THE following Addresses, having been transmitted to Viscount Sidmouth, one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, by the several persons whose names are respectively subjoined to each Address, were presented by His Lordship to His Majesty, who was pleased to receive the same very graciously :

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.
The humble Address of the Bishop, Dean and Chapter, Archdeacon and Clergy of the Diocese of Ely.

SIRE,

WE, your Majesty's most loyal and dutiful subjects, the Bishop, Dean and Chapter, Archdeacon and Clergy of the Diocese of Ely, feel ourselves particularly called upon to avow our firm and unshaken attachment to your Royal Person and Government at this crisis, when, in defiance of every loyal, moral and religious principle, desperate and designing men, aided by a licentious press, are using their utmost efforts to excite and diffuse throughout the kingdom a spirit of insubordination and disaffection.

We, Sir, have not so soon forgotten, nor can we ever forget, from what dangers this country has been rescued, and to what an unexampled height of honour and glory it has been raised under your Majesty's auspicious rule; and in proportion to our gratitude for benefits received, so will be our endeavours to uphold and support that Government from which (under Providence), these benefits have been derived. After having witnessed the dreadful calamities in which a neighbouring country has been involved, it might have been supposed that while these revolutionary horrors were still fresh in our remembrance, we could have nothing to apprehend from any attempts of a similar description; but we can no longer indulge so pleasing an expectation, when we observe the unceasing efforts which are made to propagate systems of infidelity and immorality, when we remark the rancorous malignity with which the constituted Authorities of the realm are vilified, and the insolent attacks which are made upon every venerable and sacred instition. Most deeply, Sir, do we regret that the high and moral character of the nation, without which all human laws and restraints are inefficient, should have been thus degraded.

In this hour of "trouble, rebuke and blasphemy," we consider it our bounden duty to endeavour, by every means in our power, to stem the torrent of impiety and disloyalty. We therefore beg leave to assure your Majesty that no exertion shall be wanting, on our parts, to disseminate such principles as may best tend to counteract these evils, and to inculcate with all possible earnestness the truly Christian doctrine, "fear God, and honour the King."
B. E. Ely.

[Transmitted by the Bishop.]

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.
The humble Address of the Parishes of Kirbymoorside and Helmsley, in the North Riding of Yorkshire.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, being principal Inhabitants of the Parishes of Kirbymoorside and Helmsley, and their Vicinity, consider it our duty, at this crisis of difficulty and peril, to approach your Majesty with the greatest humility, and to offer our earnest assurances of attachment to your Royal Person and Government, and to the Religion and Laws of our country.

Impressed with veneration for our civil and religious establishments, we cannot but observe, with the deepest concern, the unparalleled efforts of the unprincipled and disaffected that are daily employed to withdraw the unwary from allegiance to their Sovereign, with a view ultimately to disorganize and overthrow our justly admired Constitution. For this base purpose, calumnies of the most mischievous tendency have been directed against all the constituted Authorities of the realm: the Parliament, the Courts of Judicature, the Altar and the Throne have alike been the objects of profligate abuse and insulting derision.

We feel, Sire, that with a view of frustrating the mischievous designs of the infatuated and seditious, it becomes the bounden duty of your Majesty's
