Admiralty, June 9, 1841.

DISPATCHES were yesterday received at this office from Commodore Sir J. J. G. Bremer, C. B., addressed to R. More O'Ferrall, Esq. of which the following are copies or extracts:

(No. 13.)

SIR, Wellesley, off Lintin, February 24, 1841.

MY letter (No. 4) of the 9th of January, will have made their Lordships acquainted with the progress of operations of this expedition up to that date, when a suspension of hostilities was agreed to by Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary; this was followed by negotiations which proceeded until the 20th, when the preliminaries of a treaty were agreed upon, under seal of the Chinese Commissioner, one of the conditions of which was the cession of the island of Hong Kong to Her Majesty, and the restoration of Chuenpee and Tycock Tow to the Chinese, together with the evacuation of Chusan at the earliest possible period. His Excellency in consequence requested me to move the force from the immediate neighbourhood of the Bocca Tigris, and, having made the necessary arrangements with the Chinese Admiral Commanding in Chief, the forts were delivered to his officers, under the usual salutes, on the 21st, and the fleet proceeded to the anchorage off the west end of Lantao Island.

Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary and the Imperial Commissioner having arranged to have a formal meeting at the Second Bar, in the River, on the 26th, I detached the Calliope and Larne, and Madagascar and Nemesis steamers, to the Bocca Tigris, under the immediate command of Captain Herbert, of the Calliope; a guard of honour, composed of one hundred picked men of the royal marines, under Captain Ellis, R.M. of the Wellesley, and the band of that ship were embarked. As I am not a joint plenipotentiary, and consequently could have taken no part in the negotiations, I considered that it would not be consistent with my rank as Commander in Chief to appear, and I therefore sent Captain Matland, my Flag Captain, to convey my compliments to the Imperial Commissioner; he was accompanied by Captain the Honourable R. S. Dundas, of Her Majesty's ship Melville, and as many Officers of the Fleet as could be spared; the party was received with every possible mark of distinction and respect, the troops were drawn up on the ramparts of the forts, and salutes fired from all; a sumptuous entertainment had been prepared, to which the Officers were invited, after having been presented to the High Commissioner, and the negotiations proceeded in a satisfactory manner, the particulars have been stated by the Plenipotentiary to Her Majesty's Government.

On the same day I proceeded to Hong Kong, and took formal possession of the island, and hoisted the colours on it, with the usual salutes and ceremonies. By the terms of the treaty, the port of Canton was to be opened to the trade of all nations, on the 2d February, and as a proof of the sincere desire on the part of the British functionary, to evince good faith, I had, at his request, sent the Columbine to Chusan, and an overland dispatch, by the hands of a Chinese special messenger, directing Brigadier Burrell and Captain Bouchier, of the Blonde, to use every effort to embark the stores, troops, &c., and restore the island to the Chinese authorities.

The proclamation for the opening of the port on the 2d did not appear, and on the 11th the two Ministers again met at the Bocca Tigris, and, after a discussion of several hours, on this day and the next, Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary acceded to a further delay (not to exceed ten days), in order that the definitive treaty might be fairly prepared. I must confess that from this moment my faith in the sincerity of the Chinese Commissioner was completely destroyed, my doubts were also strengthened by the reports of the Officers I sent up to the place of meeting, who stated that military works on a great scale were in progress, troops collected on the heights, and camps protected by entrenchments, arising on both sides of the river, and that the island of North Wangtong had become a mass of cannon. These indications being decidedly warlike, I determined to move the light division at once to Macao roads, and proceeded thither myself on the 13th, to confer with his Excellency the Plenipotentiary, and await events. I found that the treaty, as agreed upon by the Commissioner and Her Majesty's Minister, had been sent up to the Bocca Tigris, for transmission to Canton, by the Nemesis, with orders to await an answer until the night of the 15th, the period the confidential person employed by the Chinese Commissioner had named for the purpose.

The accounts daily received by Merchants and others at Macao from Canton, were of the most hostile character, and an edict, purporting to be from the Emperor, calling on all his officers and people to exterminate us, was published, together with a proclamation (the authenticity of which I have, however, been unable to establish), offering 50,000 dollars for my head, and a like sum for that of the Plenipotentiary. On the morning of the 19th the Nemesis arrived from the Bocca Tigris without any reply, and all doubt was at an end, a shot having been fired at her boat from North Wangtong; I instantly detached the light division, consisting of the ships named in the margin,* under Captain Herbert (who was accompanied by his Excellency the Plenipotentiary), with directions not to run any unnecessary hazard until the body of the force came up, but to prevent as much as possible any further defensive preparations on the part of the enemy. I proceeded at the same time to Hong Kong, and weighed with the ships of the line, the Queen and Madagascar steamers, leaving the Druid, Jupiter, and transports to follow.

Captain Herbert took up his former position in the western channel off Wangtong on the 20th, and on the 22d he proceeded in the Nemesis, with some boats of the squadron, to the channel, at the back of An-unghoy; his letter, a copy of which I enclose,† will afford their Lordships every information; and it only remains for me to express my hope, that the gallant manner in which this service was performed by a handful of men, will be honoured by their approbation. I am now on my passage up the river, and hope to be off the Bocca Tigris to-morrow, when I shall have the honour of making a further report.

I have the honour to be, &c.

SIR, Bocca Tigris, February 23 1841.

HIS Excellency, Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary, having represented to me, that the Chinese Imperial Minister, and High Commissioner, had failed to conclude the Treaty of Peace agreed upon in the late Conferences, within the period formally allowed to him, that is, to say, within the current Chinese month, of which the 20th was the last day, that I was, therefore, to consider myself at liberty, and requested to prevent continued defensive preparations upon the part of the Chinese, and further to harass the enemy by all possible means.

Combining this representation with the knowledge elicited from a Linguist taken in a boat yesterday morning by Lieutenant Watson, and recognized as an active agent of the Chinese authorities, in the late affair at Chuenpee, that he was en route with orders from Kwang, Admiral and Governor of Anunghoy, to hasten the stopping of the back passage of that island, at a place called Sammonhow, by driving stakes and sinking stones; I deemed it highly essential to ascertain the true position and nature of the pass which they were so solicitous to protect, and proceeded in the steam vessel Nemesis, accompanied by his Excellency, with the boats of Her Majesty's ships named in the margin* under their respective officers and mates, as enumerated for this purpose. No obstruction was offered to our forward movement, until we came unexpectedly upon a masked battery, at the place they were staking across, which immediately opened a heavy fire upon the Nemesis and boats, their small junks and boats, to the number of thirty, making off in the greatest confusion; our return fire was rapid and so energetically followed up by landing and pushing on to the attack, that the fort (of twenty guns in battery) was immediately in our possession, the guns were disabled by breaking off the trunnions and throwing them aside as useless, completely destroying their preparations and also other guns, not mounted, to the number of sixty. The parties defending this post fled after a slight resistance, the magazines, a few junks, and some other boats of no note were burned; but a joss house, in which were two women and some children, was preserved. Lieutenant Bower† in following up his success came upon the rear guard of the Chinese and took their colours. What loss the enemy sustained it is impossible to say, from the short time the tide allowed for operations; but there were from twenty to thirty dead, left on the ground. The zeal and coolness of all employed gave complete success to this partial affair.

