Admiralty-Office, August 20, 1825.

Extract of a Letter from Captain Coe, of His Majesty's Ship Liffey, to John Wilson Croker, Esq. dated at Madras, the 15th February 1825.

I HAVE the honour to inclose, for the information of the Right Honourable the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, sundry dispatches from Captain Marryat, of His Majesty's ship Larne, in the command of the Naval Force in the River Rangoon, detailing various successful attacks on the enemy, while co-operating with the Army, under the command of Brigadier-General Sir Archibald Campbell; and I feel much pleasure in recommending to their Lordships notice that Officer, as well as those* named in the margin, to whose zealous exertions and cool intrepidity are to be attributed the successful results of the various attacks which they conducted against the enemy. I am pleased in having it in my power to recommend in the strongest terms Mr. Henry L. Maw, Midshipman, of this ship, who volunteered his services to General Sir Archibald Campbell, and who accompanied him in all his operations; and I trust, from the high encomiums passed on his conduct, their Lordships will be pleased to consider his services, and his having been most dangerously wounded.

I have also the honour to inclose dispatches from Captain Chads, of His Majesty's sloop Arachne, in which their Lordships will observe that the conduct of that Officer has been such, in the many successful attacks he has made against the enemy while in the command at Rangoon, as to require little comment of mine to recommend him in the strongest terms to their Lordships. The service that this Officer has conducted has been of the most arduous nature, and in which the enemy have been so completely defeated and dispersed, particularly in the attack of the 8th December, in which they have been routed in all directions, as to require considerable time to prepare for (if they dare risk) another attack.

The bravery displayed by Lieutenant Kellett, of the Arachne, and Acting Lieutenant George Goldfinch, of the Sophie (late Admiralty Midshipman of the Liffey); who led on to the various attacks, will, I am assured, not pass unnoticed by their Lordships; any encomiums of mine would fall very short of their merits, and the latter has been severely wounded. Captain Chads speaks in the strongest terms his high approbation of Captain Ryves, from whom he received every support and counsel in the various points of attack on that day.

The highest encomiums are passed by Captain Chads on the conduct of the Officers* of the squadron named in the margin, as also the remainder of the Officers, seamen, and marines, to which I beg to call the attention of their Lordships; indeed the two services have endeavoured to vie with each other in distinguishing themselves in this most arduous service, where they have endured so much privation; and nothing but the cordial co-operation evinced by the naval and military forces, the good discipline of His Majesty's ships, and the intrepidity of their gallant leaders, could have ensured that success which has always followed the exertions of the seamen, non-commissioned Officers, and royal marines, whose conduct has been invariably that of brave and gallant men, to whom I have conveyed my warmest thanks; and conduct

His Majesty's ship Larne—Lieutenants Dobson and Fraser; Mr. Atherton, Acting Purser; Mr. John Duffell, Master's Mate.

His Majesty's sloop Sophie—Acting Lieutenant G. Goldfinch, severely wounded; Mr. George Winsor, Admiralty Midshipman; Mr. Charles Scott, Master's Mate, wounded.

* His Majesty's ship Larne—Lieutenant Dobson. His Majesty's ship Arachne—Mr. Lett, Master's Maté; Mr. Tomlinson, Admiralty Midshipman; Mr. Mitchell, ditto; Mr. Reed, ditto.

His Majesty's ship Sophie—Lieutenant Bazely; Mr. Murray, Midshipman; Mr. Winsor, Admiralty Midshipman.

such as they have displayed I am well assured their Lordships will not suffer to pass unnoticed.

Extract of a Letter from Captain Marryat, of His Majesty's Sloop Larne, to Commodore Grant, dated Rangoon, 6th August 1824.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL Sir Archibald Campbell having, on the 4th instant, ordered a detachment of six hundred men, under the command of Colonel Smelt, to attack the enemy, who had stockaded themselves in the old fort of Syriam, I have the honour to inform you that I went, with two boats from His Majesty's ship Larne, to superintend the disembarkation, and render every assistance in my power.

