Admiralty, October 7, 1840.

DISPATCHES, of which the following are copies or extracts, have been this day received at this Office, addressed to Richard More O'Ferrall, Esq. by Admiral the Honourable Sir Robert Stopford, G. C. B. Commander in Chief of Her Majesty's ships and vessels in the Mediterranean:

Extract of a Dispatch from Admiral the Honourable Sir Robert Stopford, to R. M. O'Ferrall, Esq. dated Princess Charlotte, D'jounie Bay, near Beyrout, September 29, 1840.

I ARRIVED off Beyrout on the morning of the 9th, where I found Commodore Napier with the ships and vessels named in the margin*.

The Turkish expedition, under Rear-Admiral Walker, of the Ottoman navy, joined at the same time from Cyprus, consisting of a line of battle ship, two frigates, and two corvettes, with twenty-four transports, carrying five thousand three hundred and seventy-three troops, commanded by Selim Pasha.

Commodore Napier, having previously examined the coast and selected a position, accompanied by Lieutenant Aldridge, of the Engineers (for I lament to say Lieutenant-Colonel Sir Charles Smith has been so extremely ill since his arrival as to incapacitate him for any active duty), I directed the Commodore to complete his plans and arrangements; and the same night the marines were removed to the steamers, and the whole, amounting to about seven thousand Turks and allies, were in readiness to land in the morning; when after manœuvring some time before Beyrout, lined with Egyptian troops, in order to distract their attention, the Commodore hastened to the point of disembarkation, and succeeded without opposition or accident of any kind.

* Powerful, Ganges, Edinburgh, Revenge, Beuhow, Pique, Gorgon, S. V., Hydra, S. V.

For a more minute detail of this operation I must refer you to the Commodore's letter of the 16th, a copy of which is herewith enclosed.

Great praise is due to Commodore Napier, whose indefatigable zeal and activity in securing his position were well seconded by the officers and men under his command.

In order to protect the landing, and insure the safety of the troops exposed to a sudden attack of an overwhelming force till the requisite defences were completed, I found it necessary to occupy the attention of the Egyptian army, which made a formidable appearance in armed masses along the hedges, and under cover of the gardens, and broken ground between the town and the sea, and opened a fire upon them from the shipping, taking care to avoid injuring the town, while the Austrian frigate Guerriera, commanded by His Royal Highness Prince Charles Frederic, Lipsia covette, and Her Majesty's brig Zebra, took up a commanding position in St George's Bay, enfilading the road by the beach, covering the bridge conducting to it, and drove the Egyptians from their encampment on the landside of the town.

On the forenoon of the 11th, a letter was sent by Rear-Admiral Baudiera and myself, in the name of the Sultan, to Soliman Pasha, the Commander of the Egyptian troops, (of which a copy is enclosed, as well as of his answer). Agreeably to his request, the letter was again sent, in French, with instructions to the Officers to wait half an hour for the answer, much time having previously been lost. At the end of that time a verbal message only was returned, that an answer would be sent the following morning, which being too palpably evasive as circumstances then were, and that he might benefit by a night's delay, by which his troops might have been upon our quarters, and his powder and provisions removed without danger or accident from our fire, or otherwise profit by the interval; I ordered the fire to be renewed, and to be partially and sparingly kept up for the night, against the fort only, and principally against one having mounted guns, in order to disturb their movements, as well as to sustain the confidence of the people of the country in our protection, and aid in the resumption of their allegiance to the Sultan.

The mountaineers have come in considerable numbers, principally, I understand, Christians. Muskets, with ammunition, have been distributed with all possible discrimination and caution, and the demand for them is increasing. On being supplied, they generally return to their abodes in the recesses of the mountains; some skirmishing is said to have taken place between them and the Egyptians; and Captain Martin's letter of the 15th, of which a copy is enclosed, will shew that good service had been done by a party of two hundred and fifty of them at Batrona.

The line of operations taken up by the squadron, extends from Tripoli to Caffa, beyond Acre, and several points commanding the road along the coast have been taken, but the Egyptian army, said to be fifteen thousand strong, is concentrated within a few hours' march, and an advanced post of about four hundred men, is seen on the brow of a hill, near our camp.

A new appointment of Pashas has taken place, and Isset Pasha has just arrived to take possession of his province.

We have been now ten days occupied incessantly on very active and fatiguing service, and it is gratifying to me to be enabled to notice to their Lordships the fine spirit with which it has been carried on both on shore and on board. Commodore Napier's letter will speak for the former, and my own observation bears equal testimony to the other, but where the exertions of all are so conspicuous it would be impossible as invidious to particularize individual merit.

From Rear-Admiral Baron de Baudiera I have received the most kind, ready, able, and efficient advice and assistance; and the zeal and active exertions of His Royal Highness the Archduke Charles Frederic of Austria have been most prominent upon every occasion. The Austrian squadron has been of the greatest service on this expedition; two hundred of their marines are now serving on shore with ours, and the labours and fatigue duties shared in common.