Lieutenant Watson, who I have mentioned on former occasions, Lieutenant Bower, and Acting Lieutenant G. B. Dewes, together with the mates under their orders, I beg leave to recommend to your particular notice. My attention was particularly attracted by the activity and steady conduct of Mr. Belfield Woolcombe, of the Alligator, and to Mr. Hall, Master in command of the Nemesis, his officers and crew; I am much indebted for the quick and

Her Majesty's ship Wellesley, off Wangtong,
SIR,
27th February, 1841.

IN continuation of my detail, I beg you will inform their Lordships, that from the prevalence of light winds, the line of battle ships and Druid were not collected until the 24th. On the 25th I arranged a plan of attack on the formidable batteries in our front, and of which it may perhaps be necessary to give some description. Partly surrounding the old fort of Anunghoy and in advance of it to high water mark, was a new and well-built battery of granite, forming a segment of about two-thirds of a circle; on it were mounted forty-two guns, some of them of immense weight and large calibre. Several strong intrenchments extended to the southward of this battery, and the ridges of the hills were crowned with guns, up to a camp calculated for about twelve hundred men.

On the north side, was a straight work of modern erection mounting sixty heavy guns; about one hundred and fifty yards of rocky beach intervenes between the end of this battery and the northern circular battery, on which forty guns were mounted. All these works were protected in rear by a high wall extending up the hill, on which were steps or platforms for firing musquetry, and in the interior were the magazines, barracks, &c.

On the east end of the north island of Wangtong, is a battery with a double tier of guns defending the passage on that side, and also partly flanking a number of rafts constructed of large masses of timber moored across the river (about twelve feet apart), with two anchors each, connected by and supporting four parts of a chain cable, the ends of which were secured under masonry work, one on South Wangtong, the other on Anunghoy. On the western end of Wangtong is a strong battery of forty guns, flanked by a field work of seventeen; indeed, the whole island is one continued battery. On the extreme western side of the channel was a battery of twenty-two heavy guns, and a field work of seventeen, protecting an entrenched camp, containing about fifteen hundred or two thousand men. South Wangtong was not occupied by the enemy, it was an excellent position, and I therefore caused a work to be thrown up on it during the night of the 25th, and mounted two eight inch iron, and one twenty-four pounder brass howitzer. At day light on the 26th Captain Knowles, of the Royal Artillery, opened this battery with admirable effect, throwing shells and rockets into North Wangtong, and occasionally into Anunghoy.

At eleven o'clock, the breeze springing up, the signal was made, and the fleet stood in. The attack on Anunghoy I entrusted to Captain Sir H. C. F. Senhouse, of Her Majesty's ship Blenheim, having with him the Melville, Queen, and four rocket boats; the Wellesley, Druid, Calliope, Samarang, Herald, Alligator, and Modeste were opposed to the batteries on the south, south-west, and north-west of Wangtong, and the forts on the western side of the channel.

In less than an hour the batteries on Wangtong were silenced, and the troops under the command of Major Pratt, of the 26th regiment, which had previously been embarked in the Madagascar and Nemesis steamers, consisting of the detachments of Her Majesty's 26th and 49th regiments, 37th Madras Native Infantry and Bengal Volunteers, together with the Royal Marines under Captain Ellis were landed, and in a few minutes masters of the island without any loss; thirteen hundred Chinese troops surrendered.

The Anunghoy batteries had been silenced by the beautiful precision with which the fire of the Blenheim, Melville, and Queen had been directed; and perceiving that the enemy were shaken, Sir Fleming Senhouse, at the head of the marines, and small arm men landed on the southern battery, and above them in succession from that and the two others, and at one o'clock the British colours were flying on the whole chain of these celebrated works.

It now became my pleasing duty to express my admiration of the manner in which the whole squadron was carried into action. Captain Sir H. F. Senhouse, and the Honourable R. S. Dundas, in the Blenheim and Melville, took up their positions in the most gallant style, and were ably supported by their respective commanders Pritchard and Puget. Sir Le Fleming speaks in high terms of the conduct of Mr. Warden, commanding the H. C. steamer Queen. The rocket boats were under Lieutenant Pearse, of the Blenheim. They were admirably placed and served; and I beg to recommend this old and gallant Officer to their Lordships' notice. To Captain Herbert, who had the light division, and to Captains Scott, Smith, Nias, and Kuper, of the Calliope, Samarang, Druid, Herald, and Alligator, and Commander Eyres of the Modeste, together with their officers and ships' companies, my best thanks are due, as also to Commander Belcher, of the Sulphur, and Lieutenant Kellett of the Starling, for their gallant and zealous services on all occasions. From Captain Maitland, of this ship, I have ever received the most cordial and valuable assistance, on every point of service. Commander Fletcher had the superintendence of the landing, and I recommend him, and every other officer of this ship, to their Lordships.

A copy of Major Pratt's report I enclose, and I have the greatest satisfaction in recording my thanks to that officer, and to Major Johnstone of the 26th, Captains Knowles, Royal Artillery, Duff and Mee, commanding the detachments of Native troops, and to every officer, non-commissioned officer, and soldier; Captain Ellis, at the head of the Royal Marines was, as usual, conspicuous; indeed the animated gallantry displayed by every individual in the whole force, convinces me that almost any number of men the Chinese can collect, would not be able to stand before them for a moment.

I subjoin a list of casualties and ordnance captured. The main topmast and fore yard of the Blenheim were shot through, one thirty-two pounder rendered unserviceable, several shot in the hull, and the rigging much cut up. The Melville's mainmast and main yard wounded, and rigging considerably injured. The Calliope was struck in several places, and the other ships had merely a few ropes cut.

The loss of the enemy was severe, but not so heavy as at Chuenpee, 1,300 having, as before stated, thrown away their arms. I should estimate their killed and drowned at two hundred and fifty in Wangtong, probably as many at Anunghoy, at which place the Admiral Kwang, and several other Mandarins of rank, fell. The body of the Admiral was recognized by his family, and taken away yesterday, under a fire of minute guns from the Blenheim.