The enemy having broken down a bridge across a nullah, not fordable, I ordered the seamen to advance and repair it, that the troops might be enabled to pass, which service they performed in a highly creditable manner, exposed to a galling fire of musketry and the guns of the stockade.

This service being effected, the advance was sounded, and the stockade taken in good style by the combined force.

I hardly need observe that the Officers* and men of this ship did their duty on this occasion, but I conceive it justice particularly to mention the conduct of Mr. John Duffell, Master's Mate, of this ship, and Mr. George Winsor, Admiralty Midshipman, lent from the Sophie.

List of Wounded.

Larne—William Wyllie, captain main-top, severely; Thomas Edwards, seaman, severely. Lent from Sophie—Thomas Freeman, seaman, slightly.

Extract of a Letter from Captain Marryat, of His Majesty's Sloop Larne, to Captain Coe, dated Rangoon, 9th August 1824.

I HAVE the honour to inclose, for your information, a copy of a letter from Lieutenant Fraser, stating the result of the expedition up Dalla Creek. Had it not been for the decided gallantry of the troops and seamen employed in this expedition, the loss would have been much more severe than what it has been, the false intelligence having been given with a view to decoy.

The stockades, instead of being composed of bamboo, were built of strong teak timber, and placed in a situation where the assailants had every natural difficulty to contend against. The firing was so heavy and so continued, that (at the request of Sir Archibald Campbell) I took up a reinforcement of two hundred men of the 41st regiment, under the command of Major Chambers; but the stockade was in our possession, and all firing had ceased previous to my arrival.

The gallantry of the Officers who were employed in this expedition, viz. Mr. Thomas Fraser, Second Lieutenant; Mr. Robert Atherton, Purser; and

* Lieutenant W. B. Dobson; Mr. R. Atherton, Purser; Mr. J. Duffell, Master's Mate; Mr. G. Winsor, Midshipman; Captain Gillespie, H. M. 4th light dragoons, a volunteer;

Messrs. Duffell, Winsor, and Norcock, Midshipmen, deserves the highest encomiums.

I am sorry that our list of wounded is so heavy, but it will be accounted for when I state, that in all these attacks the lascars, who man the other boats, will not pull in to the fire unless they are led by the Officers and seamen of His Majesty's ship Larne.

The conduct of Mr. Maw, Midshipman of the Liffey, has, during the whole period of his service here, been a series of gallantry. I have great pleasure in transmitting a letter from Sir Archibald Campbell, relative to his conduct, and adding my testimony to that of the Commander in Chief.

H. M. ship Larne, Rangoon, 9th August 1824.

SIR,

I HAVE the honour to inform you that, according to your directions, I proceeded with a party of seamen and marines, in company with a detachment of the Madras Europeans, under the command of Colonel Kelly, to reconnoitre a stockade and village reported to be situated about eighteen miles up the Dallah creek.

We had not rowed above two miles up the creek before we fell in with two strong stockades, in a very narrow part of the river. The boats of His Majesty's ship Larne having waited a few minutes, to allow the other boats and the launch with the scaling ladders to close, the advance was sounded, and the attack was made under a heavy fire of guns and musketry from the Burmese. The scaling ladders being placed, the stockade was stormed, under every disadvantage, with great gallantry, the enemy running out in every direction into the jungle.

During the storming of the principal stockade, the Bombay artillery in the row-boats kept up a fire on the other, and succeeded in driving the Burmese out; and the second stockade was taken possession of without loss.

I have the honour to be, &c.

Extract of a Letter from Captain Chads, of His Majesty's Sloop Arachne, to Captain Coe, dated Rangoon, 7th November 1824.

SIR ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL having expressed a wish to detach a small force of one hundred and thirty Europeans and three hundred sepoys to attack Martaban, I gave Lieutenant Keele, first of this ship, charge of the naval part, consisting of twenty seamen and marines from this ship and ten from the Sophie, with six gun-vessels and a small mortar-boat, seven row gun-boats, and a transport of very light draft of water, to embark the troops in.

