

Frankfort, July 21. This day an Expreſs paſſed through this place by whom we have Letters of the 19th Inſtant from Lintz, which give an account; That the Imperial Army having repaſſed the Danube betwixt Wulfta and Buda, they advanced on the 16th Inſtant towards the Turks that were encamped in ſeveral odies, and having forced them from their Camps, purſued them three Leagues beyond Buda, which put the Inhabitants of that City into ſo great a Conſternation, that they abandoned the lower Town, having firſt ſet Fire to ſeveral Houſes, but the Imperialiſts entred the place time enough to put out the Fire before it had done any great harm; After which they advanced to the Ditch of the upper Town, and having made themſelves Maſters of it, they attached the Miners to the Wall, and were at work (when the Expreſs that brought this news came from the Camp) to raiſe ſeveral Batteries as well againſt the Town as the Caſtle, which it was hoped would not hold out many days.

Cologne, July 21. The Troops of our Elector continue encamped at Zons; The general review that was appointed to have been held yeſterday, being put off for a day or two. We have adviced that part of the Marſchal de Crequi's Army is come into the Country of Eyſſe, about nine Leagues from hence; And it's believed they will joyn the Elector's Forces.

Brussels, July 25. Monſieur de Chantay parted from hence the 22th Inſtant, having as we told you in our laſt, ſettled with the Marquis de Grana the matter of the Contributions. This day his Excellency entertained all his General Officers at Dinner at a Houſe near the Camp, which will break up to morrow, and the Troops will return to their ſeveral Garriſons; But it's ſaid his Excellency intends before they march off, to reform 40 Troops of Horſe, and to put the men into other Troops, which are to be made up 50 each. Laſt night arrived here an Expreſs, by whom we have Letters from the Imperial Camp before Buda of the 16th Inſtant. They tell us, That the Duke of Lorraine having cauſed the Army to paſs the Danube over a Bridge of Boats at the Iſle of St. Andrew, which they did without any oppoſition from the Turks, who being encamped in ſeveral Bodies on this ſide Buda, upon the approach of the Chriſtians abandoned their Quarters, and fled in the greateſt fear and conſternation imaginable; His Highneſs advanced with the Army in great order to Buda, and detached ſome Troops to attack the lower Town, which they found the Enemy had quitted, having firſt ſet Fire to it, but the Imperialiſts entred it time enough to extinguish the Fire before it had done much damage; and when theſe Letters were written, their Mines were prepared, and their Batteries were almoſt finiſhed, to attack the upper Town, which it's concluded is taken before this time. The Letters add, That the Duke of Lorraine had notice that Count Leſly had burnt the Bridge of Eſſer; but that his Highneſs not having had any account of it from Count Leſly himſelf, had no great credit to it.

The States of Holland have, in conſideration the diſbanding

Paris, July 26. The French Fleet continues on the Coaſt of Capſtonia; and will, it's ſaid, be reinforced with fix Men of War more from Thoulon; Monſieur du Laſne is very ill of a Fever, but continues however on board his Ship. We have adviced that part of the Venetian Fleet commanded by the Sieur Molino was arrived in the Archipelago, and had taken ſeveral Turkiſh Gallies, and an Iſland, where they made a very conſiderable Booty. It is alſo ſaid that the Morlaques being joyned with the Venetian Troops in Dalmatia, had taken a great Booty of Turks, of whom 1000 were killed upon the place; of which we muſt expect a more particular account.
