FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1855.

War-Department, February 2, 1855.

HIS Grace the Duke of Newcastle has received a Despatch, of which the following is a copy, addressed to His Grace by Field-Marshal the Lord Raglan, G.C.B.:

*Before Sevastopol,
January 15, 1855.*

MY LORD DUKE,

THE fall of snow has been very great for the last three days, and it is now fully a foot deep; which, I am assured, is a very unusual occurrence in this part of the Crimea.

This circumstance adds materially to our difficulties in obtaining fuel; but detachments of Turks are posted near the coast to bring up wood, which has been cut by parties of our own in the neighbourhood of the Monastery of St. George, to the nearest divisions.

I am happy to say that the number of wounded in the sortie of the Russians, on the night of the 12th instant, was only six instead of thirty-six, as I erroneously stated to your Grace in my Despatch of the 13th, and that it was altogether a less serious affair than was at first reported.

I inclose the return of casualties between the 12th and 14th, inclusive.

Last night the enemy attacked the French advanced trench in considerable force, but were repulsed after a sharp contest and some loss on both sides.

I have, &c.,
RAGLAN.

His Grace the Duke of Newcastle,
&c. &c. &c.