I have now the honour to inclose Lieutenant Keele's report to me of the complete success of the expedition. He informs me Lieutenant Bazely, of the Sophie, rendered him every assistance, and speaks in high praise of the constant good conduct of Mr. Lett, Master's Mate, of this ship.

This service has been performed in a manner to reflect great credit on Lieutenant Keele; and Lieutenant-Colonel Godwin, who commanded the land force, mentions in his public dispatches, in high terms, his gallantry and zeal.

*Honourable Company's Transport
Jennet Hutton, Martaban, 31st
October 1824.*

SIR,

IN compliance with your orders of the 12th instant, I proceeded down the river with the force you placed under my command, but from calms and currents did not enter Martaban river with all the flotilla till the 27th.

In passing up the river the boats crews, with a few men of the 41st, succeeded in destroying about thirty of the enemy's war boats, some of them pulling at least fifty oars, armed with swivels, muskets, and spears. On our closing the town, the ship grounded too far off to make use of her caronades with good effect; the enemy now opened their fire from the stockade, which was returned by all the row-boats, forming a line close along shore, till after sun set. The mortar-vessel likewise took her position, under Captain Kennon, of the artillery, and opened a well directed fire the whole of the night, killing, from report, great numbers of the enemy. By day-light on the 30th the troops were in the boats, and the advance being sounded, we pushed for the shore, with the loss of seven killed and fourteen wounded; the battery was stormed and carried, the enemy flying in all directions, leaving great numbers of dead and wounded. I here found the late Honourable Company's schooner Phaeton, with twelve of her crew in irons; her commander was taken off to Ava.

I have great pleasure in reporting to you the bravery and good conduct of the Officers and seamen whom you placed under my command, in short, Sir, every individual seemed animated with equal anxiety to distinguish himself on this occasion, and I trust Sir your instructions to me of co-operating with Colonel Godwin have been most fully acted up to.

I have the honour to be, &c.

of His Majesty's ship Arachne.

Extract of a Letter from Captain Chads, of His Majesty's Sloop Arachne, to Captain Coe, dated Rangoon, 8th December 1824.

ON the 30th ultimo, the enemy's boats were seen by the Honourable Company's cruizer Teignmouth, at the advanced post above Kemmindine, coming down in great numbers, loaded with men. The same evening they came forward with fire-rafts, which obliged the Teignmouth to slip and go below Kemmindine to avoid them; this unfortunately left that post exposed to a most furious attack on every side, the enemy's war-boats on its front, but it was nobly defended by its garrison, under Major Yates, and the enemy repulsed. On the next day, 1st of December, the enemy were seen in great numbers advancing towards Dalla, about five thousand men; and they also surrounded the Dagon Pagoda, where a constant heavy fire has been kept up. Captain Ryves, of the Sophie, in command during my absence, procured a guard of one hundred sepoys from the General for the transports, and placed this ship in her old station, about a mile and a half in advance of the shipping, to enfilade the Madras lines, and also ordered the Teignmouth back to her station, to support the post at Kemmindine. At day-light I returned and found things in this state, with the exception of the Teignmouth having been again driven from her station during the night by fire-rafts, and the post at Kemmindine again subject to furious and incessant attacks. I immediately sent the pinnace up, under Lieutenant Kellett and Mr. Pickey, Admiralty Midshipman, to gain information and reconnoitre, and shortly afterwards three gun-boats, under Mr. Cöyde, Midshipman, with a party of my seamen to fight the guns; this assistance was most timely, as the garrison was sorely pressed in every direction; from this critical situation, Lieutenant Kellett's highly judicious and determined gallant conduct immediately relieved them, by clearing both their flanks of the enemy by showers of grape-shot. This service, performed by a single boat, in the face of hundreds of the enemy's boats, was the admiration of the whole garrison; and Major Yates has expressed himself to me, in terms the most gratifying, for the able assistance Lieutenant Kellett afforded him.