North Wangtong being the key to this position, I shall place a garrison in it; the batteries on either side of the river are in course of destruction, in order that our communications with Hong Kong may be uninterrupted. Tiger Island is abandoned, the guns were withdrawn to strengthen these defences. I shall also destroy this fort, and send forward the light division to Whampoa immediately.

I have, &c.

SIR, Bocca Tigris, February 27, 1841.

IT having been determined to attack the forts at the Bocca Tigris on the 26th instant, and the part allotted to the troops under my orders being to land on the island of North Wangtong, on the evening previous, two eight-inch howitzers, one twenty-four pounder howitzer, and a rocket tube, were placed on south Wangtong, with a covering party of Royal Marines, and 37th Madras Native Infantry. A breastwork was thrown up during the night, and the guns placed, the Chinese keeping up a noisy but ineffectual fire during this operation, nearly the whole night. At day-light these guns opened their fire, and threw in shells and rockets into the forts and field-works on north Wangtong, with the greatest effect, setting fire to some of the houses. The Chinese returned the fire with spirit for some time from a battery of eighteen guns opposite, but slackened the fire, and latterly ceased firing.

About eight o'clock the troops were embarked in boats, ready to land, when the batteries at the south west end of the island had been dealt with by Her Majesty's ships. At twelve o'clock, on the ships giving their fire, the enemy were seen flying across the island and the large fort at the south-east end, the signal was made for the troops to land, which they did just in the rear of the south west fort. The nature of the ground rendered much regularity of formation impossible; the troops moved on as they landed, accompanied by the seamen with the scaling ladders, drove the Chinese, who made scarcely any resistance, from the field batteries; which from this point were all taken in the reverse, and entering the gate along with the flying enemies, in a few minutes the British flag was hoisted on the north-east fort, which, with the two forts on the Anunghoy side, commands the river, and we soon had the proud satisfaction of seeing that these forts had yielded to the ships attacking on that line.

The fort at the south-east end of North Wangtong has a formidable battery of forty heavy guns, above which there is another tier of fifteen guns, and a large high walled enclosure all round it containing barracks. The fort at the south-west end has a similar battery, excepting the upper tier and enclosure; the Chinese had lately nearly encircled the island with field works, mounting sixty-three guns, besides jingalls, and in the centre is a circular tower with a few guns; in all we found on the island one hundred and sixty-seven guns. I am very happy to say, this service was performed without a single casualty on outside, the enemy suffered more severely, they had about two thousand, of these we took thirteen hundred prisoners, including the wounded, the remainder were killed or drowned in attempting to escape; a few were observed escaping in boats in the morning.

The detail of the troops employed is annexed, and it is now my duty to bring to your notice the praiseworthy conduct of the whole force, and especially to mention Major Johnstone, 26th regiment, commanding the column directed to escalate; Captain Ellis, R.M., in command of column directed to force the gate; Captain Duff, commanding the 37th Native Infantry; and Captain Ince, the two companies of Bengal Volunteers. I must earnestly point out the services rendered by Captain Knowles, Royal Artillery, having under him Lieutenants Honourable C. Spenser, R.A., and Caddell, Madras Artillery, in charge of howitzers on South Wangtong; Lieutenant Burdwood, Madras Engineers, who superintended the erections of the breastwork, whilst Lieutenants Rundell and Jackson, Madras Engineers, accompanied me to lead the respective columns of attack. As before, I received essential services from Lieutenant Stransham, R.M., acting as Brigade Major, and from Lieutenant Stewart M'Kenzie, 90th Light Infantry, your Military Secretary, who acted as my Aide-de-Camp. I take the liberty of naming to you the admirable style in which Commander Fletcher, Her Majesty's ship Wellesley, headed the seamen bearing the ladders, and arranged the landing. I enclose a list of the ordnance captured at the various points of attack by the fleet and troops under your orders, shewing a total of three hundred and thirty-nine guns.

I have the honour to be, &c.

SIR,

BE pleased to acquaint their Lordships, that at day light on the morning of the 27th the advanced squadron, consisting of ships named in the margin,* proceeded up the river, under the command of Captain Herbert, of the Calliope, and this day I was gratified by receiving a report from that gallant Officer, a copy of which I enclose.

His letter details his proceedings in so clear and unassuming a manner, that it is unnecessary for me to occupy their Lordships time by repetition. I cannot, however, refrain from the expression of my admiration of the gallantry displayed, and of my cordial thanks to Captain Herbert, the Captains Nias and Kuper, Commanders Belcher and Eyres, and to the Commanders of the Nemesis and Madagascar gaged in this well executed attack.

Her Majesty's ship Calliope, above the first bar, and below Whampoa, February 27, 1841.

SIR,

THE division named in the margin,* that you did me the honour to place under my command, advanced up the river this morning, passing Tiger Island, the second bar, and reaching near the first bar by noon, piloted by Captain Elliot, her Majesty's Plenipotentiary, whose perfect knowledge of the shoals enabled us to effect the passage without difficulty. From this position we observed the enemy strongly fortified on the left bank of the river, close to Whampoa reach, with upwards of forty war junks; and the Cambridge, formerly an East Indianman, of nine hundred tons, with an Admiral's flag at the main. On approaching within three miles I proceeded with the steamers, his Excellency, and Commander Belcher, to reconnoitre, and find out a clear passage (a number of vessels having been sunk); on advancing, a heavy fire was opened on the steamers, which was immediately returned with great effect. Having satisfied myself that the enemy could be dislodged, I hastened up the ships, the Sulphur leading, the whole taking up such an admirable position that the enemy's batteries, protecting their strongly entrenched camp, and the guns of their fleet, were in an hour nearly silenced, when I landed with the seamen and marines under the officers named in the margin,† and stormed the works, driving before us upwards of two thousand of their best troops, and killing nearly three hundred. In about half an hour after landing all the defences were carried (though in several places brave and obstinate resistance was made by some of the troops composing the Governor's Guard), mounting on the river front forty-seven guns; in the left flank, three; a field work, four. The Cambridge with thirty-four, besides ten unmounted in a junk, making together ninety-eight guns. While the entrenchments were storming Lieutenant Watson, assisted by the officers enumerated in the margin,‡ gallantly boarded the Admiral's ship, whose flag, hauled down by Mr. St. Leger, mate of the Calliope, I have the honour to send you. The war junks escaped up the river, while we were prevented from pursuing by a strong raft placed across the passage. The guns of the fleet, and other munitions, have been destroyed, and the Cambridge set on fire, whose explosion must have been heard at Canton.

