“ The district is bounded on the east by the chapelry district of Saint James; on the north by the parishes of Cheshunt and Northaw; on the west and south by the remaining part of the parish of Enfield, from which it is separated by an imaginary line proceeding from a point in the common boundary of Enfield and Northaw parishes, one hundred yards westwards of the road from Cattle-gate to White Webb’s-lane; the boundary then proceeds, in a south easterly direction, at the said distance of one hundred yards from the south western side of the road from Cattle-gate, until it meets the course of a brook running from Potter’s-bar, along which brook it proceeds till it crosses the said road from Cattle-gate, and then, leaving the brook, takes the middle of the said road till it meets White Webb’s-lane, then turns up the middle of that lane, until it meets a brook, and then follows the course of the said brook, as far as the Flash, and, entering the New River, proceeds still south easterly along the same, as far as the bridge opposite Mr. Child’s house, then leaving the river, proceeds along the middle of Castle Hatch-lane, as far as the boundary of Saint James’s District, as shewn on the map hereunto annexed, and thereon coloured yellow :