The Teignmouth shortly afterwards resumed her station, and was constantly engaged with the enemy's war-boats, which had long guns in their bows, and annoyed her a great deal. In the afternoon, finding the enemy were making every effort to gain that post, and as it was of the last importance, both in a military and naval point of view, I ordered the Sophie up for its support, with three more gun-boats, and our party under Lieutenant Kellett to remain. Whilst this post is held, the enemy cannot annoy the shipping at Rangoon by fire, as the distance is great, and the winding of the river, with the fire-booms laid out, throw all the rafts upon the opposite side. The enemy upon the Dalla side having begun to throw up works, I ordered the Satellite armed transport, in charge of Lieutenant Dobson, of the Larne, with a party of seamen from this ship, to the support of the Good Hope transport, already for some time stationed there, and several of the small gun-vessels. These vessels have been from first to last occasionally exchanging shot with the enemy, dismounting their guns as fast as they got them up; and the Commander of the Good Hope, Mr. Binny, is entitled to my best thanks, for handsomely coming forward on this occasion, and for the essential service he has performed.

Early on the 3d, the Sophie took her station off Kemmindine. With the ebb, the enemy again brought fire-rafts down, not lighting them until within a very short distance of the ships, with their war-boats firing their shot over them, to prevent the approach of our boats. The Sophie cleared them, but the Teignmouth was touched, and on fire for a short time without damage. During this day, the enemy became extremely daring, finding their shot went farther than ours; upon which I sent the Sophie two long nines, which kept them farther off. The enemy's boats becoming more bold, it was thought right to endeavour to give them a check; and Captain Ryves, thinking they might be surprised, laid his plans accordingly, and succeeded to the fullest extent. A report of this gallant attack I inclose (No. 2), which will again bring to your notice Officers I have already mentioned to you for their good conduct. The result of this defeat of the enemy's war-boats has been highly beneficial, not one having ventured within gun-shot since. The two ships, however, have had their hands quite full, in keeping up a constant fire on the enemy attacking Kemmindine, and throwing up works against them, to mount guns in, which were dismounted as soon as got up without their having done any material damage. In the evening, Sir Archibald Campbell communicated to me his intention to attack the enemy's left wing towards Poussendown, and requesting a diversion to be made by a naval force up that river; a report of which I inclose (No. 3), and which ended in the total defeat of that portion of the enemy's force.

In the afternoon, finding the enemy at Dalla, strengthening themselves, I sent the Powerful mortar-vessel over, and threw a few shells, which had considerable effect.

On the 6th, in the morning, finding the enemy still persisting in his attacks on Kemmindine, I sent the mortar-vessel up there, which rendered the post very essential service, and relieved the garrison considerably. The enemy's war-boats still continued in sight in great numbers, but at a respectful distance. On the 7th, in the morning, the enemy were seen very busy with rafts and boats for fire, and with the strong ebb they brought them down, reaching nearly across the river, but as their boats now do not venture close, they were fired earlier; they consisted of upwards of twenty-six rafts and eight large boats, all lashed together. The Sophie just touched the outside one without injury, and held her ground. At noon the troops at the pagoda made another sally, and carried the whole of the enemy's entrenchments, taking their guns, ammunition, &c.; on receiving this information, I immediately sent every disposable man from this ship, under Mr. Manly, the Master, with twenty sepoys, in the steam vessel, up to Captain Ryves, to endeavour to intercept their boats and cut off their retreat; and in the night they went up, far beyond Pagoda Point, without seeing above four or five small boats, the enemy having retreated, and deserted the neighbourhood of Kemmindine.

Thus, Sir, has this formidable attack ended in the total discomfiture of the enemy; having called forth from the very small force I have the honour to command, in every instance, the greatest gallantry and uniform good conduct, under the utmost exertions by day and night, the greatest part of them having been in the boats since the starting of the expedition to Peque, on the 26th ultimo.