It affords me much satisfaction in having to speak of the excellent and efficient practice of the Nemesis and Madagascar, and the full effect given to the affair generally, on our combined efforts being brought to bear upon the opposing force.

To Captains Nias and Kuper, and Commander Eyres, I am much indebted for the able support they afforded me, and Commander Belcher, though suffering from indisposition, has rendered me essential service in bringing the ships in, as did Mr. Richard Browne, master of the Calliope. Captain Belcher also attended me when on shore; Captains Kuper and Eyres joined the moment they could leave their ships, rendering great assistance in superintending the destruction of the materials. To Lieutenant Birdwood of the Madras Engineers, who joined me while reconnoitring, I am much indebted for his zeal and suggestions, and also to Lieutenant Poulis, of the Madras Artillery, attached to the Madagascar, for the able and effective manner in which he directed the guns of that vessel. To Lieutenant Stransham, Royal Marines of the Calliope, I have to acknowledge my sense of his services in arranging and directing the marines of the squadron on landing, and for his endeavours to repress the destruction of life after resistance had ceased. He speaks in high terms of the support he received from Lieutenant C. C. Hewett, R.M., of the Herald, and Lieutenant Hayes Marriot, R.M., of the Alligator. Reports from the respective captains have been made of the gallant and steady conduct of the officers, seamen, and Royal Marines under their command; and I am proud of the opportunity of again bearing the like testimony of the Calliope's.

To His Excellency, Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary, who accompanied me through the whole affair, my grateful acknowledgments are due.

Our casualties, considering the force opposed to us, I am happy to say are small; and, in enclosing you the particulars, with a sketch of the enemy's position,

I have, &c.

SIR, Wellesly, Wantong, 10th March, 1841.

HAVING completed the garrison arrangements on North Wantong, and the destruction of the works on Anunghoy being in progress, I proceeded up the river to join the advanced squadron on the 1st instant in the Madagascar steamer, taking the Sophia transport in tow, Captain Maitland with the boats, and one hundred small arm men, together with the marines of the Wellesley, under Captain Ellis, accompanied me; the Queen taking the Eagle transport in tow, on board which ship I had embarked the marines of the Blenheim, Melville, and Druid, also attended by the boats of those ships, all being armed with their guns and howitzers.

On arriving at Whampoa I found, from Captain Herbert's report, that the enemy were in considerable force at the end of Junk Reach, having, as usual, sunk several large junks in the river, and further protected themselves by a strong double line of stakes across it, and a raft with large bamboos, and branches of trees between them. On the following morning I detached that ever ready officer, Commander Belcher, in the Sulphur, up Junk River to reconnoitre, that ship being taken in tow by three of the Wellesley's boats, under command of Lieutenant Symonds, senior of the latter ship. On rounding a point on the right bank they came in front of a battery of twenty-five guns, masked by thick branches of trees, which opened a heavy fire on them; without a moment's hesitation Lieutenant Symonds cut the tow line, and gallantly dashed right into the battery, driving the enemy before him, and killing several of their number. The Sulphur anchored, and some shot from her completely routed them from the thick underwood in the vicinity in which they had taken shelter; the guns were destroyed, and the magazine and other consumable materiel set on fire. The number of troops was probably two hundred and fifty, and they were of the chosen Tartars; their loss was about fifteen or twenty killed. This well-executed service calls on me strongly to recommend Lieutenant Symonds to their Lordships' notice; our loss is one seaman of the Wellesley mortally wounded (since dead), and the boats were frequently struck by grape shot.

As soon as a cursory survey of the river was made, the Herald, Alligator and Modeste, and the Eagle and Sophia transports were pushed forward within gunshot of Howqua's Fort, and thus for the first time were ships seen from the walls of Canton. On the 2nd the Cruiser joined me, having on board Major-General Sir Hugh Gough, to whom I resigned the command of the land forces; the Pylades and the Conway also joined from Chusan, and the two first named vessels were sent in advance; several of the transports were also collected. On the 4th, in concert with the Major General, an attack was planned for the next morning, but on approaching, the fort was found to be abandoned. The British colours were hoisted, and a garrison of the 26th regiment placed in it. Captain Ellis, with a company of Royal Marines, took possession of a large joss-house on the left bank (which the enemy had begun to fortify), and rendered himself secure, while the seamen soon removed some of the stakes and other impediments, and made a clear passage for ships. I may here describe the position: at the right bank of the river, on the point formed by the mouth of a creek, (which is one passage for boats to Whampoa), was Howqua's fort, a square building mounting thirty guns. From the northern angle the stakes mentioned extended to the opposite bank, the ground on each side being low rice fields cut and intersected by canals in all directions; the joss-house rather projected into the stream, and consequently was a good position. The river here is about five hundred yards wide; two thousand yards in front is a long low island, which divides the river into two branches, and on the extreme eastern point of which stood a fort mounting thirty-five guns, built to commemorate the discomfiture and death of the late Lord Napier: from this fort a line of well constructed and second rafts, forming a bridge, extended to both sides of the river; on its right bank flanking Napier's Fort and the rafts, was a mud battery intended for thirty-five guns; on the left was a battery also flanking Napier's Fort, on which the enemy had forty-four guns, most of which they withdrew on the night of the 4th. In addition to these defences, stone junks were sunk in all parts of the river between the stakes and the raft off Napier's Fort, which raft also rested upon sunken junks secured on either side within piles.

The position seemed formidable, and on the 5th the Major-General and myself prepared to attack it.

He landed at the joss-house, taking with him the Royal Marines and 26th detachment for the purpose of taking the battery on the left bank, and the ships weighed and dropped up with the flood tide. On the approach of the Sulphur, which vessel led, the enemy fired all their guns and fled across the rafts and in boats; the British colours were then hoisted, and the last defence of the Chinese (that we are acquainted with between Canton and the sea), fell into our hands. A paper was issued calling on the people to place confidence in us and avoid hostile movements, in which latter case protection was secured to them. At noon the Quang-choo-foo, or Prefect, accompanied by the Hong merchants, came down, and, after a long discussion with the Plenipotentiary, admitted that Keshen having been degraded, and the new appointed Commissioners not having arrived, there was no Government authorized to treat for peace or make any arrangements; they confessed the truth of the reports we had heard, that the greatest consternation existed in the city, and that every person who could quit it had done so; in fact, that it was at our mercy, and it has so remained, a monument of British magnanimity and forbearance. I fear, however, that the forbearance is misunderstood, and that a further punishment must be resorted to, before this arrogant and perfidious Government is brought to reason, or to a faithful mode of conduct. His Excellency the Plenipotentiary, being however desirous to try the effect of another proclamation, and to shew his desire for an equitable adjustment of affairs, addressed the Major-General and myself, requesting that we would make no further movement towards the city until the disposition of the provincial officers was put to the test as far as regards their non-interference, and we have consequently remained in statu quo; but reports, on which we can rely, are daily reaching us, which state that fire vessels are fitting out about seven miles above Canton; forts in the rear of the city in course of erection; and the people are forbidden to bring us supplies, while the teas and silks, and every other valuable, are removing from it. These proceedings, so directly opposite to the assurances of pacific intentions (which they are ever ready to deal forth in profusion), lead me to the conclusion, that we shall have to proceed, even at the risk of the destruction of the second city of the empire, an event exceedingly likely to occur from its abandonment by the authorities, and the excesses of the lower classes of a community proverbially bad. The responsibility must, however, rest on the heads of those authorities.

