembled, beg leave to approach the Throne with renewed sentiments of loyalty and attachment.

We have witnessed with horror the seditious and blasphemous publications which have been distributed throughout the country by wicked and factious men, disgraceful to the British character, and calculated to mislead the ignorant and unwary.

We place the firmest reliance on the wisdom and promptitude of your Majesty's Government, to frustrate the designs of these enemies to our land; and trust your misguided subjects will return to their allegiance, and that your Majesty may long reign in the hearts of an affectionate people.

We beg to assure your Majesty, that at no former period, renowned as this ancient City has ever been for its attachment to our glorious Constitution, have its Magistrates felt a firmer determination to support by every means in their power, the Religion, the Laws, and the Government of their Country.

Thomas Walton and James Eboral, Bailiffs.

[Transmitted by the Bailiffs of Lichfield.]

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

WE, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, Inhabitants of the City and Close of the City of Lichfield, beg leave to approach the Throne with sentiments of profound respect and allegiance.

We are duly sensible of the great blessings we enjoy from our excellent and unrivalled Constitution under your Majesty's paternal Government.

We lament the delusions which have gone abroad among the people, so injurious to antient British loyalty; and we abhor the arts and machinations