From Captain Ryves I have received all the aid and counsel that a good and valuable Officer could afford, and his determined perseverance in holding his ground, when the fire-rafts came down, merit the highest commendation; and from his ready and zealous co-operations with the post at Kemmindine, that place was greatly relieved in the arduous contest it was engaged in.

Of Lieutenant Kellett I cannot speak in terms sufficiently strong to express my admiration of his uniform gallantry.

Lieutenant Goldfinch's conduct has also been most conspicuous, together with all the Midshipmen named in my reports, not one of whom but have shewn individual acts of great bravery.

Also to Mr. Manly, Master of this ship, who has, from necessity been frequently left in charge during my absence, I feel much indebted.

These Officers, the seamen, and marines I had the pleasure to serve with, I earnestly beg to commend to your most favourable attention.

(Report, No. 2.)

Arachne, Rangoon, 8th December 1824.

SIR,

CAPTAIN Ryves having thought it practicable to surprise the enemy's war-boats, who were annoying the ships with their long guns very considerably, placed the whole of his disposable force of Europeans, about seventy in number, under the orders of Lieutenant Kellett, of this ship, and Lieutenant Goldfinch, of the Sophie, Lieutenant Clarke, of the Bombay marine, with Messrs. Pickey, Coyde, Scott, and Murray, Midshipmen; Mr. Clarke, Bombay marine, and Mr. Lindquist in charge of the gun-boats. This force was put into the three men of war's boats and six gun-boats, and, as the moon went down on the morning of the 4th instant, shoved off, and pulling up on the contrary shore to the war-boats, by day-light came abreast, and boldly made a dash at them, notwithstanding their great number and size; they were taken by surprise, but did not run till our boats were within pistol shot, when their confusion was great, and they fled with all haste, keeping up a smart fire; their large boats with heavy guns were fixed on by our boats, and from the fire of grape were soon unmanned and captured. Lieutenant Kellett came up with some of the first, with heavy guns, and Lieutenant Goldfinch, passing him, whilst taking possession, captured the boat of the commander of the war-boats, with the flag, her crew running into the jungle. The chase was continued three or four miles, when Lieutenant Kellett judged it prudent to secure his prizes, having an enemy of considerable force in his rear, up another branch of the river.

The result of this gallant exploit was the capture of seven large war-boats, four of which carried long-nines on the bow; and on their return they cut adrift and brought down a large floating stockade from Pagoda Point; and what adds to the value of this service is, that it was performed without the loss of a man.

Lieutenant Kellett's conduct on this and on former occasions speaks for itself, and I trust will meet with its due reward.

Lieutenant Goldfinch is a valuable Officer, and merits every praise; and Lieutenant Kellett reports the high gallantry of Lieutenant Clarke and the Midshipmen commanding the boats, and of every individual under his command.

I have the honour to be, &c.

(Report, No. 3.)

Arachne, Rangoon, 8th December 1824.

SIR,

SIR ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL, Commander of the Forces, having wished for a diversion to be made on the left flank of the enemy's line, posted on the Poussendown river, whilst he attacked them in the front, I proceeded with the whole of the disposable force I had, consisting of a few gun-vessels, three gun-boats, and several merchant-boats, to make an appearance, with about forty Europeans; I also took the steam and mortar-vessels, and in the evening of the 4th, dropped to the mouth of the river, and waiting till the last of the flood, took our station off the village of Poussendown about four o'clock. At six, I opened the fire of all our vessels, and made every appearance of landing, which brought the enemy down to us in great force, and their loss from our fire, and particularly the shells, was very considerable, ours only five natives wounded; this was continued till seven o'clock, when a signal, previously arranged, was made from the pagoda for our fire to cease as our troops advanced, and in a few minutes we had the satisfaction of seeing the enemy driven from every post, in the greatest confusion, not knowing which way to run, from the variety of attacks at the same time. Their loss of guns, ammunition, &c. was very great.

