

lordship is aware that the Sardinian Army is partly embarked, and the remainder getting ready to leave the Crimea.

The English Army was formed at a short distance in front of these head quarters; the Siege Train and the Sappers on the right of the Infantry; 49 battalions in contiguous quarter distance columns of regiments; two troops of Horse Artillery and five batteries on the right of the line, six batteries and two heavy batteries on the left of the line,—in all 86 guns. Two regiments of the Land Transport Corps were complete and in good order in rear.

General Lüders rode down the line, accompanied by a large assembly of Russian, French, and Sardinian officers, and the troops also marched past him.

I have the satisfaction of assuring your Lordship of the steady, the good, the healthy appearance of the Army; of its very apparent efficiency in every branch; of the order, quietness, and regularity with which every regiment passed by; and it was a subject of pride to us all, to feel that such was the appearance of the Army of England in the Crimea.

General Lüders returned to Batschi Serai, having expressed himself much gratified at the attention shewn him by the Allies.

I have, &c.,

W. J. CODRINGTON,
General Commanding.
