And twenty-three private Acts.

THE following Address, having been transmitted to the Right Honourable William Sturges Bourne, one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, by J. Maxwell, Esq. M.P. was presented by him to His Majesty, who was pleased to receive the same very graciously:

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

The loyal and dutiful Address of the Noblemen, Freeholders, Heritors, and Magistrates of Renfrewshire.

May it please your Majesty,

WE, your Majesty's loyal and faithful subjects, the Noblemen, Freeholders, Heritors, Justices of the Peace, and Magistrates of Towns in the County of Renfrew, beg to approach your Royal presence to express our unfeigned gratification for, and high admiration of, the dignified manner in which your Majesty, in the exercise of one of the most important prerogatives of the Crown, has frustrated the unconstitutional influence attempted to be imposed on your Majesty, on occasion of a recent change of your Ministers.

Confidently relying on the wisdom and liberal policy of those whom your Majesty has lately called to your Councils, we trust that the great concerns of the Nation, both at home and abroad, will be conducted under their administration so as to diffuse and secure prosperity and happiness throughout the Empire, and maintain inviolate the unblemished integrity and dignity of the British character.

And while we take this occasion to renew our assurances of affectionate regard to your Majesty and your illustrious House; and of unalterable attachment to the excellent Constitution of our Country, we humbly but earnestly pray, that your Majesty would be graciously pleased to direct the attention of Parliament to the correction of those blemishes and imperfections which the progress of time, and changes in the state of society, have introduced into the execution of some of the fundamental laws of our venerable Constitution.