Mr. Reed, Admiralty Midshipman, and Mr. Gutters, Boatswain, were with me, and rendered me much service; and the conduct of all merits my best praise.

I have the honour to be, &c.

H. D. CHADS, Commander.

To Captain Coe, H. M. ship Liffey.

Extract of a Letter from Captain Chads, of His Majesty's Sloop Arachne, to Captain Coe, dated Rangoon, 16th December 1824.

WITHIN these last three days, the enemy having returned, and recommenced offensive operations, particularly by annoying us with immense quantities of fire-rafts, one of which consisted of upwards of sixty canoes, besides bamboo rafts, all loaded with oil and combustibles, I thought it probable these preparations might be destroyed; and as I had before sent a force up the Pain-lain branch of the river, without finding any thing, I this time ordered one up the Lyne branch, under Lieutenant Kellett, of this ship, to consist of the steam-vessel, with this ship's marines, and soldiers (kindly granted by Major Yates, commanding at Kemmindine), amounting in all to forty men for her defence, the pinnaces of the Arachne and Sophie, and to tow the Honourable Company's cruiser Prince of Wales. Before day-light yesterday morning, they proceeded with the first of the flood, and at a short distance above Pagoda Point, saw large numbers of the enemy's war-boats, at least two hundred, who retired in good order as they advanced, keeping up a smart fire from their long guns, five boats having them mounted, and taking their distance that the carronades should not reach them; when about seven miles up, a raft was drawn right across the river, and set on fire by them to prevent the advance of our vessels; but an opening was found, and Lieutenant Kellett, now seeing the river quite clear, with great judgment, decreasing the power of steam, deceived the enemy and lulled them into security, when, putting on the whole force of steam, and casting off the Prince of Wales, he was immediately within grape and musketry distance; the enemy, finding themselves in this situation, drew up in a regular line to receive them: this gallant little band was not however to be daunted by their show of resistance, but nobly dashed on, although the Prince of Wales was out of sight; the heavy fire from the two boats, carronades, and musketry, threw the enemy into confusion and panic, and they flew in all directions, leaving us in possession of three of their largest war-boats, the Chief's one mounting three guns, and pulling sixty oars; the other two, one in their bow, nine and six-pounders, with about forty other boats of all descriptions, many of them loaded with ammunition and provisions for their army before Rangoon.

The securing of thirty of these boats and destroying the others, took up the whole of the flood; when Lieutenant Kellett, having most fully accomplished my instructions and wishes, returned, destroying on his way down quantities of materials.

for fire-rafts, and a great many canoes laden with earth oil. The enemy's loss in killed and wounded must have been very great; ours, I rejoice to add, not a man hurt, the steam-vessel having been stockaded to secure the men.

I cannot find words sufficiently strong, in which to recommend Lieutenant Kellett's uniform gallantry to you; his conduct on this, as well as the former occasions, proves him a most valuable Officer. Lieutenant Goldfinch, of the Sophie, I have also frequently had occasion to name to you, and, with pleasure, I repeat my former recommendations; he was in the Sophie's pinnace, with Mr. Murray, Midshipman. Mr. Tomlinson, Admiralty Midshipman, commanded this ship's pinnace, and Mr. Winsor, Admiralty Midshipman, was in charge of the steam-vessel, and shewed his usual judgment and good conduct.

Lieutenant Kellett speaks in the highest terms of the determined steady conduct of every man under him, soldiers, sailors, and marines; and feels much indebted to Lieutenant Collinson, commanding the Honourable Company's cruiser Prince of Wales, for the able assistance that vessel rendered him.

During these operations, the Commander of the Forces, Sir Archibald Campbell, attacked the enemy in the same direction, and gained a most brilliant victory.

