

bitants of the united Parishes of Firth and Stenness, in Orkney, beg leave to approach the Throne with assurances of attachment to your Majesty and the Government of the Country, we take no concern in party politics, and consider it our duty as Christians and good members of society, to fear God and honour the King. It is our lot to live in peace and plenty; the poorest labourer in this district can live by honest industry, and whatever causes may exist for political discontent elsewhere there are none among us; every man here enjoys the utmost liberty consistent with law and good order in society.

We therefore beg leave to express our confidence in the just and paternal principles of your Majesty and the Government of this Country, and to declare that we will not take any concern with turbulent or disaffected persons, should any such appear among us.
