The Angel has been, and always will be, with proper attention, a good and comfortable house; there is no other inn in the town that is capable of accommodating noblemen's and

Lymington has to boast of accommodations superior to very many watering places; there are excellent reading-rooms, and hot and cold baths; steam packets to the island, Southampton, and Portsmouth, daily, and coaches from the Inn to and from London, Southampton, Weymouth, and neighbouring towns.

The proximity of the river to the ocean, induces the frequent landing of passengers from East Indiamen, &c.; and the beautiful views of the Needles, the Isle of Wight, and the Solent, the respectability of the neighbourhood, and the delightful roads and drives in the Forest, are local attractions which insure to the Angel Hotel a first rate trade.

The furniture, fixtures, cellar of choice wines, and out door stock may be taken at a valuation, and the premises may be viewed.
