FRIDAY, APRIL 20, 1855.

War-Department, April 20, 1855.

LORD PANMURE has this day received two Despatches and their Enclosures, of which the following are copies, addressed to His Lordship by Field-Marshal the Lord Raglan, G.C.B.

*Before Sevastopol,
April 3, 1855.*

My Lord,

I HAVE the honour to transmit to your Lordship a letter of this date, from Dr. Hall, enclosing a weekly return of the sick of the Army, up to the 31st ultimo.

Your Lordship will see, with satisfaction, that the general health of the Army continues steadily to improve.

I have also to submit to your Lordship, with reference to your despatch, No. 22, of the 26th February, the copy of a letter from the same officer, on the question of accommodation for wounded men, on the event of any sudden emergency occurring.

As the ships referred to by Dr. Hall are constantly on passage, and might all be so at the time they might be wanted for the wounded, I proposed to Sir Edmund Lyons to have some sailing vessels got ready for their reception, and accordingly, with his sanction, the following transports are under preparation;—Orient, Sir George Pollock, St. Hilder, William Jackson, and Poitiers;—and it is calculated that they will hold from 100 to 150 men each.

I have, &c.,
RAGLAN.

The Lord Panmure, &c. &c.

Enclosure 1.

*Before Sevastopol,
April 3, 1855.*

My Lord,

IN transmitting the weekly state of sick to the 31st March I have the honour to state, and I am sure it will be pleasing to your Lordship to learn, that the general health of the Army continues steadily to improve; and although fevers and bowel complaints continue to prevail, they are both assuming a milder character, and the latter are of much less frequent occurrence.

During the present week the admissions to strength have been in the ratio of 3.93 per cent., and the deaths to strength 0.38 per cent.

Last week, the admissions to strength were 4.35 per cent., and the deaths 0.52 per cent.;

which makes a decrease of 139 in the admissions, and 43 in the deaths during the week.

Fever continues to prevail in some particular regiments more than in others; but I am in hope change of locality will correct this.

The comforts of the men are greatly improved in every respect, and it is evinced by their cheerfulness, and more healthy appearance.

The rations are good and abundant, the men are well clothed, and due attention is paid to the sanitary condition of the different camps. The supply of water is ample at present, and means are being adopted to insure it in future, by constructing new tanks, cleaning out those that already exist, and digging fresh wells.

Indeed, so far as the physical wants of the men are concerned, I am of opinion the force is as well provided as any army can reasonably expect to be when employed on active service in the field.

The hospitals are on a respectable footing, not crowded, and amply provided with all that is necessary for the comfort and welfare of the sick; and if the casualties of war do not fill our hospitals, we may fairly look forward to have a diminished sick list in future.

But should the chances of war unfortunately produce wounded, I calculate we shall be able to accommodate 1400 on shore, and arrangements are being made for the reception of between 500 and 600 on board ship, which I sincerely trust will be more than sufficient for our wants.

I have, &c.

J. HALL,
Inspector-General of Hospitals,
To Field-Marshal Lord Raglan, G.C.B., Commanding-in-Chief.

Enclosure 2.

*Before Sevastopol,
March 23, 1855.*

SIR,

WITH reference to the question of accommodation for wounded men in the event of any sudden emergency arising, I have the honour to state, for the information of the Field-Marshal Commanding in Chief, that in addition to the accommodation which the regimental establishments of the divisions in front will afford—say from 250 to 300—I propose to occupy thirty of the new huts in rear of the 3rd Division, at present in possession of the 14th and 39th Regiments, which would afford comfortable accommodation for 480; and as these huts are built on dry, elevated, clean ground, with water not very distant, I calculate thirty more of the huts might be given over in case of any very great emergency, and the troops put under canvas, which would afford room for 480 more. At the Sanitarium at Balaklava, I calculate on accommodation for 200 wounded, in addition to the convalescents there at present, when the huts now in course of erection are completed.

From the crowded state of the general hospitals at Scutari, the length of time they have been occupied, and the amount of fever that has prevailed in them of late, I am most unwilling to send wounded men there if I can possibly avoid it; but should necessity compel us to resort to that measure, the Steamers are already fitted as hospital ships, and would be capable of transporting, with ease and comfort, 620 wounded.

The hospital establishments at Smyrna, Abydos, and Gallipoli, are full; and as typhoid fever is reported to have made its appearance in the hospital at Smyrna, it would not be desirable to send wounded men there during its continuance.

If compelled to form another hospital establishment out of the Crimea, I should suggest, from what I have heard, that Sinope be selected. I speak from hearsay, for I have never been there myself, but perhaps the Commander-in-Chief might be pleased to have it surveyed by some competent person, and a report made of its capabilities.

Our accommodation for wounded, taking minimum numbers, will, therefore, stand thus:—

(Signed) T. HALL,
Inspector-General of Hospitals.

To Major-General R. Airey,
Quartermaster-General.

My LORD,
Before Sevastopol,
April 7, 1855.

SOME interchange of troops has taken place since I addressed your Lordship on the 31st ultimo.

Battalions and considerable convoys have entered the town, and other bodies of troops have been seen to leave the north side. The garrison has been constantly engaged in adding to the works, and particularly in connecting the rifle pits in the immediate front of our right attack; and as we have pushed forward, the fire upon our advance has occasioned more loss, I deeply regret to say, than we have sustained since the sortie of the 23rd March.

Lieutenant Bainbrigge, of the Royal Engineers, was, I lament to have to add, killed on the morning of the 4th April, whilst in the execution of his duty, by the bursting of a shell.

He was a young officer of much promise, and though he had not long been here, he had acquired the esteem and good opinion of his brother officers, and his loss is greatly deplored by all.

I inclose the return of casualties to the 5th instant.

I have, &c.,
RAGLAN.

The Lord Pannure, &c. &c. &c.
