Whilst we sincerely lament the demise of our late most gracious Sovereign, the virtues of whose private life not less than the many wise and timely reforms which marked his reign, justly endeared him to his subjects; we at the same time entertain the most cheering anticipations of increased national happiness under your Majesty's sway. We hail, with feelings of unmixed gratification, the first gracious acts and declarations of your Majesty; gladly recognizing in them the most satisfactory evidences that the tender care of your enlightened, patriotic, and Illustrious Parent has been, during your earlier years, sedulously and successfully directed to the development and culture of your mental powers, and gratefully acknowledging the beneficent Providence that has thus secured for these nations the inestimable blessing of a Sovereign; imbued with the principles of civil and religious liberty.

May your Majesty's reign, so auspiciously commenced, be distinguished throughout by peace abroad, and by tranquillity at home, exemplifying to the world the blessed results of a liberal and enlightened policy in an increased cultivation of the arts, a wide extension and improvement of all useful institutions, and an enlarged union of all classes of your subjects in the enjoyment of equal rights; and may your Majesty be permitted, by the great disposer of all human affairs, long to enjoy the cordial affections and loyal confidence which a free, happy, and intelligent people will ever gratefully accord to their wise and beneficent Sovereign.
