

perceived them in their Flank, and put them into confusion, the Regiment of the Grand Marechal Sablonski particularly suffering very much. The Duke of Lorrain who marched with his Horse, the Imperial Infantry being six miles behind, knew not that the King was advanced so far, till his Majesty sent him word that he was Engaged with the Enemy, and desired him to advance without any loss of time; His Highness thereupon marched with all the speed he was able, but having a Defile to pass, he could not join the King so soon as otherwise he might have done. The Duke of Lorrain appearing with the first Squadrons, the Poles retreated to meet him, to avoid the great disorder which they began to fall into; and the German Dragoons having joined the Poles, they returned to charge the Enemy, who not being now able to maintain their ground, retired with some loss. That in this action 12 or 1300 Poles were slain, and among them a Palatin. That the King himself was in great danger, and his Son Prince Alexander being engaged among the forwardest, had his Horse killed under him. That on the 8th they expected the Imperial Infantry would come up, and that on the 9th the King and the Duke of Lorrain, had resolved to attack the Fort of Barkan, which they believed would occasion a very sharp Engagement.

And by a Letter which the Marquis de Grana has received from the Spanish Ambassador at Linz, dated the 13th Instant at Midnight, his Excellency has an Account,

That Count Lamberg was just arrived there from the Army, being sent by the Duke of Lorrain, to acquaint the Emperor, That the Christians had on the 9th. been Engaged with 10000 Turks, and that after a very sharp Fight, which lasted several hours, the Turks were totally defeated, and most of them cut in pieces; That a small number saved themselves over the Bridge of Barkan, which being afterwards broke, the Turks were deprived of the means to escape; some threw themselves into the River, and were drowned; and about 800 were taken Prisoners, among which was the Bassa of Silestria, and among the killed were found the new Bassa of Offen, and the Bassa of Aleppo; That Barkan immediately after Surrendered on Discretion; and that the King of Poland and the Duke of Lorrain resolved to follow this great and happy Success, with the attack of Gran.

Brussels, October 22. The several Intendants are gone from hence to their respective Provinces, to receive the Contributions which the Marquis de Grana has ordered to be raised upon the Subjects of France. Some days ago a Gentleman who belongs to the Baron de Quincy, with several others, were brought Prisoners hither from Alois, where the said Gentleman was employed by his Master to receive his Rents. The French were yesterday at Treveuren, to raise Contributions, upon notice whereof his Excellency sent a strong Party of Horse from hence, but the French were retired before they could get thither. The Marechal d'Humieres, who is still at Lessines, unless he decamped this morning (which some Deserters of yesterday say he intended) has enlarged the quarters of his Army as far as Leuze. We have advice that a considerable body of French Horse and some Foot, is encamped at Neueruaing to preserve the French Village, on that side from Military execution, for not paying their Contributions; and Monsieur Montal is marching with his Troop, to Maubeuge to hinder the Spaniards from raising Contributions between the Sambre and the Meuse.

The Victory obtained against the Turks at Barkan, is the more considerable, for that it was against the best and choicest part of their remaining Army. The consequences of it are like to be great, and may occasion the taking of Gran, Agria, and Newhausen. We are told that in the first days action the King of Poland was missing for two hours, and believed to be either killed or taken; and that above 1300 Poles with many good Officers were slain, and that their loss would have been greater, had not the Duke of Lorrain hastened with extraordinary diligence to their assistance.

Paris, Octob. 23. They write from Flanders, that the Spanish Troops have fallen upon some of our Parties, and that several men have been killed and taken Prisoners. Before this news came, it was said that the Marechal d'Humieres had Orders to put his Troops into Winter quarters. An Express has been sent to him from hence.
