Lord Chamberlain's Office, December 18, 1834.

ORDERS for the Court's change of mourning, on Thursday the 1st of January 1835, for His late Royal Highness the Duke of Gloucester, first cousin and brother in law to the King, viz.

The Ladies to wear black silk, fringed or plain linen, white gloves, necklaces and ear-rings, black or white shoes, fans and tippets.

The Gentlemen to wear black, full trimmed, fringed or plain linen, black swords and buckles.

The Court to change the mourning further on Thursday the 8th of January 1835, viz.

The Ladies to wear black silk or velvet, coloured ribbons, fans and tippets, or plain white, or white and gold, or white and silver stuffs, with black ribbons.

The Gentlemen to wear black coats, and black or plain white, or white and gold, or white and silver stuff waistcoats, full trimmed, coloured swords and buckles.

And on Thursday the 15th of January 1835, the Court to go out of mourning.

Whitehall, December 18, 1834.

THIS day being appointed for the further prorogation of Parliament by Commission, the Lords Commissioners (consisting of the Lord Chancellor, the Earl of Rosslyn, Lord President of the Council, and the Earl of Jersey, Lord Chamberlain) assembled at three o'clock, in the room heretofore appropriated as the Library of the House of Lords, the Commons being assembled in a Committee-room contiguous thereto. Mr. Pulman, the Yeoman Usher of the Black Rod, was directed by the Lord Chancellor to require the immediate attendance of the Commons in the usual course; and the Commons being come thither, the Commission was read by the Clerk, and the Lord Chancellor signified to both Houses His Majesty's royal will and pleasure, that the Parliament should be further prorogued to Thursday the fifteenth day of January next, to be then and there holden, and the Parliament was prorogued accordingly.