To the zealous, persevering, and active exertions of Rear-Admiral Walker, in command of the Ottoman squadron, his captain, officers, and men, much credit is due for the ready co-operation and good understanding kept up between the two services in the indefatigable performance of their arduous duties.

The steam vessels have been eminently useful in constantly moving along a great extent of coast with troops and arms, and taking part in the attacks upon the different forts, which services have been executed entirely to my satisfaction.

I have, &c.

(Signed) ROBERT STOPFORD, Admiral.

WE the Admirals of the British and Austrian Squadrons, acting in obedience to the instructions of our respective Governments, and in the interests of His Highness the Sultan, consider it our duty to represent to your Excellency our earnest desire to stop the effusion of blood, and to call upon your Excellency to withdraw your troops from Beyrout, and to deliver the town to our united forces to be retained in the name of the Sultan.

Your Excellency will have observed from the fire of the ships yesterday, a small specimen only of the course we shall be compelled to pursue.

The fire has not been pressed this morning, that your Excellency may benefit by the pause, and upon reflection come to the decision, in consonance with our benevolent views to spare the innocent inhabitants from the inevitable horrors which a few hours will inflict upon them.

We request your Excellency will send an answer, as soon as you can, or at the latest by half-past one.

ROBERT STOPFORD, Admiral.

LE Générale Soliman Pacha à l'honneur de présenter ses salutations à Messieurs les Amiraux des escadres Anglaise et Autrichienne, et en même temps il les prévient, que ne sachant pas lire la langue Anglaise, il lui est impossible de répondre à moins que Messieurs les Amiraux ne veuillent bien lui faire traduire en Français, et un Turque, ou en Arab leur communication.

A Messieurs Les Amiraux

Commandant les Escadres Anglaise et Autrichienne, Levant, Baurriect.

Princess Charlotte, off Beyrout,
September 16, 1840.

I WAS sent on shore this afternoon to the town with a flag of truce, and a letter addressed to Soliman Pacha. My orders were to remain half an hour for an answer; on reaching the town I was received by an officer, who I understood was the Captain of the Port, to whom I delivered the letter; I was not permitted to remain on shore, but laid off; at the end of half an hour, twenty minutes after five P. M. the same officer returned with another, who I understood to be Soliman Pacha's Secretary, who delivered me the following message in French, repeated twice over at my request.

"That His Highness was then engaged at a Council of War, after which it was his intention to review his troops; but that his answer would be ready next morning." I demanded at what hour, when the Secretary, after a word or two with the Captain of the Port, fixed two hours after sunrise.

Extract of a Letter from Commodore Napier, of Her Majesty's ship Powerful, to Admiral, the Honourable Sir Robert Stopford, G. C. B. — Dated D'journie, Head Quarters of the Army of Lebanon, 16th September, 1840.

IN execution of your order of the 9th inst. I removed the whole of the Turkish troops from the transports and the marines of the squadron into the steamers. The Dido and Wasp took up an anchorage well up to Beyrout point, in order to draw Soliman Pasha's attention from the position I intended to disembark at. Soon after daylight, the squadron and steamers you had put under my orders weighed, the Turkish squadron, under Admiral Walker, weighed also, and the whole, with the exception of Zebra, who flanked the Egyptian camp, worked up to Beyrout point, where a considerable force of the enemy was in position.

When the breeze freshened, the whole bore up for D'journie, "Castor" and "Hydra," anchored close to Dog River, landed the Turkish troops, and completely blocked up the pass leading to D'journie.

The Powerful and Pique, Gorgon, Cyclops, and Phoenix, followed by the Turkish squadron, ran into the bay of D'journie, and landed the troops in an incredibly short time, owing to the excellent arrangement of Captain Reynolds, who took charge of the landing. Admiral Walker put his troops on shore at the same moment with great celerity and order; a position was then taken up, and the artillery landed, the few Albanians stationed here retired without firing a shot. The Carysfort and Dido went off D'jebel about three leagues to the northward, to act against a strong tower, garrisoned by Albanian troops.

D'journie is a good sized bay, with a promontory projecting considerably into the sea. A road from Beyrout lays along the shore, and is practicable for infantry, artillery, and cavalry; this road the "Revenge" covered. The road from Tripoli leads also along shore, and the Wasp and Phoenix covered a gorge, over which it would be necessary to pass. Two roads lead from Balbec by Antura, where an excellent position was taken up by two battalions of Turks, supported by five companies of marines. The left of this is protected by an impassable gorge; the right rests on the sea, Dog River separating it from high ground in front.

The first day the inhabitants who had been driven into the mountains, came in slowly for arms, but these few took them with great avidity, and hastened to the mountains to drive away the Emir Bechir's troops, and open the mountain passes,—this done, the mountaineers have flocked in in great numbers, with the Sheiks, who have crowded to the standard of the Sultan.

