other debts then owing by the Society, and the then value of all other engagements to which the Society may then be liable, and such further account of claims which may have accrued but shall not then have been ascertained, as the Court of Directors shall consider necessary. In stating the credit side, the amount of capital then held by the Society shall be ascertained by taking the value of the funded property at such price as the Court of Directors shall think proper, and also the amount of capital invested on mortgage and other securities, together with the amount of debts then owing to the Society, the value of the Society's House, together with the balance of cash in hand; and the several amounts when so ascertained shall be placed on the credit side of the account. There shall then be computed, and be also placed on the credit side of the account, the present value of such part of the future premiums as the members will be required to pay in full, and the sum which will then be requisite on the credit side of the account to make the total of that side equal to the total of the debit side, shall be regarded as the then present value of the amount of reduced premiums to be thenceforth required of the members; such account to be deemed to be correct, although some error may be subsequently discovered therein.