The whole of the force from Chusan has joined me, and I this day returned to Wangtung, accompanied by the Major General, in order that the arrangements in that garrison may be completed, and plans devised for our future operations.

I have the honour, &c.

SIR,

I HAVE again the satisfaction of enclosing the copy of a letter from Captain Herbert, of the Calliope, detailing another well-executed attack on the only remaining fort protecting the approaches to the city of Canton.

This fort is situate about ten miles from the anchorage at Whampoa, up a narrow and intricate channel, which ends in the Broadway or Macao passage from Canton.

The enemy were devoting their whole attention to the strengthening the defences of this post, and had rendered it one of the best which have been encountered. I am, therefore, happy that it is in our possession. Captain Herbert has thrown a sufficient garrison into it, protected also by a division of the flotilla, and the Modeste, and it is in our hands an important position. The city is consequently menaced above and below, and is completely at our mercy, but nothing seems to affect the minds of the arrogant Mandarins, who still talk of exterminating us, while their people fly before us; they are undoubtedly preparing fire vessels up the river, of which I hope to give a good account in a few days. Captain Herbert has been ably supported by Captains Bethune and Kuper, Commanders Barlow, Eyres, Giffard, Anson, Clarke, and Belcher, together with their officers' and ships' companys. My best thanks are due to them for the gallantry and perseverance with which they conquer the difficulties and harass of river and flotilla service.

I have the honour, &c.

to the Macao Passage, March 13, 1841.*

SIR,

IN conformity with your orders of the 12th instant, and having waited twenty-four hours after the arrival of the last chop delivered, and seeing nothing of a pacific nature on the part of the Chinese, I proceeded with the force under the officers named in the margin,* to the fort and rafts mounting twenty-two guns, with eight small ones laid in a sand bank, planking the rafts, strongly posted and well constructed near the Canton entrance of the Macao Passage; at about five P.M. commenced the attack, and carried the whole of the enemy's works in about half an hour, the Chinese keeping up a well direct, and animated fire till our forces were under the walls, and in the act of storming, when they gave way and fled in all directions, thus leaving us now the only remaining protection of their city, in our hands, giving Her Majesty's forces the command of the river above and below it, and to depend upon its mercy for its daily subsistence.

The boats I placed under the direction of Captain Bethune, to whom I am much indebted for the steady manner in which they were brought to the attack; and also to Captain Kuper; Commanders Barlow, Gifford, Anson, and Clark, who volunteered their services, and the assistance they gave throughout the affair; much credit is due to Commander Belcher, for his zeal in trying to get the Sulphur up this intricate channel; and to Commander Eyres, whose ship was brought to an excellent and effective position, within about six hundred yards of the fort, towed by the Madagascar, piloted by that very skilful and highly meritorious officer, Lieutenant Collinson; Mr. Dicey, the Commander of the Madagascar, also calls for my highest commendation; as well as Lieutenant Foulis, Madras Artillery, for the manner in which he managed his guns. The Royal Marines, under the orders of Lieutenant Stransham, assisted by Lieutenants Hewitt, Marriott, and Palkinghorne, who acquitted themselves on the occasion as that gallant corps is always in the habit of doing. The loss to the Chinese I have not yet been able to ascertain; several were found dead in and near the fort. Our own casualties, as far as I can learn, do not exceed three wounded.

I have the honour to be, &c.

Modeste, off the British Factory, Canton, SIR, March 19, 1841.

IT is with feelings of peculiar satisfaction that I enclose, for the information of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, copies of letters from Captain Herbert of Her Majesty's ship Calliope, commanding the advanced squadron of the fleet, detailing the various operations of the force, the result of which has been the capture and destruction of the remaining forts and floating defences of the city of Canton, the hoisting Her Majesty's colours on the walls of the British Factory, an agreement to a suspension of hostilities, and, lastly, the publication of an Edict, under seal of the Imperial Commissioner, and the Governor of the Province, declaring the trade to be opened, and that all British and other merchants proceeding to the provincial city shall receive due and perfect protection.

I earnestly and confidently hope that this will lead to a satisfactory and honourable peace; but on this point Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary will of course communicate with Her Majesty's Government. It remains for me to solicit their Lordships' attention to the admirable arrangements made for this combined attack, and the gallantry which ensured their complete success; indeed, it was not possible they could fail in such hands as those of the excellent officers, Captains Herbert, Bouchier, and Bethune, supported by the commanders, lieutenants, mates, and midshipmen mentioned by the senior officer; and I would beg leave most earnestly to recommend them to the notice of their Lordships. To Captain Kuper, of the Alligator, commanding the investing force on the east side of the city, assisted by Commanders Giffard and Anson of the Cruiser and Pylades, my best thanks are also due; their unremitting attention effectually guarded the approaches in that quarter.

I endeavoured to push forward to the scene of action in the Hyacinth's gig, but only arrived towards its close, in sufficient time however to be gratified by the hoisting of the British colours. Thus, for the first time in the history of China, have ships been brought under the very walls of Canton, and by channels and branches on which a foreign ship never before floated. I believe the Chinese were not acquainted with the capabilities of their splendid river; assuredly they had no idea that the second city in the empire could be assailed by ships of war on its waters. I trust that the fact will have its due influence on the authorities, and I have no doubt, that the forbearance displayed towards a city so completely at our mercy as this is, will be appreciated by the better part of the community, who have everything to lose, and the benevolence of the British character more fully understood than it has ever yet been in this country.

The gratifying spectacle of our ships in this position, is to be ascribed to the unwearied zeal of the captains, officers, and men belonging to them. Commander Belcher and Lieutenant Kellett, of the Sulphur and Starling, Mr. Brown, master of the Calliope, and Mr. Bean, master of the Herald, have been indefatigable in their laborious duties of sounding the various inlets through which the ships were carried.

I am sure these officers will receive every mark of their Lordships' approbation.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

British Factory, Canton, March 18, 1841.