I beg to enclose Captain Martin's reports* of the occupation of D'jebel and Patroun, in which he speaks highly of Captain Austen, of the Cyclops, and and of the officers employed.

I regret the loss he met with;† it was not to be avoided. Many Albanians have suffered by their severity. The inhabitants of this city are most warlike and determined.

* See my letter No. 99, 15th September.

† These returns have not been received.

Ibrahim Pasha reconnoitred our positions the day before yesterday.

I have sent a battalion of Turks in advance of Gazer to open the country, and give due notice. Should he endeavour to turn our left by that road, which he will have some difficulty in doing, as the country is covered by the broadsides of the ships.

I have much reason to be satisfied with the zeal of the whole of the officers and seamen employed: their exertions in completing our lines under Mr. Aldridge, of the Engineers, is beyond all praise.

Permit me, Sir, to congratulate you on the first success of the army of Lebanon. You, yesterday, were witness of the arrival of His Highness the Emir Abdallah, the Governor of the district of Kisroonan, and of the enthusiasm of the mountaineers; and if this continues, I have every reason to think that the Egyptian army will be obliged to retire from the sea coast, and the mountains of Lebanon.

I have, &c.

(Signed)

CHARLES NAPIER,
Commodore.

Extract of a Dispatch from Captain Martin, of Her Majesty's Ship Carysfort, to Admiral the Honourable Sir Robert Stopford. Dated Gebail, 15th September 1840.

I HAVE received information that 500 Albanian troops occupy the town of Batroun, about ten miles to the north of Gebail; and the mountaineers who gave me the intelligence, say they are willing to attack the place, if supported by the fire of some ships.

I am therefore about to proceed there, towed by the Cyclops, who takes up about 250 of the mountaineers, to be landed in the neighbourhood.

Large bodies of men whom we have armed have returned to the mountains, as they say, for the purpose of blockading an Emir who has shut himself up in a convent with several hundred men. I hope, under any circumstances, to be able to return to Gebail to-night.

Extract of a Dispatch from Captain Martin, of Her Majesty's ship Carysfort, to Admiral the Honourable Sir Robert Stopford, dated Batroun, September 15th, 1840.

I HAVE the honour to inform you that at three, 30 p.m. I anchored within musket shot of Batroun, having been towed from Gebail by Her Majesty's steam-vessel Cyclops. By this time the 250 mountaineers who were embarked on board the Cyclops had been armed and organized under the zealous and able direction of Captain Austen on approaching Batroun, we observed bodies of Albanians in different parts of the town apparently preparing for defence, and the positions of the Carysfort and Cyclops were taken up with a view to forcing them from their strong holds. The Carysfort and Cyclops commenced firing with great effect, whilst the Cyclops' shells were searching the spots where the Albanians from time to time halted. The 250 mountaineers whom we had armed were landed by the Carysfort's boats, under Lieutenant Stephens, the Hastings' boats under Lieutenant Thompson, and the Cyclops' boats under Mr. Glynn, Mate.

The greater part of these immediately followed on the track of the Albanians, whilst another party took possession of Batroun. I have reason to believe that the Albanians suffered severely from the effects of the shot and shells; whilst, I am happy to say, that our only casualty has been one mountaineer severely wounded.

I am sorry to say that the head of an Albanian was brought to me as a trophy, immediately after I landed, but I have endeavoured to discourage this brutal mode of warfare, by offering a reward of ten piastres and a musket for every prisoner the mountaineers will bring me.

I am, &c.

(Signed) H. B. MARTIN, Captain.

P. S. I enclose two letters, which reached me today, and I trust, that when you have read them, you will be of my opinion, that I have not acted injudiciously in pushing the outposts of the fleet and camp to this point.

H. B. MARTIN, Captain.

Extract of a Letter from Captain Martin, of Her Majesty's ship Carysfort, to Commodore Napier, of Her Majesty's ship Powerful, dated Gebail, September 14, 1840.

I HAVE the honour to inform you, that the arms which reached me by the Cyclops last midnight, have been distributed to the mountaineers, and that there are so many unarmed, that I think I can dispose of more. As far as circumstances will permit, the greatest precaution has been taken to place these arms in trustworthy hands.

The distribution took place under my own eye, but was more immediately and minutely superintended by Captain Austin, of Her Majesty's steam vessel Cyclops, to whose zeal in the performance of this duty I have been greatly indebted.

I have detained the Hastings' boats, under the impression, that if the enemy should advance from the northward in the absence of a steamer, my only means of annoying them will be by the boats' carronades.

It is impossible to state the exact number of mountaineers that have come down to us, but I should estimate them at from three to four thousand, and, as far as appearances go, enthusiastic in their hostility to the Egyptians.

The flocks and herds are again feeding in the neighbourhood of Gebail. A few shops have been re-opened, and confidence amongst the people seems to be growing.

I am, &c.
