AT the Court at Carlton-House, the 3d of May 1826,

PRESENT,

The KING's Most Excellent Majesty in Council.

WHEREAS by the Law of Navigation, foreign ships are permitted to import into any of the British possessions abroad, from the countries to which they belong, goods, the produce of those countries, and to export goods from such possessions to be carried to any foreign country whatever; and whereas also by an Act of Parliament, made and passed in the sixth year of the reign of His present Majesty, intituled "An Act to regulate the trade of the British possessions abroad," it is enacted, that the privileges granted by the Law of Navigation to foreign ships, shall be limited to the ships of those countries which, having colonial possessions, shall grant the like privileges of trading with those possessions to British ships, or which not having colonial possessions, shall place the commerce and navigation of this country, and of its possessions abroad, upon the footing of the most favoured nation; and whereas within the dominions of His Majesty the King of Prussia, the commerce and navigation of this country, and of its possessions abroad, have been placed upon the footing of the most favoured nation; His Majesty is pleased, by and with the advice of His Privy Council, to declare, that the ships of and belonging to the dominions of His Majesty the King of Prussia are entitled to the privileges so granted as aforesaid by the Law of Navigation, and may import from such the dominions of His Majesty the King of Prussia, into any of the British possessions abroad, goods, the produce of such dominions, and may export goods from such British possessions abroad, to be carried to any foreign country whatever:

And the Right Honourable the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury, and the Right Honourable Earl Bathurst, one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, are to give the necessary directions herein as to them may respectively appertain.

Jas. Buller.

Colonial-Office, Downing-Street, May 9, 1826.

EARL BATHURST has this day received from Sierra Leone Dispatches, which have been addressed to his Lordship, by the late Major-General Turner, under date of the 2d and 3d of March last, and of which the following are extracts:

Sierra Leone, March 2, 1826.

IN my last dispatch I had the honour to state to your Lordship that I was on the eve of proceeding to the Sherbro' country, for the purpose of consolidating those arrangements for the abolition of the slave trade, which I had entered into with the Kings and Native Chiefs. On the next day, 7th February, I sailed in His Majesty's Colonial brig Susan, accompanied by the brigantine Eleonore, and the Swift cutter, with a detachment of troops, consisting of fifty Europeans and forty Natives; there being but six regimental Officers at Sierra Leone, with five hundred men, none could be spared, and my Aide-de-Camp, Captain Ross, having recently died, there was but Lieutenant Robertson, Acting Major of Brigade, who could accompany me, except Staff Surgeon Stewart, as Medical Officer. Mr. Macaulay and Mr. Rendall, both Members of Council; had again the kindness to give me the benefit of their assistance.

On my arrival in the Sherbro, I discovered that the great slave dealers who had retired from the Sherbro and Sea Bar, on signing the Convention prohibiting the exportation of slaves, had joined with those of the Gallinas, and had come to the resolution of re-establishing the slave trade by force, even in the districts where it had been voluntarily given up by the Native Chiefs; and were there assembled in force, up the Boom river, seizing our people, and putting at defiance our power and our rights.

These slave dealers are all mulattoes, descendants of Europeans, strangers to the soil, and I grieve to say men generally educated in England. Their education gives them great superiority, and their wealth power.

My force was not of a nature, under ordinary circumstances, to justify my undertaking a difficult service up these rivers, but, as the Native Chiefs were wavering, and a great case of humanity at issue, I determined upon a rapid advance and attack of these people.

Captain Owen, Royal Navy, employed upon the surveying service, with the Leven frigate, and Albatross schooner, happening to be surveying these rivers at the time, I thought it my duty to communicate with him with a view to ascertain whether he could consistently with his instructions co-operate with me for a few days, which he very kindly and cordially consented to do.

The Leven, the Susan, and the Eleonore drew too much water to enter the rivers, but, by taking every thing out of the Albatross and Swift, we contrived to get them over the bar, and with them our different boats and four large canoes, we proceeded up the Boom river on the 16th February. Captain Owen appointed Lieutenant Mudge, first of the Leven and two Midshipmen with two boats and their crews to accompany me in the Swift, whilst he himself embarked in the Albatross, commanded by Lieutenant Owen, Royal Navy. The difficulty of getting these vessels up the river was considerable, and they frequently took the ground, but by unceasing exertions we got with the troops, two hours before day-light next morning, within two miles of the stockade of Bolu, (which they named Sierra Leone).

The Albatross had taken ground nine miles down the river, but I decided not to lose a moment in attacking the place. One of the guides acquainted me with a path which led through the woods to the rear of the town, and I sent a serjeant and twenty men to shew themselves there whilst we attacked in front. The unexpected appearance of this party threw the enemy into such confusion that they made a precipitate retreat into the woods, without waiting to fire the guns (found loaded and primed), upon the advanced guard, who thus landed without opposition and took possession of the place which was fortified in the manner usual with stockades, that is, a double row of palisadoes, the place a square, with flank defences thrown out at the angles; we found in it ten pieces of ordnance loaded, near one hundred stand of small arms of all sorts, a quantity of ammunition, nine barrels of powder, a quantity of loose balls, and a quantity of other stores, which, with fifteen persons, we secured and then reduced to ashes the town and stockade.

The prisoners and others having acquainted me that the principal stand was intended to be made at Maccaba, a place fifteen miles higher up the river. I set out for it the next morning, when I had the satisfaction to see the Albatross schooner join, having been lightened still further by discharging her ballast and water. About noon on the 19th, we all arrived within two miles of Maccaba, at a shoal over which we could not carry the vessels; the place being in sight, I ordered the men into the boats, and an immediate attack to be made upon it. Two boats with small brass guns in the bows, manned with seamen, under the command of Lieutenant Mudge, Royal Navy, and two large canoes with forty soldiers, under Lieutenant Robertson, Acting Major of Brigade, formed the advance guard; and I followed close with the rest of the troops, Captain Owen, Royal Navy, with the seamen accompanying me.