SIR,

THIS day the force enumerated below* under my orders, carried and destroyed in succession all the forts in the advance and before Canton, taking, sinking, burning, or dispersing the enemy's flotilla, and hoisting the Union on the walls of the British factory, the guns of the squadron commanding all the approaches to the city from the western and southern branches of the river, thus placing in our power the great provincial capital, containing upwards of one million of inhabitants.

I found myself forced to make this attack without your instructions for the reasons so strongly expressed in Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary's note, herein enclosed (17th March 1841), considering it my duty to resent, with all the promptitude in my power, the insult offered the day before to the flag of truce sent with a chop to the Imperial Commissioner, at the desire of His Excellency.

I forward the accompanying sketch, placing you in more immediate possession of the line of concentration which led to such an immediate result. In detailing the operations of the day, I feel myself inadequate to do justice to the gallant Officers and men employed on this occasion.

The flotilla of boats, formed into four divisions, was under the command of Captain Bouchier of the Blonde, Captain Bethune of the Conway assisting. Three divisions, under the immediate charge of Commanders Barlow and Clarke, and Lieutenant Coulson of the Blonde. Her Majesty's ship Hyacinth (to whom too much praise cannot be given for the exertion displayed by Commander Warren, his officers and crew, in getting her through the intricate and difficult passes of the river, piloted by Commander Belcher, to be in readiness for operation); and a division of boats, under the command of these officers, were placed at the southern entrance of the river, recommunicating with the main stream at Fatee, to meet any retrograde movement of the numerous flotilla that had taken part in the aggression on the 16th instant.

Every arrangement having been completed and understood, the whole force moved in advance about noon, the vessels, marines, and three divisions of boats from the northward of the Macao fort and within gun-shot of the enemy's advance batteries, engaging them for about two hours and a half, when all opposition ceased, and the factory within the defences were taken possession of.

The Modeste was placed within three hundred yards, in front of the principal battery, and shortly gave proofs of her well directed fire, flanked by the powerful guns of the Madagascar, Captain Dicey, with artillerymen under the direction of Lieutenant Foulis, Madras Artillery, and Nemesis, Mr. W. H. Hall, R. N., commanding, with artillerymen under the direction of Captain Moore, and Lieutenant Gabbett, Madras Artillery, who handsomely volunteered their services upon the occasion. The Algerine, (Lieut. Mason,) and Starling, (Lieut. Kellett) passing ahead, cutting through the rafts on the right bank and engaging a part of the war junks, the Hebe and Louisa tenders, taking part, at the same time, under cover of the ships' guns, the flotilla with the marines was brought up in admirable order by Captain Bouchier, and upon the signal given, stormed and completed the capture of this part of the enemy's works, notwithstanding a most determined resistance on the part of the Tartar troops. From this battery the vessels and flotilla moved forward, and carried the other defences in succession, amounting in the whole to one hundred and twenty-three guns.

By the great care of Captain Nias, his officers, and ship's company, the Herald was brought over the flats, and entered the reach during the engagement, which must have had considerable effect upon the enemy, by dividing their attention, not knowing what other force might be in reserve.

Of Captain Bouchier, whose high character is so well known to you, Sir, and the service, I cannot speak sufficiently strong for the manner in which he conducted the forces under his immediate command, not only leading them into action in admirable order, but keeping them together in readiness for any outbreak of the immense population of such a crowded city, and I cannot refrain mentioning his conspicuous and energetic exertions in towing off the burning junks, which were drifting upon the suburbs of Canton, and soon would have evidently set fire to that part of the city, and involved the destruction of the whole, in which he reports he was ably assisted by the officers under his directions. My thanks are also due to that excellent officer, Captain Bethune, and to Commanders Belcher, Warren, Barlow, and Clarke, for their great zeal. The Royal Marines under Lieut. Stransham, of the Calliope, assisted by Lieutenants Daniel, Hewitt, Marriot and Polkinghorne, were as usual conspicuous for their gallant, steady, soldierly bearing. I have, however, to regret that Lieutenant Stransham, in exerting himself to destroy the works, was suddenly exposed to a heavy explosion, by which he has been considerably burned, but continues at his post; to Lieutenants Kellett and Collinson and Mr. Brown, Master of the Calliope, every favourable consideration is due, for having made themselves particularly useful in sounding, and afterwards conducting several men of war safely to an anchorage off the city of Canton, indeed my sincere gratitude is due to every officer, seaman and marine employed on this service, for their zeal and spirited conduct, from which it is to be hoped the most beneficial results will ensue.

His Excellency, Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary, ever on the alert, has done me the honour to be with me throughout these operations, and to whom my best thanks are due for his support and assistance on all occasions.

By Lieutenant Paul, who you kindly attached to me, I enclose a return of casualties, which, I am happy to say, are inconsiderable, and bring before you the Officers employed in the flotilla on this service, with a return of ordnance destroyed in the defences near Canton.

Your presence at the close of the action releases me from going further into detail.

From the various reports brought in, we have been able to ascertain, that the enemy's loss has been about four hundred men.

I have the honour to be, &c.

*Calliope, Whampoa Reach,
March 17, 1841.*

SIR,

YOUR own presence, on board the "Nemesis," yesterday afternoon, when she was fired upon from the work above the forts in the Macao Passage, notwithstanding the flag of truce, releases me from the necessity of detailing the circumstances of the case. I may add, however, that the Chinese authorities perfectly understand the intention of, and respect due to, that signal, and have frequently taken advantage of its protection for purposes of safe communication with our own forces.

Under all these circumstances, therefore, I need not press upon you, Sir, the necessity of resenting this aggression, with all the promptitude which may be compatible with considerations of a military nature. Having regard, however, to its close neighbourhood to the city of Canton, I will earnestly request you to confine your movement to the destruction of guns or material at the work from which the shot was fired, and if that object cannot be accomplished by fire, without exposing the buildings in the vicinity to the risk of conflagration, I would suggest that it should be otherwise effected.

I take the liberty to add, for your general guidance, that the main intention of the scheme of further operations, which I propose to submit to their Excellencies in command of the sea and land forces, is to make ourselves masters of the lines of communication westward of Canton, with a view to its insulation and complete deprivation of trade and means of supply, from all points of approach.

The capture or destruction of the flotilla, which took part in the aggression of yesterday, will, of course, seem to you an object of great importance, if it can be accomplished with due regard to other considerations.

I have, &c.

(Signed) CHARLES ELLIOT,
H. M. Plenipotentiary.

Captain Herbert, Senior Officer of H. M. S. and Vessels in advance.