IN addition to the foregoing reports, Captain Coe has transmitted to Mr. Croker a letter from Captain Mitchell, of His Majesty's sloop Slaney, giving an account of the co-operation of a party of seamen and marines from that vessel, under the orders of Lieutenant Mathews, First of the Slaney, with the force employed, in May 1824, under Colonel M'Creagh, in the reduction of the island of Cheduba; in which service the following Officers and men of the Slaney were killed or wounded, viz. John Parr, corporal of marines, killed. Lieutenant H. B. Mathews, slightly wounded. James Bayning, boatswain, slightly wounded. John Thompson, quartermaster, dangerously wounded. Louis Paget, able seaman, dangerously wounded (since dead). Edward Chamberlain, captain's steward, slightly wounded.

And Captain Coe has also transmitted a report from Captain Ryves, of His Majesty's sloop Sophie, of a successful attack made upon some stockades near the village of Kemmindine, on the 3d of June 1824; in which the following loss was sustained by the naval part of the expedition, viz.

His Majesty's Ship Larne.

Peter Knox, quartermaster, killed.
Mr. Atherton, purser, slightly wounded.

His Majesty's Ship Sophie.

Mr. George Goldfinch, acting master, severely wounded.
Mr. Charles Scott, master's mate, slightly wounded.

Whitehall, August 10, 1825.

WHEREAS it has been humbly represented to the King, that a considerable number of persons did, on the 3d of this instant August, unlawfully and riotously assemble themselves together in a disorderly and tumultuous manner on the River Wear and its banks, for the purpose of compelling the Shipowners and others concerned in the trade of the port of Sunderland, to comply with certain regulations prescribed by them, with respect to the navigating of ships and vessels proceeding to and from that port, and did as much as in them lay, forcibly to prevent divers ships and vessels from sailing from the said port, assaulted the Magistrates and Peace Officers in the execution of their duty, and proceeded to other acts of violence;

His Majesty being sensible of the mischievous consequences which must inevitably arise from such illegal and dangerous proceedings, if not speedily suppressed, and deeming it indispensably necessary to have recourse to the most effectual measures, with a view of bringing to justice the persons concerned therein, has already directed that an adequate military and naval force should be stationed in those parts where the disturbances have prevailed, for the purpose of assisting the civil power (if necessary) in suppressing the same; and is hereby pleased to promise His most gracious pardon to any person or persons who have been concerned in the illegal proceedings before mentioned (except those who have committed or offered actual violence) who shall give such full information against others who have been also concerned in them as shall lead to their apprehension and conviction.

And, as a further encouragement, His Majesty is hereby pleased to promise to any person or persons (except as aforesaid) who shall discover and apprehend, or cause to be discovered and apprehended, the authors, abettors, or perpetrators of any of the illegal proceedings before mentioned, so that they or any of them may be duly convicted thereof, the sum of ONE HUNDRED POUNDS for each and every person so convicted; the said sum to be paid by the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury.

R. PEEL.

Whitehall, August 19, 1825.

WHEREAS it hath been humbly represented unto the King, that, on the 26th of July last, an anonymous threatening letter was sent to Mr. C. Wawn, of South Shields, bearing the South Shields post mark; and that, on the morning of the 10th instant, another anonymous threatening letter (apparently in the same handwriting) was feloniously sent to the said C. Wawn, bearing the North Shields post mark;

His Majesty, for the better apprehending and bringing to justice the persons concerned in writing and sending the said felonious threatening letter, is hereby pleased to promise His most gracious pardon to any one of them (except the actual author or authors), who shall discover his accomplice or accomplices therein, so that he, she, or they may be apprehended and convicted thereof.

R. PEEL.

And, as a further encouragement, a reward of THREE HUNDRED POUNDS is hereby offered by the said C. Wawn, to any person (except as aforesaid) who shall discover the writer of the last-mentioned threatening letter, so that he or she may be apprehended and convicted thereof.—Such reward to be paid on conviction by Messrs. Bowlby and Anderson, Solicitors, South Shields.