The extraordinary fertility of the soil producing impervious cane grass, generally from twelve to sixteen feet high, made it impracticable, without great delay, to secure our flanks by occupying the banks of the river, whilst with the steep banks, become very high at this dry season, it gave to the enemy a great advantage by its shelter. On approaching to the town, a flank fire of musquetry opened on the advanced guard, whilst two pieces of ordnance from the town enfiladed the river in front by a fire of grape.

Lieutenant Robertson, with the troops, made for the left bank, but a little confusion took place from several of the black rowers leaping overboard with fright, and nearly upsetting them; but he made good his landing, though he unfortunately received a wound through his leg, and I immediately joined him with the rest of the troops, the two little guns in the boat rendering us good service. Desirous to save loss to our little party as much as possible, I determined to force my way to the town through the long grass, but I was shortly checked by an impassable creek in front, which secured the town against assault on that bank. Seeing this, and the loss which would attend an advance in the boats, I immediately crossed the river with the principal part of the troops, and occupied the bank opposite to the town, where, from the shelter of the long grass, they soon silenced the two guns, and weakened the fire from the town; leaving three men in charge of Lieutenant Robertson, I decided under cover of their fire to carry the town by the boats, and having no other Officer, I joined them myself, and accompanied by the Naval Officers, seamen, and a few soldiers, we advanced rapidly and carried it without further loss.

I regret that, against an enemy so little worthy, several valuable men have been disabled; but the country is one of great strength, and the position was chosen with judgment. The nature of the country made it impossible to ascertain either the number or loss of the enemy. Not being able to learn that they had any other place up the river, and as they were thus driven out of our territories, defeated and disgraced, with the loss of their towns and stores, I determined to proceed no further, and, after carrying away the guns and stores, and destroying by fire the town and neighbouring village, we embarked, and got safely to the shipping in the Sherbro', on the 23d, after destroying the two principal strong holds, with eight smaller towns, where these wretches kept their victims in chains, until the ships were ready to receive them; and I sincerely trust that this lesson will teach the deluded of the country not to put further faith in the vain boastings of these wicked people, who, by administering to the worst passions of the ignorant and unfortunate inhabitants, not only depopulate and turn into deserts the most fertile plains which I have ever seen, but so blunt their feelings and brutalize their natures, that, for a few bottles of rum and heads of tobacco, the parent is found, without remorse, casting away his offspring. Each village is engaged against the other for the purpose of making prisoners; and men, like beasts of prey, are ever on the watch to seize their neighbours and their fellow-men.

Although, where each vied with the other in the discharge of laborious and arduous duties in the cause of humanity, it becomes difficult to name individuals, still it is my duty to state that I owe much to Captain Owen for his manly co-operation, and to bear testimony to his great zeal for the public service. To Lieutenant Mudge, Royal Navy, who was immediately attached to myself in command of the Swift cutter, I am under great obligations, not only for his unceasing and successful exertions in getting the vessel up the river, but for his judicious and spirited conduct in command of the gun-boats; to Lieutenant Owen, Royal Navy, who commanded and carried, by the most persevering exertions, the Albatross up the river, my best thanks are also due; his forwardness, both in the boats and on shore afterwards, are highly creditable to him; and I do but justice to Mr. Tudor, Midshipman of the Leven, in noticing his very spirited and conspicuous conduct in command of one of the gun-boats. To the other Officers and seamen, who did not fall so immediately under my notice, my best thanks are due.

I beg also to draw your Lordship's favourable notice to the conduct of Lieutenant Robertson, Acting Major of Brigade, who, although called upon to do much duty, from my having no Officer but himself, continued his exertions without even acquainting me that he was wounded. Staff-Surgeon Stewart was not only ready to give his professional assistance to those who required it, but was most ready to execute other duties which the want of Officers made sometimes necessary. To Mr. Rendall and Mr. Macaulay I am under the greatest obligation for their voluntary assistance; the former acted during the affair at Maccaba as my Aide-de-Camp, with no less credit to himself than advantage to me; and the latter was most indefatigable in his exertions to promote the public service. Mr. Campbell, Acting Master of the Susan, a volunteer upon the occasion, shewed much spirit and zeal, and was wounded in the arm.

Inclosed is a list of the casualties in this little affair; and I regret exceedingly that some valuable men are disabled. There is also a return of the ordnance, arms, and prisoners taken, and I will hope to have the good fortune to see those meaasures approved, which my sense of public duty compelled me to adopt, after three unsuccessful attempts at amicable adjustment, against a party of remorseless wretches who live and fatten upon the blood and misery of their fellow creatures.

Sierra Leone, 3d March 1826.

I LAMENT exceedingly that an attack of fever got up the Boom river, should prevent my having the honour of submitting to your Lordship some observations upon the bearings which the circumstances detailed in my despatch of the 2d instant have upon the state of this unhappy country, and the prospects which they hold out for a great revolution in the affairs of the inhabitants.

The people of the Gallinas having joined the insurgents in hostilities against this Government, have subjected themselves to all the penalties attending a state of war; and although the bar of the Gallinas river is an extremely difficult and hazardous undertaking, I think that, by blockading them, and making a strong party there, I shall completely break up the slave-trade, and stop for ever, from those shores, the export of near thirty thousand slaves annually, substituting agriculture, security of person and property, industry, civilization, and knowledge of the blessings of the Christian religion.

At all events, if my health is restored, I will do my best.