P. S.—I need scarcely remind you, that there was a small boat in advance of the steam vessel, also with a flag of truce flying, when the shot was fired.

*British Hall, Canton,
March 20, 1841.*

SIR,

I HAVE the honour to acquaint you, that I have this day concluded a suspension of hostilities in this province, the Imperial Commissioner having publicly proclaimed the trade to be opened, and that all British and other merchants proceeding to the provincial city, shall receive due protection.

With a view to the restoration of confidence amongst the trading people, I have now to request you will have the goodness to move the vessels actually before "Shameen," about half-way down towards the Macao Passage Fort, and I hope you will also do what may otherwise be in your power to evince sincerely peaceful purposes respecting the population, without, however, removing a sufficiently pressing force from the near neighbourhood of the city.

I am persuaded, too, that you will recognize the soundness of manifesting every degree of proper respect for the Government, and every disposition to uphold its character in the sight of the people, which may be compatible with the paramount necessity of keeping awake a lively sense, that renewal of ill faith, will be responded to by an immediate blow.

It must be quite superfluous to assure you, Sir, I depend with great confidence (and with constant thankfulness), upon your continued earnest efforts to prevent accident at Canton. But perhaps I may be pardoned for suggesting, that for the present, no person or boat be allowed to land without the express permission of the senior officer on the spot.

I have, &c.

SIR,

THE zealous desire of every officer and man in this squadron to seek occasions in which to distinguish themselves, has led to the performance of various well executed services. I have now the honour to enclose a copy of a letter from Captain Scott, of Her Majesty's ship Samarang, detailing the particulars of an enterprize which he planned and executed with very admirable talent and gallantry, to which I will beg to refer their Lordships, expressing, at the same time, my conviction, that no encomium I could bestow on Captain Scott, and the Officers, seamen, and marines engaged, would be equal to the merit of the affair. Lieutenant Bower, senior of Samarang, has been often within my notice, he has been severely wounded, and has displayed great gallantry; while Mr. Hall, R.N., commanding the Honourable Company's steam vessel Nemesis, has rendered the most important services to the expedition at all times, and in all situations. I beg therefore to recommend them, together with every other Officer and man, to the notice of their Lordships.

SIR,

HIS Excellency Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary having, on the afternoon of the 12th instant, suggested to me the great advantages likely to accrue by forcing the inner passage from Macao to Whampoa (deemed by the Chinese impenetrable to foreigners), and fully agreeing with him upon the subject, I made no hesitation in immediately acceding to his views, and making the necessary preparation for carrying them into effect.

I have now the honour of communicating the result of my operations.

At three A. M. on the 13th, I proceeded with the small arm men and marines in the boats named in the margin,* on board the Nemesis steamer, where I was shortly afterwards joined by his Excellency Captain Elliot. When we got under weigh from Macao roads, and proceeded over the flats between Tweelienshan and Toi Koke Tow Islands, into the Broadway river.

At eight A. M. we came in sight of Motas Fort, which we closed in less than half an hour. The steamer having taken up an infiltrating position on its southern angle (where not a gun of the enemy could bear upon her), opened her fire, whilst we proceeded in the boats to the attack. So accurately were her shot directed, that the enemy, on our approach in the boats, abandoned the place, and fled.

* Pinnase, mounting twelve pound carronades; Cutter, six oared gig, four oared gig; Atalantas Pinnase, mounting twelve pound howitzers.

We found thirteen guns mounted, which were completely destroyed, the buildings in the interior set fire to; and having laid a train to the magazine, we re-embarked; before we reached the Nemesis it exploded, effectually finishing our work on that point.

On reaching point How Honk Tow, the river is divided into two channels, that to the right, which we pursued, takes a sudden sharp turn, and becomes very contracted in its breadth. Here we discovered Tai-Yat-Kok, a field battery (very recently constructed) of fourteen guns strongly posted on a rising ground, situated on the left bank of the river, environed by overflowed paddy fields, which enfiladed the whole line of the reach leading up to it.

At thirty minutes past ten A. M. as we appeared round the point, the enemy opened out an animated fire upon us, which was smartly kept up as we advanced; it was most effectually returned by the two guns from the Nemesis, who threw her shot, shells, and rockets admirably.

Under the slight cover of the bank we advanced in the boats, but before we could effect a landing on their flank, they abandoned their guns, when we took possession of the work by a narrow pathway, which could only be passed in single files.

Twenty determined men ought to have held it with ease against triple our force. Twelve of the principal guns were from twenty four to twelve pounders; the remaining two sixes, which underwent the same process as their fellows at Matao, viz. knocking off their trunions, driving a shot hard home into their chambers, and spiking them. A large quantity of gunpowder and other materials was lodged here, which, with the temporary buildings, were consigned to the flames and blown up.

Observing a war junk who had opened her fire about a mile above the battery, I despatched Lieutenant Bower with the two pinnaces in chase, accompanied by the steamer, but as I could not complete the destruction of the guns, and battery, under three quarters of an hour, the chase was necessarily given up until my return on board.

During the above period a military depot and station on the opposite side of the river were destroyed by Lieutenant Maitland, whom I had despatched thither for that purpose.

The moment I returned the chase of the war junk was resumed; at forty minutes past twelve, P. M. we again got sight of her with eight others, which were seen over the land. As we entered the Reach which they occupied, we discovered on the right bank of the river a new battery, scarcely finished, with ten embrasures, but without guns, and Hochung Fort close to it, well built of granite surrounded by a wet ditch, mounting fourteen guns and six gingalls. Abreast of these, which they flanked, the river was strongly staked across, through the centre of which the last junk (our chase) had passed, and the opening again secured. The enemy immediately commenced firing upon us from the fort of Hochung and their war junks (now under sail), which was replied to by the Nemesis with the usual effect, while the boats opened a passage through the stakes, and dashed on to the attack of Hochung and the junks. Lieutenant Bower gallantly leading on the division under his orders against the latter, whilst the others, secured the fort by evading the ditch, and entering the enemy's embrasures. Seeing the fall of the fort, the war junks became so panic struck on the approach of the boats, and were thrown into such utter confusion that seven got ashore, the crews jumping over board immediately they grounded, two junks alone escaping. Lieutenant Bower in pushing to cut the latter off, discovered Fiesha-kok on the left bank of the river, within a hundred yards of the advanced junk aground, which fort mounting seven guns, opened out a heavy fire of grape upon him; observing that the junks were abandoned by their crews, he nobly turned all his attention to his new opponents, whom he drove out of their strong hold, by passing through the adjoining town and taking them in reverse.

In the meantime Mr. Hall dexterously managed in getting his vessel through the centre passage of the stakes, which fortunately was just sufficiently wide to admit of her passing, without detaining or giving us the trouble of removing any of them.

