

doms, a subject of general gratulation and joy, we behold in a Sovereign brought up in reverence for our religious interests, and in a service by which our maritime and commercial distinctions are sustained, a ground of confident assurance on which we may securely rest, and the pledges of attachment to the laws and established institutions of our country.

These sentiments are still more strongly impressed upon our minds, when we contemplate the accession of your Majesty's gracious Consort, already so endeared to the affections of your people, by her domestic virtues.

Feeling in the personal qualities of your Majesty, and in your Majesty's gracious declarations, every motive for attachment and loyalty, and every security for a continuance of the happiness we enjoy, we intreat the Almighty to render them instrumental to the encouragement of the established religion, and the advancement of the best interests of every class of the community.

The humble Address of the Bishop, Dean and Chapter of Ely, and the Clergy of the Isle of Ely.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Bishop, Dean and Chapter of Ely, and Clergy of the Isle of Ely, beg to offer our sincere condolence on the demise of our late most gracious Sovereign, the great object of whose reign was to promote the happiness of his subjects, a Monarch under whose mild government, and that of your Majesty's Protestant Ancestors, the general prosperity of the country, its internal strength, and external weight have rapidly increased. And whilst the freedom of the people has been confirmed, and the laws faithfully and equitably administered, the honour of the kingdom has been maintained, its dominions extended, and its character in arts and in arms advanced to the first rank among the nations of the world. That these will be upheld under your Majesty's rule, that the laws and constitution will be protected, and the principles of pure religion cherished, we have a well grounded confidence, and we most cordially congratulate your Majesty on your accession to the Throne of these Realms,—beseeching the Almighty Disposer of events long to preserve your valuable life for the welfare and happiness of a loyal people.
