No. 2.

To His Most Excellent Majesty, WILLIAM the FOURTH, by the Grace of God, KING of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

The humble Address of His Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Members of the Irish Branch of the Northern Yacht Club, assembled in Belfast.

May it please your Majesty,

YOUR Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Members of the Irish Branch of the Northern Yacht Club, humbly beg to approach your Majesty's Royal Person with expressions of the sincerest condolence for the great loss your Majesty, as well as the Nation at large, has sustained by the demise of your Majesty's Royal Brother and late much lamented Sovereign, King George the Fourth, under whose auspicious reign and wise counsels, the empire has arrived to its present state of eminence and superiority.

We have further to pray your Majesty most humbly, as our Monarch, to accept our warmest and most dutiful congratulations on your Majesty's happy accession to the Throne of these Realms; we offer up our humble congratulations, not only in common with all your Majesty's most attached and faithful subjects, but we humbly claim a privilege more exclusively our own, and which is to us most dear, as Members of a Society of which your Majesty deigned to become the Patron. A Society that endeavours, in a pursuit essentially national, humbly to emulate a profession, of which your Majesty has been the most illustrious ornament, and we trust that, from early participation with us in our competition for superiority, our sons may be trained to render, if occasion requires, efficient service to your Majesty and your illustrious House, in that profession the most constitutional and effective in maintenance of your Majesty's power, and in defence of your Majesty's extensive dominions.

That your Majesty's reign may be long and prosperous, we offer up our most fervent prayers to the Almighty Ruler of Kings, and that you may, with our most gracious Queen Adelaide, your Majesty's illustrious Consort, (to whose virtues we beg to offer our humble tribute,) live long to reign in the hearts of your faithful and attached subjects, and prove that affection and freedom, united to the purest loyalty and attachment to the constitutional laws, are the strongest and surest bulwarks of the Throne.

Signed on behalf, and at the request of the meeting,
Donegall, Chairman.
Dated at Belfast, the 10th day of August 1830.