At forty-five minutes past two we returned on board the steamer, after having destroyed all the guns and set fire to Feisha-Rok Fort and the seven war junks, as per margin,* which all blew up before we were out of sight of them.

Chase to the two escaped junks recommenced, during which we passed two dismantled forts. At four P.M. we arrived at the large provincial town of Hiangshan, one of the large war junks preceding us about a mile a-head. The dense population thickly crowded the banks, boats, junks, house-tops, the large pagoda, and surrounding hills; both sides of the river were packed by the trading craft of the country in the closest possible order, the centre of the river (which is very narrow here) having merely sufficient space to allow the steamer's paddle boxes to pass clear of the junks moored to its banks. Not the slightest fear was manifested by the people, but several mandarins took to their boats and followed the war junk. We passed a small one anchored in the centre of the town abandoned by her crew; but fearful of setting fire to the town, which must inevitably have been the case had I consigned her to the flames, and anxious at the same time to secure the larger one a-head, with the mandarin boats, I left her untouched; we closed the two latter so rapidly, that the junk, which mounted five guns, and one of the larger boats ran on shore; all their crews jumped overboard, and left them to their fate; I brought up abreast of them, and destroyed both. While thus employed the Fort of Sheungchep, within two hundred yards of us, but hidden by some intervening trees, opened its fire upon us, which was instantly returned. I immediately directed Lieutenant Bower to storm it with the marines; in five minutes my orders were carried into execution, and its eight guns were demolished; but from its proximity to the houses, I ordered the greatest portion of the powder to be thrown into the river, leaving merely sufficient in the magazine to destroy the fort. A number of troops coming down towards the fort, obliged me to fire two or three shot, which going directly in among the body, scattered and dispersed them in an instant. At six P.M. the junk and fort were fired, and we passed on into a narrow-shallow channel, scarcely more than the breadth of a canal, in which we anchored head and stern for the night.

At day light on the morning of the 14th, we weighed and proceeded up the river in the steamer's draught of water, and not broader than her own length, grounding occasionally on both sides.

At fifty minutes past seven, arrived at the large village of Konghow, at eight observed the fort of the same name, at the upper part of the village, which flanked a strong and broad line of stakes, twenty feet wide, completely across the river, filled up in the centre by large sunken junks, laden with stones. On discovering the fort we opened our fire, which was instantly returned by the enemy. As in all the preceding actions, they fled the moment we landed to attack them. They had evidently expected one from the opposite side to that by which we approached them, the walls being piled up with sandbags outside in that direction. Nine guns were destroyed here and the fort blown up. After the Nemesis had made good her passage through the stakes, which was effected after four hours incessant hard labour. At thirty minutes past twelve, P.M., assisted by the natives, who flocked aboard and round us in great numbers after the firing had ceased, all apparently anxious to aid us in destroying the stakes.

At four P.M. arrived off a military station originally consisting of a hundred men, but on our arrival consisting only of fifty; fired a shot at the Mandarin's house, which striking the centre, drove out the small garrison who had screened themselves from our view in it; the boats were then sent on shore, and destroyed the whole establishment, and a large Mandarin war-boat, mounting one long gun and two gingalls, and pulling sixty-four oars. At ten minutes past four proceeded up the river, at thirty minutes past six anchored for the night.

At day light this morning we continued our course upwards; at thirty minutes past seven arrived off the large village Tamchow, under the banks of the upper part of which a number of soldiers, with matchlocks, were descried, endeavouring to conceal themselves, upon whom a fire of musquetry was opened as we passed, which dispersed all those who were unhurt in less than a minute.

On moving up to Tsgnei, a large town on the left bank of the river, three forts were passed, all dismantled and abandoned. The custom-house of the latter place was destroyed, as well as a man-of-war junk, mounting seven guns, which the crew had quitted on our approach. On proceeding up to Whampoa, we passed through a very beautiful country; three more dismantled forts were observed in our route. At four P.M. we arrived at this anchorage, having destroyed five forts, one battery, two military stations, and nine men-of-war junks, in which were one hundred and fifteen guns, and eight gingalls; thus completing our object by proving to the enemy that the British flag is capable of being displayed throughout their inner waters whenever and whenever it is thought proper by us, against any defence or mode they may adopt to prevent it.

It is a pleasing gratification on my part, in being enabled to inform your Excellency, that this service has been accomplished without the loss of a single man on our side, and only three seamen slightly wounded belonging to Her Majesty's ship Samarang.

To his Excellency Captain Elliot, my warmest and best thanks are due, for the very able and friendly assistance I received from him throughout the whole of our little expedition; to Messrs. Morrison and Thoms, who accompanied him, I feel under the greatest obligations for the efficient aid I received from them, by the knowledge of these gentlemen in the Chinese language, thus affording me the means of communication through them with the natives in our route, which proved of the highest importance; they fully participated in all the dangers of the expedition, as did likewise Captain Larkins, late of the Honourable East India Company's service, who was an amateur upon the occasion.

Of Mr. Hall, master, commanding the Nemesis, it is impossible for me to speak too highly; the cool, unwearied, zealous performance of his duties, under circumstances of frequent danger and difficulty, in traversing a navigation never before passed by an European boat or vessel; his gallantry, and the effective aid I received from the Nemesis, repeatedly called forth my warmest admiration. It is unnecessary for me to say more than that, in my humble opinion, he is deserving of every reward that can be bestowed upon him.

To Lieutenant William Pedder, R. N., acting as chief officer of the Nemesis, I feel indebted for the able and gallant manner in which he at all times supported the boats, with those of the steamer under his command.

The firing of Mr. Edward Crouch, gunnery mate of the "Wellesley," lent to Nemesis, was perfect rifle practice. Our rapid success I regard as mainly attributable to the admirable manner in which he punished the enemy. I beg leave earnestly to recommend him to your favourable notice and consideration.

The conduct of my gallant First Lieutenant, J. P. Bower, has always met with my highest approbation. Nothing could have surpassed his anxious zeal and gallantry the last three days. It again becomes my pleasing duty, to draw your particular attention and favourable consideration to this meritorious officer.

Lieutenant Maitland, acting Lieutenant Lysaght, and Lieutenant Gordon, of the Royal Marines, as well as Messrs. Noble, Parkhurst, Luard, and Armitage (mates) Mr. Tucker, second master, and Dr. Mackay, assistant-surgeon, are entitled to my best acknowledgments for the gallantry and zeal they displayed throughout our operations.

Seamen and Marines vied with each other in being foremost upon every occasion.

Enclosed I forward herewith the list of wounded, and have the honour to remain, &c.
